Impressive Early-Morning Scene in One Community That Is Typical of Those Being Enacted in Others All Over the Republic Described by a Post-Dispatch Correspondent — The Hopes, the Appearance of the Fresh, Youthful U. S. Troops Arouses Whose Defenders Now Are Mostly Older Men.

By THOMAS MARVIN JOHNSON,

FIELD HEADQUARTERS, AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Sept. 7.

SOME soldiers marched through the streets of a small French town today. Soldiers are no new thing in that town, but these were the soldiers of three nations, and their passing was a symbol, just as the passing pageants of England hundreds of years ago were symbols.

It was early morning when the first soldiers passed. The mists were still hanging over the garden of the old mansion across the way when from down the street came a rattling, clinking sound; many hobnailed shoes on cobblestones and a murmur of voices. Around the corner they came, men in gray, blue, marching in column of fours, here and there the mustard colored khaki and red fez of a tirailleur. They were soldiers of France, on their way back to the front after a fortnight's leave.

They turned up the tree-shaded street that leads to the gray stone gare, the little railroad station whence so many such travelers do not return. Slowly but steadily they marched along, each man bent a little under his load of knapsack, bayonet, steel helmet, the big teakettle-like canteen and the two bulging haversacks that every French soldier carries. Their long rifles were slung easily over their shoulders by the leather straps and over their heads floated a cloud of light blue smoke from pipes and cigarettes.

They were not such soldiers as we have seen at home. Most of them were men in their 40s, with here and there the sleeve stripes that show wounds. Most of them had seen a year or two of fighting; a few had been in it since the beginning, but there are not many such left in France now.

No Public Grief

A few women and children and old men looked from doors and windows to see them pass, but none spoke. Soldiers leaving to go to the trenches are no new sight, and the farewells had been said at home. The French do not make scenes when their men go away. The weeping is done at home. These men simply walked down the street to the station and the train came in and they went away. They looked tired, perhaps, but they were very quiet, and they went away. After they had traveled a couple of hours they heard the faint booming of the guns. The booming grew louder and soon they were swallowed up in it. Perhaps some of them will come back some time. They will be glad to come back, for they are tired; but they will always march back to the little gare when the time comes.

The train had stopped, the men in faded blue got aboard, the whistle had squeaked as French engine whistles do squeak, the train had gone, when there came again the sound of marching men. It was a different sound; clump, clump, clump; not the dragging rattle and rasp of the hobnails. Soldiers were coming along the same street, but marching away from the gare into the town. They carried no haversacks, no canteens, no rifles. They did not talk as they marched, they did not smoke. They were in greenish gray, a colorless, dirty uniform, and on the breast of each was stamped in big black letters "P. G."—"prisoners de guerre."

The old men and women who had come to the door to watch the men in blue go away stayed to stare at the men in gray. A few of the children cried "Voila les boches!" and one of the old French territorials guarding them motioned the children back with the battered stick that was his only weapon. Silent, expressionless, looking almost stupidly indifferent, the men in gray turned the corner and disappeared, and the clump, clump, clump of their heavy boots grew fainter. There is a prisoners' camp just outside the town and Germans march through now and then.

All Look the Same

They all look the same, stolid, inscrutable—of late they have been a little older or a little younger men than used to come here. But they all have that stupid look—the townspeople agree that they are still too stupid, too stolid, and so the men in blue must keep on marching to the gare for a while.

There were no more soldiers, and the street became quiet again. It was still early morning. An old man in a blue blouse herded three dirty cows down the street on the way to pasture. In these villages one keeps the cows at home during the night and takes them out to the fields during the day. A woman came slowly from the gare pushing a wheelbarrow with two big mail sacks. It was a heavy load for a woman.

With shrill cries a boy urged along a horse dragging a wagon load of firewood. He wore a light blue cap such as his father wears when he is at home on leave, and all the other soldiers wear them, too. Otherwise it was quite quiet. French soldiers leaving and Germans arriving are not exciting.

They All Stare

But suddenly the old man forgot his cows, the woman dropped her wheelbarrow with a thud, unheeding that one of the mail sacks had burst open and the letters were spilling in the street; the boy pulled up his horse with a jerk. All stared in the same direction. Soldiers were marching down the street, coming from the gare. They must have been on the same train with the boches, but they marched so silently that one saw them before one heard them.

These soldiers wore khaki, but of a new color, and their hats—one never had seen such hats; of felt, with a pointed crown, like the hat the hotel keeper's daughter had just brought from Paris. And she had said it was a hat "comme Americaine," the newest mode in compliment to the new allies from across the ocean, who had just arrived.

The boy with the load of charcoal understood it first. "Voila, les Americains; les Americains!" he shouted, and the marching soldiers grinned and shouted back to him, "Hello, Francois!"

On down the street they came, these Americans, with that light, noiseless step. There were many of them, all with those strange hats, with rifles and bayonets, real soldiers. The whole street was filled with khaki, from the gare to the corner, where the other soldiers had turned. The sun came through the mist and shone on rifle barrels and bayonets.

They were all young men, with clean, honest looking faces, and they smiled and waved to the old men and women and children who crowded the narrow sidewalk. They pointed out to one another the faded old French flag and the new American one in the window of the Cafe of the Three Friends and smiled more broadly. Some of them cheered and said "Hur-ray!" which one knew meant "Vive!" so one shouted back "Vive l'Amerique!" and the men in khaki smiled again.

All Are Smiling.

All the people were out in the street now, smiling back and waving to the soldiers. If only they had known, they said, Monsieur le Maire should have been ready to make a little speech and there should have been more flags for the Americans. The men in khaki turned the corner still marching lightly with scarcely a sound, but turning to wave their hands and smile before they disappeared.

The town had not had such a day since one day in April when the postmaster put up a big paper on which one read that the Americans were going to join France and fight the boche, and now here were the Americans, just as they had promised. How young they were, and how they smiled. It was true then that they were to stay a little while? Yes, and then they, too, would march away to the gare with the light, noiseless tread of youth, with those smiling young faces, to fight the boche.

Then the boches would see. These Americans were so young and strong, and there were so many of them; millions, one heard. Soon the tired men in blue would come from the gare and would never have to go back again, and they could take the cows out in the morning and drive the wheelbarrows and carry the heavy loads of wood. And the boches perhaps even they would not be so stupid and stolid and there would be no more war—because the men in blue and the men in khaki would win, and it would be la victoire. So one smiled, too, like the Americans.

That is what the Americans brought to one little town. There are many such towns in France.

"Have No Fear, Rumania! Thy Children Will Free Thee"

Queen Marie Voices Exiles' Spirit

"Deeply hast thou drunk of thy children's blood; but they are ready that deeply thou shouldst drink again if, with the sacrifice of their lives, they can buy back thy freedom."

Queen Marie giving peasant soldier his dinner in a hospital. She says of the soldiers: "Uncomplaining heroes who more than any other have suffered."

QUEEN MARIE of Rumania, in this article, portrays the spirit of her people in exile. They were driven from their homes into strange lands by the invasion of Germans and in previous articles she has pictured the hardships, the griefs and now she looks to the day when they return.

Queen Marie was Princess Marie of Edinburg, when she was married to Prince Ferdinand in 1893 and she ascended to the throne since the war began. She is noted for her beauty and, always popular with her adopted people, she has still more endeared herself to them by her unselfish work with the Red Cross movement.

This article is the last of a series of five written by her as an appeal to her own people and to show to the outside world the character and spirit of her people.

BY THE QUEEN OF RUMANIA

SPRING is coming! The snow is melting, the air is full of sounds of life! Like a warm promise the sun smiles down upon those who long to hope. How is it possible not to hope when the grass is sprouting and the birds beginning to build their nests?

Like a hideous nightmare that on awakening we leave behind us with the darkness of night, this winter that had thrown its chains about us retreats ever further as we go forward into the growing light.

It is to me as though I saw many faces, with different expressions, all turned toward this resurrection of light. Tired faces, suffering faces, faces with eyes that have looked closely at death—but besides them there are also the faces of children and other faces—of those who can smile, of those who can hope and of those who can forget.

Even into the most hidden corner does the new light carry its message of hope. Out of dank, dark hovels miserable creatures crawl forth to stare with wonder at the sun, for so long had he forgotten to shine upon those whose sufferings can only be equaled by the patience with which those sufferings were borne. The mud and the filth of their surroundings become less sordid; I have seen ghostly faces lifted toward the skies as though some great joy were hiding behind the clouds. Even the beggar's outstretched hand seems to be extended rather toward the growing warmth than toward the scarce coin thrown him by those hurrying by.

But above all it is the faces of our soldiers that I seem to see; of those quiet, uncomplaining heroes who more than any other have suffered from the winter's snows.

Watching, Always Watching.

I see them at daybreak in their far off trenches, gazing at the sun that each morning rises a little earlier to announce to them that cold and frost and endless night will soon be a thing of the past. I saw their eyes, that have that special expression of those who are accustomed to watch, who are closely acquainted with danger, who have buried many a comrade and who have overcome every fear. Steady eyes, like the eyes of eagles accustomed to contemplate horizons a great way off.

What is he thinking of, that silent sentry leaning on his gun? Was he, perhaps, in happier days a shepherd faithfully guarding his flock? Or was he a peaceful laborer who at dusk returned to the children he loved? Has he a vision of his village where his cottage lies hidden beneath fruit trees just bursting into bud? Is it perchance in a far-off region which the enemy has overrun, and as he looks at the sun rising over the mountain is he wondering who has care of those he left unprotected?

Who feeds them. Who clothes them? Who dries their tears? Perhaps he has an old, old mother who each evening comes out to sit on her doorstep in the vague hope of seeing him come back. * * * Spring is coming! Who will till his field, sow his maize, feed his oxen? Who will tread the path leading to his home? Who will knock at his door? Spring is coming! The woods will soon be full of tiny blue flowers which his children will gather into bunches; but the flowers will wither, for the village is deserted, no one is passing that way.

Spring is coming! And still other faces do I see turned toward its growing light and the hope that it brings. These are also the faces of soldiers, but thin, emaciated, pale as death, the faces of those who have stood every hardship and who, after long weeks of illness, are slowly creeping back to life. These are the faces with which I am best acquainted, which I have hunted up in desolate corners where many dread to go, faces over which I have bent in place of the old, old mother who every evening on her doorstep patiently waits in vain. * * *

The Mother, Rumania.

With parched lips these lonely sufferers have spoken to me about their homes, about their children, about the wives they long to see. They have clung to my hands and kissed them; they have called me "mother," begging for tidings of their loved ones, begging for consolation, begging for hope * * * and I have endeavored to comfort them, feeling that my words had more meaning when the sun shone brightly without.

Over there is it also springtime! Over there in the regions we have lost. The sun will be shining, the birds will be singing as though no mighty Spirit of Death had passed over the earth!

Yet over there! In spite of sunshine and the calling of voices of spring, this year our Rumanian soil will have a tragic awakening—our blessed Rumanian soil! When the plow of the stranger will tear it asunder, forcing it to bring forth fruit for the hated foe, a cry of anguish will rise from its depth, a cry of protest, a cry of despair; and its banished children will hear it and understand its meaning! Their hearts will thrill with the holy desire to free it from bondage, to save it from the humiliation of having to give its riches to feed those who torture its women, starve its children, burn its villages and cast a shadow over its name!

Yes, indeed, blessed are thou, oh, Rumanian soil! Thy bounteousness has no limit. Like an all-loving mother dost thou give, and art always ready to give again; the smallest seed intrusted to thy bosom a hundredfold brings forth its fruit, and if thy weeds are nearly as plenteous as thy flowers, it is just because thy generosity is so great.

Have no fear, oh! soil of Rumania! Thy children will come and free thee from thy chains! It is the message of spring. They will not weaken, they will not tremble before the struggle that still has to be. Deeply hast thou drunk of their blood; but they are ready that deeply thou shouldst drink again if, with the sacrifice of their lives, they can buy back thy freedom and drive the enemy away from the land!

And if it were not to free the living that thy

CAMP FUNSTON

Geographical and Physical Facts About Largest of the Cantonments

How the Second City in Kansas Is Arising Under Uncle Sam's Magic Wand, Where Only Prairie Grass Grew a Few Weeks Ago—More Men Will Be Trained There Than Anywhere Else—What Has Been and What Remains to Be Done.

By CLAIR KENAMORE,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CAMP FUNSTON, Kan., Sept. 29.

CAMP FUNSTON may be accepted as a typical achievement of America at war. It is so big, so new, so raw and so fearfully in earnest. It is like a boom town thrown hurriedly together near a gold strike, but much bigger than any boom town ever was, and the uniformity of the buildings at once removes any impression of carelessness.

Many years ago the Government acquired 25,000 acres of land here and placed the army post thereon. This was known as Fort Riley. On one edge of the reserve is the confluence of the Smoky Hill Creek and the Republican River. Below the junction the steam is the Kansas River, better known as the Kaw.

Fort Riley was placed on the limestone hills, near the junction of the rivers, and the fine buildings, barracks, officers' quarters, stables and riding halls are built of the easily-worked, cream-colored limestone. A mile from Fort Riley is a monument marking the geographical center of the United States.

The Union Pacific Railway, on its transcontinental way, passes through the reservation, proceeding between the river and a long, steep, low ridge, which parallels it. The reservation has been used for many years as an assembling point for militia organizations, and for war games in which both the regulars and guardsmen took part. On more than one occasion a smart officer of the regulars has had the humiliation of being defeated, in the opinion of the umpire, by a militia officer.

Transformation of Ogden Flats.

These games spread over the whole reservation and pitched infantry battles usually took place on Pawnee Flats or Ogden Flats, which is a larger alluvial plain three miles below. The river is very near the railroad at the lower end of Pawnee Flats. Then it swings sharply out and is more than a mile distant from a stretch of four miles, where it again swings toward the tracks. Ogden Flats is the portion of land that lies between the river and the ridge.

Four months ago there was not a building on it. Now there are 2000, and the construction work will not be finished for two weeks.

For two months the payroll of the concern which is erecting the cantonment has exceeded $85,000 a day. Carpenters were paid 75 cents an hour, and other skilled laborers received about the same. Unskilled laborers got 37½ cents an hour at times, 15,000 men were employed.

These men, live at the camp, and in all the towns within 15 miles. The line of automobiles in which they came to work stretched for a mile along the road.

Four months ago the population of Ogden Flats consisted of rabbits and quail. Now 20,000 men live there and there will be 50,000 before snow flies. Major-General Leonard Wood is the leading citizen of Ogden Flats, or Camp Funston, as it is known now, and with him are a few Brigadier-Generals and Colonels, many Majors and Captains and an almost unbelievable profusion of Lieutenants. The bulk of the population is made up of the drafted men from the states of Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona and South Dakota, who are taking their first lessons to fit them for the ancient trade of war.

It is a pleasant enough view that one gets from Camp Funston, but doubtless each drafted man "know one fairer far." The low, rounded Kansas hills lie across the river, blue and misty in the late September haze. Fort Riley is set in what appears to be a thick wood, and there are patches of trees along the river.

The Commanding General's Cottage.

Half way up the slope of the ridge there has been built for the Commanding General a wide one-story cottage with screened porches all around it. This building is painted green, but every other one in the camp is the raw color of unpainted pine boards.

The endless rows of barracks buildings are made up of great two-story structures, which are to be the homes of the 50,000 men to be stationed here. The main structures are not divided into rooms. Each floor is the bedroom, living room and home of half a company. The officers quarters are divided into rooms, each of which is occupied by two men.

Each barracks has its bathhouse and its cookhouse and its dining room.

It has been said that a private soldier has but one privilege left, the right to grumble. This is invariably exercised to the fullest, and many of the new men complain bitterly of the food provided for them. This will pass away, for at Camp Funston, where there are shortages of clothing and equipment, there is plenty of good "chow." The bread and the meat come daily from Kansas City, and all the things that go to make up the meals are the best that the country produces. The boy who goes from a prosperous, comfortable home will have an abundance of wholesome food of a better quality than his brothers and sisters at home can buy. No "hard bread" is used. This variety, which attained an unpleasant fame in the Civil War, is for the field.

Second Largest City in Kansas.

By the last of October Camp Funston, recently a hay field, will be the largest city in Kansas with the exception of Kansas City. This adjunct to the Missouri city has 82,000 inhabitants at the last census, and Camp Funston and Fort Riley together may have as a large a population by the first of the year. The pay of the drafted men alone will exceed $1,500,000 a month, for this will be a city where every inhabitant is a wage-earner, and the men will all be between the ages of 21 and 31, all in the same line of business, and all with the same mission. In accordance with the wishes of the Commander and as a result of the work of the officers, they will be athletes, each to the extent of his powers, and each with his combative and competitive instinct developed to the extent of his temperament.

Fifty thousand men of that sort require a lot of handling. Sixteen theaters will offer amusement, and Y. M. C. A. buildings will extend their far-reaching hospitality, with desks, writing paper and a sign on the wall "Write to Mother Today."

The post exchanges, regimental or company, carry candy and similar delicacies. Popcorn and peanut wagons, each chartered by some company or regimental fund, offer their wares, and there will be boxing contests without number to divert the lonesome soldier.

On either side of the Government reservation are the towns of Junction City and Manhattan. An electric car line 24 miles long connects them. Camp Funston is on this line, seven miles from Junction City. Both these towns are in bad favor with the officers of the post and camp, because of the sharp manner in which they have advanced the prices of the articles which the soldiers wish to buy. As a result, it is possible that the men will be kept from these places and will find amusement in their camp.

Every soldier, despite the hard work he will do, has two and a half hours of his own every evening, and longer time on Saturdays and holidays. All other hours not devoted to sleep will be spent by each man in making himself a fit and sturdy soldier.

City of Diverse Activities.

Just now, Camp Funston is a scene of many diverse activities. Five thousand carpenters, at 75 cents an hour, are shooting up the frame buildings. Ditch-digging machines are cutting the way for sewers and water pipes; a gang of Mexicans is pushing a rock bed for an asphalt road through the length of the camp; in muddy streets and open places back of the buildings, Sergeants are teaching the new men the A B C of the drill; in groups about the camp, young officers are listening to lectures by older men on the art and science of war; and in other buildings older officers are listening with grave attention to French and English officers who have done their bits and won their ribbons and scars.

Just now the company and regimental streets are clogged with mud, due to a recent rain, but when they are dry, or after they have been surfaced, they will furnish quick passage ways to all portions of the camp. This is essential, as the flimsy nature of the structures make the fire danger a very real and present one.

In addition to a set of extremely strict rules, which is regarded as the greatest protection, there is a fine fire department, with auto trucks and uniformed men, waiting at the end of a fire alarm system.

Site to Be Guarded by Levee.

The site of the camp is sometimes submerged by a rise of the Kansas River. There is said to be no danger of such an inundation at this season of the year, but to be on the safe side, an 8-foot levee is to be put around the lower side of the camp immediately.

Because there is no great cantonment near at hand, St. Louis has not seen much of the movement of troops and the passage of soldiers. Four years ago, a man in khaki was a noticeable thing on any of our streets. Now one or a dozen excites no comment. But in Kansas City, or in the towns near the camps, the streets are taking on the aspect of a country at war. In railway stations and on trains, the majority of the men are soldiers, while as one nears the cantonment, the entire male population seems to be military. The smoking rooms are full of officers, old and new. Tales from the four corners of the world are related by the bronzed men for the men still only sunburned. Privates in the day coaches follow the lead of their officers in the Pullmans. The train "butchers" carry line of sundries intended to appeal to the soldiery. On side tracks are the empty trains, well labeled and lettered, which brought the drafted men to camp. Everything about this part of Kansas shouts that we are going to war.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE.

The Huns of Classic Lore.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Permit me to state once what and who a Hun is. The people called Huns appear in history in the fifth century of our era. Whence they came and whither they went is impossible to assert. The only description we have them is by Ammianus Marcellinus, a Roman historian, of the fourth century. He says:

> The Huns live beyond the sea of Azow, on the borders of the frozen ocean. In their earliest infancy deep incisions are made in the cheeks of their boys so that when the time comes for their beard to grow the sprouting hairs may be kept back by the furrowed scars, and therefore they grow beardless. They are of great size, but short-legged—that you might fancy them to be—two-legged beasts, or figures which hewn out rude with an ax at the end of bridges. They do, however, just bear the likeness of men (horrible and ugly they be), but they make no use of fire and live on raw horse meat and roots. The horse meat they merely soften a little by placing it betwen their own thighs and the bare backs of their horses. They do not live in houses and never enter one. They wear as cloth the skin of field mice sewn together. When once such a garment is put on, it is never changed till from long decay it falls to pieces. They are always on their horses; on horseback they buy and sell, eat and drink or fight and even sleep. On horseback too they discuss and deliberate. They fight irregular but terrific wars and avoid fortified places and entrenchments. No one ever plow or touches a tool of agriculture. They are treacherous and inconstant and like brute beasts ignorant of the distinction between right and wrong. They have great difficulty to express themselves, have no respect for religion, crave gold and are so fickle that each one fights several times a day to reconcile himself with his happiness. Their principal ornament is lard from horses which they smear heavily over their hair.

A bardensinger (the newspaper of those days) says about the Huns: "Ugly is their face and uglier their body. Children won't take the breast of their mothers any more as blood breaks out of them. Misformed and full of sores their children are born.

Under such conditions it is not exactly pleasant to be called a Hun

"Inner St. Louis."

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Your article on "Inner St. Louis" is very deserving of comment, as it is really high time that the clergy came to their senses and realize their own shortcomings. In my section of town there are very few church edifices and most religious work is street work, receiving little or no encouragement from the clergy, much less the passerby. It is easy for one who knows to realize and marvel at the growth of Socialism and such doctrines in these sections. If parishioners, especially employers, would look more to their employes' welfare there is little doubt but that the community would be far better off, both socially and spiritually.

SIXTH WARD.

From a Soldier's Wife.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I was very glad to see in Friday's Post-Dispatch a letter from Mr. Thornton Smalley in behalf of the wives of drafted men. My husband has been called away and I, too, am proud that he was physically fit and able to go, and even though he could have claimed exemption. I have looked many times for one word to cheer the wives who were left behind, but I have never seen it. I am glad to know there is another couple who felt as we did. Let's hear from more of the wives.

Street Indicators for Cars.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I noticed recently several letters in your columns, in which people suggested that street car conductors call out street names. Why not be up to date, and have street indicators at front end of cars over front door that indicate each street as car approaches street? That would show all passengers just where they are, and show strangers where they are. Such a device could be installed at low cost and operated by the motorman without interference with his work. Several such devices are available, operated by a cord, like a gong cord. Deaf people can't hear conductors call streets, and besides, they usually call out unintelligible names that nobody can understand. If the city becomes a partner in the street car company, an ordinance should be passed to compel indicators to be put in.

R. W. BORCHERT.

THE TRAITOR IN HIGH PLACE.

Col. Roosevelt is matching his splendid service in preaching preparedness by his message of patriotism which he is delivering throughout the country.

There is no question of the Colonel's Americanism. It is sound. It rings true at every point. If he inclines to an extreme of fervor which leads him into strong expressions of his views it is prompted by sincere enthusiasm and devotion to his country.

One of the best features of his work is his exposure and denunciation of citizens of the United States, particularly in public life, who are betraying the country and giving aid and comfort to the enemy. In nailing their treasonable utterances and conduct and branding them as traitors, Col. Roosevelt is doing a courageous and necessary work.

The most conspicuous example of the traitor in high place is Senator La Follette who is adding to his congressional labors in behalf of Germany public speeches which more befit a junker member of the Reichstag than a member of the American Congress. He opposed war measures in Congress and is justifying Germany and condemning the United States on the public platform. The Senator excuses Germany's unscrupulous attacks on American rights, her assaults on the sovereignty and safety of the republic and her ruthless murder of Americans. He condemns America's entrance into the war and thus denies the justice of our cause and the soundness of the policy which led us to warfare and makes it imperative that we win the war.

Work of this kind is to be condemned in the humblest citizen, but when it is done by a United States Senator who is presumed to represent American sentiment, it is a blow at the country's vitals.

Criticism of the conduct of the war and of acts of public officials, from the standpoint of honesty or efficiency are legitimate, but when the country is at war and the issues have been made by the Government, Americans, especially public men in positions of trust and honor, who justify the enemy and condemn their country's causes are guilty of betrayal. Whether they share the spoils or not they are serving the enemy and promoting the propaganda for which Germany has expended millions in North and South America.

Senator La Follette and his senatorial kind disgrace the Senate, shame the peoples of their states and menace their country. They should, at least be retired to private life where the harm they attempt is minimized.

A FIGHTERS' MORATORIUM BILL.

Multitudinous needs have been provided for in the vast amount of legislation enacted by the present Congress. Even the financial needs of the entente Governments have been met on a scale of unprecedented generosity. It is not until nearly six months after the declaration of war that any move has been made toward protecting our soldiers in the financial obligation contracted while they were yet civilians.

Snatched with little warning from the activities and ambitions of civil life, how is the recruit on $30 a month to keep up the payments for the land he has bought on contracts, the interest and installments on his mortgage? How is he going to meet his taxes and the premiums on policies for fire and life insurance?

Bills introduced into both houses of Congress establish a "moratorium" for our fighters. No property may be sold for nonpayment of taxes, no land contract or insurance policy forfeited or mortgage foreclosed, to the detriment of a soldier during the period of his service. No family of a soldier may be evicted for nonpayment of rent during that period nor can the statute of limitations run against any rights a soldier may have in money due or other things during that period.

The bill should be passed with all expedition and should be of such scope as to protect any interest that may already have been in jeopardy of soldiers who enlisted months ago. A bill of this kind was included in the first of the important war legislation enacted by the European countries. It is not a ground for pride that it will be among the last of the distinctive war measures of this country.

EXEMPTION FOR PUBLIC SERVICE.

The Federal Board of Farm Organizations, representing several powerful groups of agriculturists, have petitioned President Wilson to broaden the exemption rules so as to keep skilled farmers and farm hands out of the military service in order that they may do their full duty to the country as food producers.

President Wilson has said that he would like to see all the genuine farmers left at their indispensable labors. In his last utterance on the subject he called attention to the fact that Gen. Crowder has "ingeniously arranged the details of calling to the colors so that the men on the farms will practically all fall within the last group and will, therefore, not have to report for military service until on or about Oct. 1."

What the farmers want, of course, is complete exemption. It is pointed out that next year's crops must be cared for, and that it will be impossible to maintain food production if the farms are to be depleted of skilled and experienced labor.

The Post-Dispatch believes that it would be unwise to permit the farms to be undermanned. A shortage in men will mean a falling off in food production.

On the other hand, if the farmers expect exemption, as a class, on the ground that food production is a patriotic service, they must show that they intend to give that service in a patriotic spirit, recognizing their duty to the nation.

Of course they cannot be expected to work for nothing. They are entitled to a reasonable profit, as other workers are. But the example set by the milk producers of Southern Illinois and Missouri, who have supplied most of the milk used in St. Louis, is so unpatriotic and so disregardful of the public interest, that it should be condemned by all farmers who hope to be treated as entitled to exemption, for themselves and their help, on the ground of rendering public service.

The war has emphasized the fact that food production and distribution is one of the most important and vital of public services. The men who have the privilege of using the land and producing, distributing or in any way controlling the people's food, are not the men to show a greedy, unpatriotic spirit at this time. Showing such a spirit, they need look for no Government favor. Exemption can only be granted for real public service.

Lest anyone should think that the decrease in the number of submarine sinkings is due to the fact that fewer ships are afloat, it is worth while to note that more bottoms entered and departed from British ports this week than during the same period last year.

DEPLORABLE POLICE BOARD EXHIBIT.

The only commendable feature of the lamentable Police Board meeting at which the majority faction took reprisals on the minority faction was that it was held in public. Of the motives displayed and of the several commissioners' conception the city is enabled to judge with a full knowledge of the facts.

It may be that other Police Boards have acted with a similar pettiness and a similar disposition to force a triumph of purely personal differences over the best interests of the department. But if so, the controlling spirit in which administrative details were dictated was not thrust quite as pointedly on the public view.

One commissioner was demoted from the office of vice president of the board. Two departmental appointees in whom the minority faction was supposed to have a distinctive interest were dismissed. The changes even went so far as to include a shakeup in the force. Four captains said to enjoy the special confidence of the minority faction were shifted from the police districts to which they have lately been assigned.

And to what cause are these changes attributed, all voted with a deplorable exhibit of feeling?

The starting point was the submission by two commissioners of bills for traveling expenses, one for $52.04 and the other $72.92. Both the commissioners who, despite objections in the board itself and criticism from the public, insisted on the payment of these claims are wealthy!

What an object lesson to the city and especially to the force on moving influences at the very fountain head from which police judgments and disciplinary measures flow!

St. Louis could have afforded to pay several times the $124.96 total of the two bills rather than have such an exhibition. But so much dissension having its origin in the two bills, their justice becomes a matter of magnified importance. They were incurred by the two commissioners in coming from temporary out-of-town stopping places to St. Louis to attend a board meeting. They offend the common rule denying travel expenses to public officials who reside at the place where they perform their duties. If Messrs. Fouke and Mansur had charged up to the city a dozen such bills, or 20 or 40, would anyone deny that they ought not to be paid?

Is a valid protest against an unwarranted charge on the public to be penalized because the amount is small?

FARM LOAN ACTIVITIES.

An intimation that the British financiers are going to recall their loans on American farm land has attracted renewed attention to the activities of the farm loan banks in the South and Southwest, where most of the British money is lent. It is estimated that more than $100,000,000 is included in the amounts to be recalled. Southern Congressman have conferred with Secretary McAdoo about these loans and he has told them that the farmers will be protected, either by persuading the British capitalists to leave their money in this country; by transferring the loans to the farm loan banks, or by a special loan fund from the Treasury Department until different arrangement can be made. It is significant that Mr. McAdoo considers the farm loan banks in this connection.

The prospect of $100,000,000 of business seems a very large order for as new an institution as the farm loan banks. The Sept. 1 report of these banks indicate that this total would not dismay them. At that time the banks reported that 1200 local farm loan associations had been completed and 4000 were in formation. The completed associations averaged applications for $50,000 loans each. The associations being formed indicated loans amounting to $200,000,000.

At the end of August the farm loan banks had in force $7,716,799 in loans. During August applications were made for $23,988,650 and almost $20,000,000 of loans were approved.

Kansas, from which the first completed loan was reported, has more loans in force than any other state, the total being $1,761,300. During August Kansas asked for $1,247,450. Oklahoma, which also belongs to District No. 9, asked in August for $1,307,635. Montana was the leading State in August applications, the total being $1,922,624. Arkansas, which banks through the St. Louis bank, was slow getting started, but during August filed applications for $1,488,030. The Kansas-Oklahoma-Colorado-New Mexico district has the largest total of placed loans, the figures being $2,626,600. Virginia, with $349,500 loans completed and $491,405 asked in August, is far ahead of any other Eastern state.

Von Tirpitz continues to harp on the necessity of the German people retaining their "nerve." Judging from the Prussian proposal regarding the disposition of Belgium, there is a superabundance of nerve in the Wilhelmstrasse.

AN OLD WINDOW BLIND.

The brilliant moon, that limns each broken line,
Formed by the cracks which use in time reveals,
Opens the door of fantasy divine,
Tells the quaint lore, its mazy web conceals.

I see the hills of ancient Palestine,
The Scripture legends; Judas' greed for dross,
Munkacsy's visions, Jew and Phillistine,
The Nazarene, the Stations of the Cross.

I see a mighty mountain, down whose crags,
A crystal torrent pours unto a plain,
Urged on by drums to conquer new domain.

And Allah's garden; playground of the gods;
And desert sands, where the tired ostrich nods,
Bearing its burden far from Allah's gates.

I look again; a scene of splendor shows,
It is the Coronation of a Czar;
A Cardinal, scepter and a Star.

A Royal funeral; white-robed choir boys sing.
Bishops and Priests, soldiers in red and gold,
Pay reverence to the cortege of a King.

Again the scene is changed, a new view born,
I see the shimmer of the river Nile;
The tropic foliage, the fields of corn,
Growing in rich abundance, mile on mile.

And then a modern city fills my screen,
Less beautiful than those the moon creates
Upon the fissured window blind, had been;
No old time Yule-tide fires; Just gas log grates.

The silver moon that lights the sailor's way,
Has shone for ages; leaving them behind.
Will shine for ages more; so while we may,

CROSSING THE MISSOURI.

Dear Sir: I read with much interest your comment upon the auto congestion at the St. Charles ferry. Have you noticed that this congestion is increasing each day? The private bridge when rebuilt will in a few years be unable to handle the traffic at St. Charles. No point in the State on the Missouri river is crossed by as many autos as here. Would it not be a splendid idea to have the State build a memorial free bridge for its centennial, connecting a free highway over the Missouri River with the Old Trails—Boonslick, Red Bale and Santa Fe Trails road? It would be a great benefit to the entire State. I advocated this last November at Kansas City, but St. Louis and St. Charles seem too slow about taking up the proposition. You probably know that as a grandson of a member of the First Territorial and First State Convention and State Legislature (1813 to 1836) I am interested...

THE FUTURE OF JEFFERSON CITY.

Few of us have seen the new State capitol at Jefferson City, and it is not therefore possible for many of us to realize the extent to which this beautiful structure is going to influence the future of Jefferson City itself. Those old Missourians who located the State capital at that point were not blind to its possibilities. Jefferson City sits on a hill, and crowning that hill is the great gray dome of the capitol, visible from all the country around. Maybe there are other domes as soft and lovely as that which Mr. Swarthout has given Missouri, but they don't impinge themselves on the sky with any great frequency. Judge Arthur M. Hough of Jefferson City has just set the community an example by giving it 50 acres near the capitol for a city park. What we shall all wake up to find at Jefferson City some of these fine mornings is one of the finest of the capital communities, all done in loveliness and art, and set there for the gratification of men forever and ever. Is that worth while? We say it is.

O THOSE NERVES!

ANXIOUS—Treatment for nervous persons depends upon the person; capable physian should study patient. Take your mind off yourself; think of something else. Entirely unprejudiced is the editor of the Allgemeine Fleischer-Zeitung, a journal for butchers. He advises butchers who suffer from headaches, nervousness or stomach troubles to give up meat and adopt a vegetarian diet. This advice has been given a nervous person: Discontinue the use of tea and coffee; begin taking from 4 to 8 fresh eggs daily, lightly beaten into a quart of milk. Take half in the morning and the rest at night; or, better still, divide into three doses and take shortly after each meal, preparing each dose fresh when it is to be taken. Best rest is sleeping in pure air. Anatole France, who fled from the noise of Paris, has set forth his notion of quiet enjoyment. "Of all tasks open to mankind, the task of knocking nails in a wall is probably the most conducive to tranquil enjoyment." There have been many attempts at soporific industry—the little mechanical activity which takes the brain from the usual occupation. Knitting is, perhaps, the best. Arctic explorers have averred that knitting gets one through an Arctic night very well. British athletes, in the nervous hours before the great university boat race, are frequently set to knitting in order to calm their nerves. One writer says: I have little faith in drugs as a cure for nervousness. Plenty of gentle exercise in the fresh air, nourishing food, obedience to the natural law which ordains sleep as a duty, hot baths before bedtime and a resolute determination to take life as God gives it to us—a day at a time—are worth all the medicines ever compounded. And while speaking of diet, let the patient eat freely of celery and a decoction of the same at night after getting into bed. It has marvelous power as a nervine and is absolutely harmless. Massage is likewise a prime agent in soothing racked nerves. Gentle massage followed by an "alcohol rub" administered by a skillful masseur will woo sleep successfully when drugs fail. (A book store could get for you Courtney's "Conquest of the Nerves.")

THE TERRIBLE GORILLA.

R. I. G.—It is said that a full-grown gorilla has never yet been captured alive; certainly no sane man would attempt such a feat. The few gorillas that are occasionally seen in captivity are the victims of infantile indiscretion or are common baboons. Gorillas fear nothing, which makes them terrible foes, and even when mortally wounded their ferocity, quickness and strength are astonishing. When a wild beast trapper meets a gorilla, the market value of the beast may occur to his mind, but it does not tempt him to try to make a capture; he exerts all his coolness and daring to mark a vital spot in the beast's huge frame, and while the brute swings rapidly forward to attack him, he shoots it dead. If his aim is bad, the probability is that a human skeleton will mark the place where the encounter took place. Gorillas are vegetarians, though they are none the less dangerous on that account. Few beasts have an uglier disposition. Their habit of advancing upon their foes roaring and beating upon their hairy chests with reverberation like a drum is well known, but the story of their hiding in tree tops until some unwary native passes beneath, when, lowering a dreadful hind leg and clutching him around the neck with sinewy finger-like toes, they draw him up to be devoured, is a little overdrawn. The World had this in August, 1915: Dinah, of the Bronx Zoo, the only gorilla in this country, is no more. She died Sunday. Exactly what caused her end cannot be said. Possibly it was loneliness—longing for a companion of her species. Besides, she never did seem able to thrive upon the food she got in this country. Certainly she was not sad over captivity, for Dinah was scarcely a captive. She was more of a pet, almost like a child, to the keepers. For the last six months Dinah had been failing. In the past weeks she grew rapidly worse. Her particular keeper, Fred Engleholme, tried his best to save her. He got a baby carriage, and in this he would wheel her daily for miles, so that she might get the air. Frequently he would take her to the Rocking Stone Restaurant in the zoo grounds, seat her at the table and buy her ice cream and milk. She appreciated them deeply, but they did not have any beneficial effect upon her health. Sunday morning she stretched out on the soft floor of her cage, gazed fondly upon Engleholme, and died.

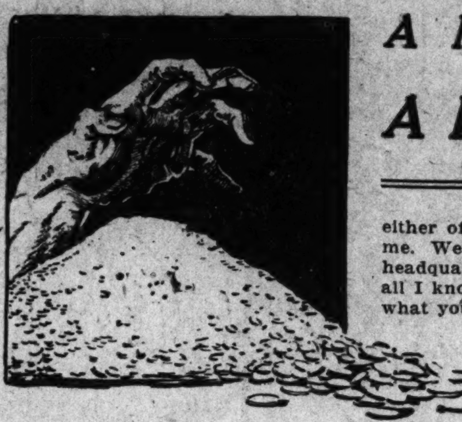
SYBILA—This is the nonsense about luck in month colors: Girl born in January should wear green. February girl may choose all shades of pink. Purple is for March girl. She will feel most comfortable and cheerful with purple things about her. April daughter can wear red, and especially rose red. Special color for May is blue, and the girl born in this month should choose jewelry and clothes of light tints of blue. She is supposed to be sensitive. Bronze green is for June girl, which is apt to make her a little melancholy. Light red is color for July and deep blue for girl born in August. Yellow is for girl born in September. If born in October you will take greatest comfort in wearing brown, while if November is your month you may choose a light gray. Instead of the gay holiday colors the girl who is born in December should choose mauve. (For New Thought try Public Library.)

A. B. B. A.—(Supplemental.) In 1903 this was published: "Henceforth there will be no 'Lieutenant-General commanding.' With Gen. Miles will disappear this high-sounding title and all it mischievous and illusory suggestions. The real command will remain undisturbed, of course, where it has always resided—in the President of the United States. The fictitious command with its absurd pantomime and dreary pretense, will be extinguished finally. It has always been a source of friction and embarrassment—this Barmecide feast of authority—never an element of dignity or concord. Sherman frankly refused to sit at a table furnished forth with mockery, and Schofield refrained from following his example only because the War Secretary of that day, Daniel S. Lamont, had serious need of his military knowledge and experience, and found in him a coadjutor with whom he could dwell and work harmoniously. In itself, however, the office has been a mere figure of speech, and its authority the airy fabric of the individual's imagination. Peace to its beautiful and useless ashes! The nation is well rid of it." But in 1906 John C. Bates and Adna R. Chaffee were retired as lieutenant-generals. There is now no officer with the title in active service.

RANSOM!



A New Mystery Novel by the Author of "Loot,"

ARTHUR SOMERS ROCHE

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING INSTALLMENTS.

PHILIP WARING, before he left Paris, had rescued a young lady who said she was "Peter Randall's niece," from an Apache in a cabaret. He had also received news that Carey Haig, the broker in charge of his investments, was a defaulter and suicide in New York. Returning home, Waring finds that $1,450,000 of his vanished fortune was paid over by Haig to one Simon Bergson, whom nobody knew. The Paris Apache, Raoul Carvajal, followed Waring across the ocean, presumably seeking revenge; but he was killed by a motor car, and Waring found on him a letter signed "P. R.", introducing the Frenchman to Simon Bergson as a prospective member of "the Society," and incidentally mentioning the name of Burton Conybear, the wealthiest man in the country.

Meanwhile, Conybear, betrayed by his valet, Henderson, has been kidnaped by "the Society" which demands heavy toll of his millions. Waring, impersonating Carvajal, accompanied Conybear to a bank where the financier was forced to draw $25,000.

Herkomer, Commissioner of Police, received a note picked up by a half-witted fellow just outside Conybear's estate and signed by the financier, stating that he had been kidnaped, but concluded that the note was a hoax.

Waring gained Bergson's permission to go out and buy some clothing. His first impulse was to telephone the police, but he wished to avoid publicity and so called up Conybear's house. Henderson, aware that Waring was betraying "the Society" sent him to another rendezvous of the organization.

Waring unsuspiciously proceeded thither. The door was opened for him by the girl of the Paris cafe.

CHAPTER VII.

HERKOMER played a masse shot very creditably and proceeded to run out his string. Flushed with victory, he led his companion to the grill of the Patron's Club and ordered two cocktails. But his friend was not dining at the club and so gulped his drink, leaving the Police Commissioner to sip his Tripoli more leisurely.

Thus it happened that, with no companion to engage his ears, Herkomer overheard the talk at the next table. It was not his intention to listen, but Malcolm, the youthful president of the Seventy-third National Bank, didn't seem to care who heard him.

"It's enough to make anyone turn Socialist," he was telling the man with him, a broker named Boyd. "The men who created the Amalgamated General, who control it now, performed, and are performing, a public service. But public service should mean public trust. When it comes to taking your trust so lightly that you can't bother to attend a directors' meeting, and thereby almost precipitate a panic—it's wrong. I told old Conybear so, today."

"You have your nerve," chuckled the broker. "What did he say?"

"Told me to go to grass. He was in my bank to cash a check—with young Phil Waring. Twenty-five thousand dollars. I sort of got the idea the money was for Waring. Don't know why, except that I supposed Waring lost his money in the Carey Haig crash and has been living in a fairly expensive fashion—man servant and all that sort of thing, ever since. And you can't do that on nothing a year. But if he's borrowing—well, I didn't even know that he knew old man Conybear. However, it doesn't concern me. I may be wrong, anyway."

The banker finished the drink before him and rose to leave. Herkomer rose, too. At the door of the grill he tapped Malcolm on the shoulder. The young banker turned with a smile.

"Well, Commissioner, what can I do for you?"

"I overheard you talking with Boyd," said Herkomer. "I didn't mean to listen exactly, but"——

"Any time I say anything in a grill that I wouldn't say in my bank or anywhere else, I'll be a different man, Herkomer," grinned Malcolm. "Well, you heard me roasting old Conybear. What about it?"

"Nothing much," answered the Commissioner. "Only you know his signature, of course. Is this his?"

He showed Malcolm the signature of the note that Peter Perkins had brought from Long Island yesterday and which Herkomer had since carried. Sensitive to ridicule and not wishing to appear easily hoaxed, he folded the waterproofed paper on which the message was written, so that only the signature showed.

Malcolm scrutinized it carefully.

"Well," he smiled, "if this is a note, I'll discount it for you the moment the bank opens in the morning."

"It's genuine, then?"

"Absolutely," said the banker.

"Much obliged," said Herkomer.

Herkomer stared at the folded paper in his hand. Conybear's signature! So Malcolm affirmed, and Malcolm, in addition to his financial accomplishments, had invented and caused to be adopted in many banks besides his own a system of verifying signatures that had been very successful. He was by way of being a handwriting expert, and if he said that this was the signature of Burton Conybear, then Burton Conybear's signature it was!

Herkomer walked to the club dining room and ordered dinner. He ate mechanically, his mind perplexed. Why should old Conybear have written such a note? The old financier was not in the habit of playing practical jokes, Herkomer knew.

He signed his check and rose from his chair. As he did so, a boy came to his table.

"You're wanted on the telephone, Mr. Herkomer," he said.

"This you, Commissioner? This is Kelcey talkin'. Say, you know that note you got this afternoon?"

"Certainly. What about it?"

"Eh? What do you mean?"

"H. Hathway Symons—you know, president of the Almagamated General—has been down here lookin' for you. He's in a terrible stew. The Burnhams have been workin' for him since morning and ain't found out a blasted thing, so"——

"What's happened?" roared Herkomer.

"Clurg, Prendergast, Larned and Mikells—the four biggest guys in Amalgamated except old Conybear—they're missin'! And Symons can't get hold of Conybear—out of town, they tell him at his Portsmouth place. And at his office they say the same thing. And Symons is in a terrible state; he"——

"What's happened?" demanded the Commissioner again. "Words of one syllable, Sergeant, and take your time."

He could hear Kelcey, down at headquarters, gulp. Then, in the colorless voice in which policemen make reports to their superiors, Kelcey spoke.

"Them four I just mentioned, Commissioner. They, with Conybear, are the real bosses of Amalgamated General. The other directors are dummies. Nothin' is done unless one of them is present. Well, today was the big day with Amalgamated—dividend day and all that. Well, when none of them four showed up, Symons supposes it's just a coincidence. Clurg thinks Mikells will be there and Mikells things Larned will be there and Larned thinks Prendergast—— Well, the dividend couldn't be passed without ONE of them bein' present, so Symons telephones Larned. He learns Larned left his house at 10 after phonin' his office he wouldn't be there till noon. Had to attend Amalgamated General's directors' meetin', he said.

"Symons don't think much of that; he just tried to get hold of Mikells. And he learns that Mikells had told his wife he couldn't take her to a morning musicale uptown because he was late gettin' started for the directors' meetin'. And Mikells don't show up at HIS office, either. Same thing with Clurg and Prendergast; both of 'em said at home this morning or at their offices last night that they was goin' to take in the meetin', and neither of 'em can be located by Symons. Then he phones Conybear's office and the old boy ain't there and out at Portsmouth they tell him that Conybear's out of town for a few days.

"Well, there's nothin' for Symons to do but to tell his bunch of dummies to postpone the meetin' a week, which they do. Symons wouldn't dare do nothin' with none of the big guys present. And Symons ain't really rattled then. But along toward afternoon, when Larned's chauffeur arrives home with a headache and a tale of bein' took sick at breakfast and says he ain't driven the car today at all; well Symons gets nervous, especially as not a word has come from any of them four what left home headed for the meetin'.

"And Symons rushes over to the Burnhams. Here's what they've got so far: Somebody impersonated Larned's chauffeur. Must have been clever, too, because evidently Larned didn't suspect him, and when he turned the car in at the garage later—sure, he did that—no one noticed him particularly. No trace of him.

"Prendergast took a taxi. One of his servants says he phoned the Occidental Taxi Co. If he did, the Occidental ain't got no record of the call. No trace of the taxi that took Prendergast away.

"Mikells hadn't got a block in his car when the front wheel rolled off. A limousine followin' stopped; the owner called Mikells by name and offered to take him downtown. That's the last seen of Mikells. Mikells' chauffeur says it was a big blue limousine car. The Burnhams have combed the city for a car like that and have found a hundred, but they all got alibis straight enough.

"Well, Symons is frightened to death that the newspapers will get hold of it all, but he's twice as frightened at the idea that somethin' phoney has happened to the four of 'em. And that last fear drove him to us. He feels that a private agency, no matter how good it is, ain't the thing to handle this. Well, what's the orders, Commissioner?"

"Detail half a dozen men to look up Philip Waring. Know him? Club man, amateur explorer, big-game hunter"——

"I got you," said Kelcey. "Shall they bring him in?"

"If they find him. Has an apartment somewhere"——

"I know," said Kelcey. "He was in the Era last Sunday—that yarn about society bachelors of New York. Picture, too. And address."

"Send someone over to the Era office for a photo of him, then. Make some excuse so they won't suspect anything. Have copies made up at once."

"Anything else?"

"Phone Conybear's Portsmouth place. Get his private secretary—Henderson's his name; tell him that Conybear was seen in the Seventy-third National Bank today cashing a check with Philip Waring. Ask Henderson if he knows anything of Conybear's relations with Waring. Attend to that now."

"Yes, sir. And you?"

"I'm coming right downtown."

CHAPTER VIII.

"COME in," said the girl softly. She cast a frightened glance over her shoulder toward the telephone, giving its insistent call.

Waring hesitated on the threshold. Somehow that backward glance of hers galvanized all his dormant suspicion.

Henderson had been too cool. In the excitement of the moment of his speaking with Conybear's secretary, he had been glad that Henderson was self-possessed; in the enormity of the crime it had not seemed too absurd that preparations against the crime's commission should have been of apparent magnitude; in his hurry to get to Camp avenue he had been too occupied with his errand to reason calmly about the plausibility of Henderson's words.

But one thing stuck out: Henderson had stated that there was no telephone at No. 88 Camp avenue, that there had not been time to install one. That was false. It might be the falsehood of ignorance, but—Waring did not think so.

Henderson, then, had uttered a knowing falsehood about the telephone. Why? There was the rub. Although his nerves tingled with suspicion, Waring did not know where those suspicions pointed. And now the girl spoke again.

"Please," she said.

She was not the merry-eyed convent-girl-on-a-lark that he had driven to a Paris hotel one night last winter. Nor was she the frightened-eyed girl whom Carvajal the dancer had accosted. In her eyes then, as now, had been fear, but it was a disdainful, prideful fear—the fear of something unclean touching her.

Waring no longer hesitated; though every instinct warned him to back down the steps, he crossed the threshold. As he did so a voice called from the floor above—a masculine voice:

"Have you answered the door, Claire?"

The girl pointed toward an open door. She put her finger on Waring's lips. Waring tiptoed into a large room. But he stood by the door.

"I heard the doorbell, too."

Waring watched the girl. He saw her open the door, not quietly, as she had done when he rang, but noisily.

"There is no one here; it must have been the phone," she called.

"Well, answer it, then," snapped the voice upstairs.

It was not a request; it was a surly command. Waring trusted that he would meet the speaker soon.

"I was just going to," she replied.

She walked swiftly down the hall and lifted the receiver to her ear.

"Yes," she said. "Yes. * * * All right."

She hung up the receiver and came down the hall. Her face was white.

"It was a mistake; someone got the wrong number."

'Oh," grunted the voice upstairs. "Stay down there where you can answer it if it rings again."

Again Waring resented the quality of command in the voice, again hoped that he would meet the speaker soon. But the girl answered calmly that she would. Then, humming, she entered the room where Waring stood. She crossed to the middle of the room; Waring followed her. Her humming ceased.

"Go," she said, "quickly! Mr. Henderson just telephoned. It's the second time. His car's broken down and he is going to take the train at Rollansville. He said that you knew—that he'd tricked you into coming here—that's why I was waiting at the door—so ready. I didn't tell them—upstairs. I said—it was the grocer—please go."

"But you asked me in," he protested.

"I wanted to speak to you—to warn you—I thought that he"—and she pointed upstairs—"was asleep. But he's awake—please go."

"And leave you here? Tell me—where do you come in, anyway? Do you know what's going on? Is Henderson"——

"I know it all! Henderson is with them. He—they'll kill you. Please go."

"Henderson won't be here for a while yet, if he's just taking the train. I want you to explain"——

"But the others! Bergson—they'll be here. I haven't dared to go out—not even to tell the police. And I've been afraid—they might kill Mr. Conybear—and the others"——

She put her hands to her face.

"Please," said Waring. "Please! If you'll tell me—what you know"——

"Nothing," she answered. "Except that Mr. Conybear and some other rich men have been kidnaped by a man named Bergson, and that Henderson, Mr. Conybear's secretary, is in the plot."

"But what are you doing here? Tell me that."

"My uncle—I have been living with him in Paris. But I was tired of France. I wanted to come back to America. I insisted and he let me. But—there were certain things—he explained certain facts to me—that I had not known—things that bound him to Bergson. And I told him that I'd help him—break those bonds. * * * I thought I could, but—oh, I can't explain now. Please go."

"To the police?"

"Yet. No—oh, I don't know. If the police could come upon them without alarming them—oh, I don't know."

Her body shook as she fought against a sob. Waring patted her shoulder.

"It's all right. I felt as you do—about the police. But—something must be done. Henderson fooled me"——

"Oh, if uncle had sent the man he was going to send. He told me—when I left him—that he'd send someone. But maybe he was afraid. Bergson is dangerous"——

Waring suddenly remembered the name of her uncle. Peter Randall! And "P. R." undoubtedly stood for that name! But it was hardly the time to tell her that her uncle supplied Bergson with murderers. If she thought that Peter Randall aimed at Bergson, instead of standing with the chief of the Inner Council of the mysterious society, let her think so—for the present, at any rate.

"Look here," he said. "We can't stay here—either of us. You come with me. We'll go down to police headquarters. I'll tell them all I know and you tell them what you know. We can slip out now quietly."

"And they'll miss me and suspect and perhaps kill those men at once. You go. I'll stay and"——

Her voice died away. At the front door were men entering the house. She looked wildly about her. But the only door to the room was the one through which they had entered.

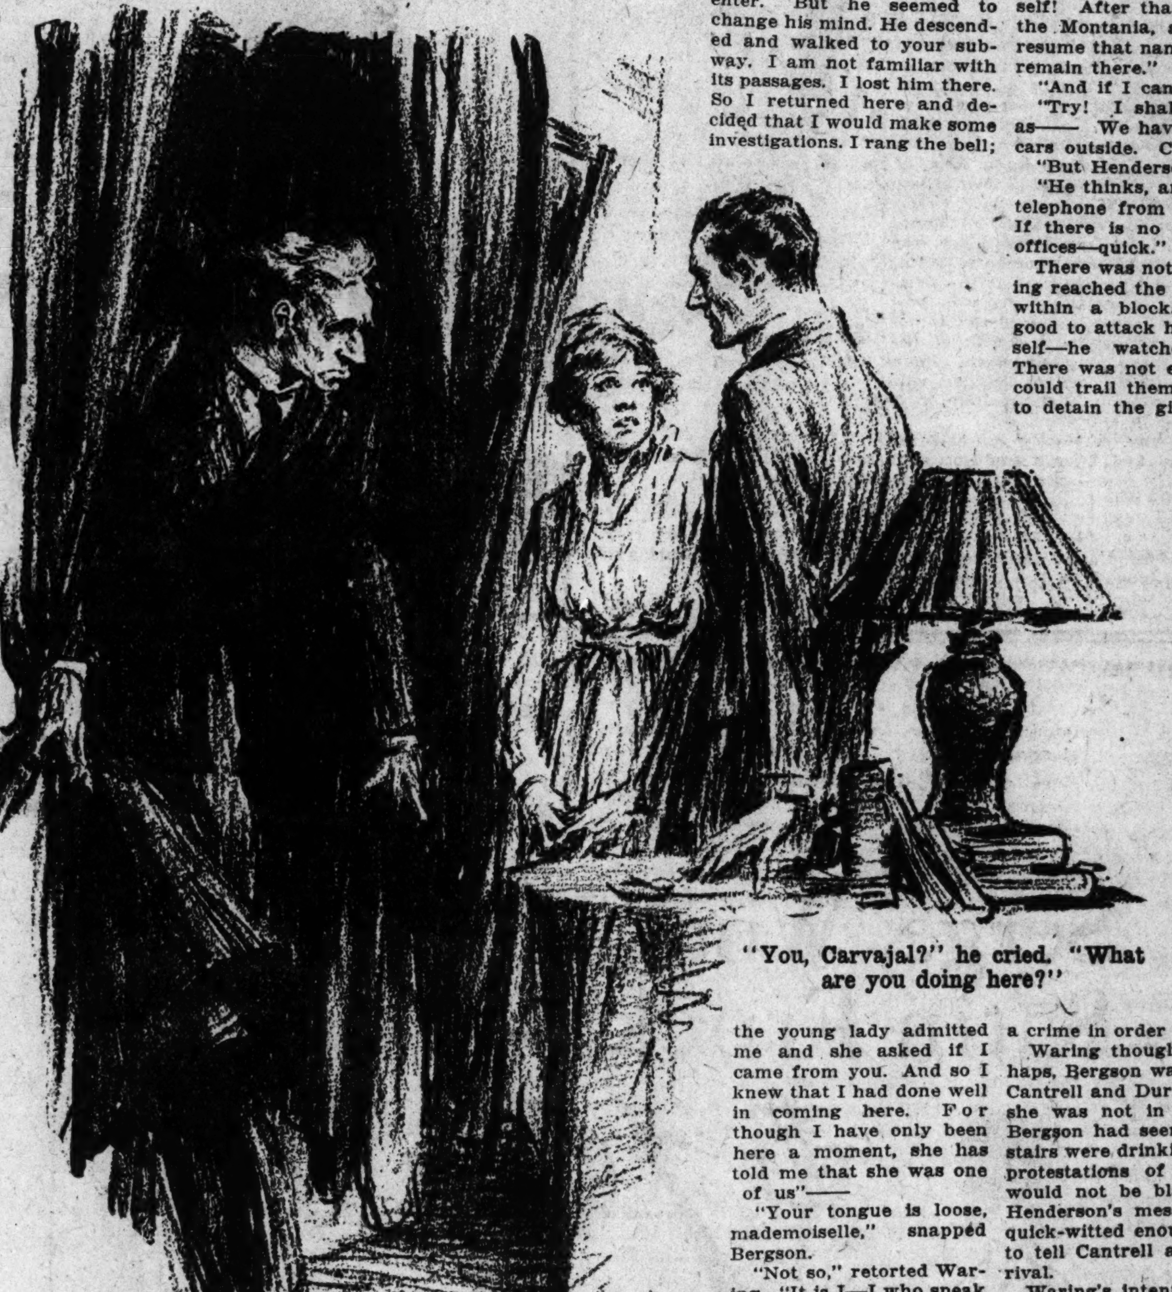
"The window," she gasped.

But Waring shook his head. If he were to die, he preferred to die facing his enemies; he did not care to be shot in the back. But the first words of Bergson, bursting into the room, told him that death was not too near to him to be avoided if his wits were quick. For Bergson's suspicions were not yet awakened.

"You, Carvajal?" he cried. "What are you doing here?"

Waring saw the light of hope—mystified, yet still hope—flash in the girl's eyes. And Waring, fighting for his life, he knew, found that his wits were sharpened by his danger.

"I saw a man spying when I left Hancock Square," he said. "He followed me and I—I eluded him and then I followed him. I saw him go to a telephone—in a saloon. He left and I still followed him. He came to this house, mounted the steps and I thought that he would enter. But he seemed to change his mind. He descended and walked to your subway. I am not familiar with its passages. I lost him there. So I returned here and decided that I would make some investigations. I rang the bell; the young lady admitted me and she asked if I came from you. And so I knew that I had done well in coming here. For though I have only been here a moment, she has told me that she was one of us"——



"You, Carvajal?" he cried. "What are you doing here?"

"Your tongue is loose, mademoiselle," snapped Bergson.

"Not so," retorted Waring. "It is I—I who speak too freely. But—we are both of the same society. There is no harm done."

"No," cried Bergson, "none at all, except that the police suspect, that your spy, one Philip Waring, has probably gone to the police by this time, if Henderson, the fool, the fool!"

"What did he do?" asked the girl.

"Do? The police telephoned him this afternoon—told him there was a rumor that Conybear was kidnaped. And Henderson, because he put them off with fair words, thought they were deceived and so did not tell me until just now. He feared that I would take needless alarm. The fool! The fool!"

Waring had seen angry men in his life before, but he had never seen one so mastered by rage as was Bergson now. And still, though his nostrils twitched, Bergson seemed to have a dual identity, one part of which raged at the absent Henderson while the other planned swiftly.

She nodded.

"You told the others?"

She shook her head. "They have been drinking. I—I am afraid of them."

Waring, with her words, thought he understood the surly quality of the voice upstairs. He looked at Bergson, to see how the man would take this news. Bergson seemed unimpressed.

"They would not drink enough to hurt themselves. Although I will admit that Cantrell and Durney, without liquor at all, are not attractive to a woman, and with a drink"—— His eyes suddenly narrowed. "But how did you expect, if you had not told them, to handle this Waring—did Henderson fail to tell you that he had sent this Waring, who had telephoned him?"

"Henderson said that Waring was coming here and told me to detain him. But those beasts upstairs—I was going to wait until Waring got here and then tell them."

"If I could only get people who do no thinking for themselves," raged Bergson. "If you had told them when he came to the steps they would have captured him. And Henderson—if Henderson had not delayed telling me that in some manner the police had got wind of Conybear's capture by us. I am cursed with the brains, the infinitesimal brains of those who surround me, their desire to think for themselves, to save me alarm."

He turned to Ranney, who had entered the room with him.

"If that Waring has gone to the police—let those swine upstairs"——

But at this moment the "swine" entered, attracted by the voices downstairs.

"What's wrong?" demanded the foremost, whose voice was that of the man Waring had heard speaking to the girl.

"The police know of this place," snapped Bergson; "doubtless of the other, too. But if they go there they will find the birds have flown and if they come here—you shall pay for your drinking, my friends."

"We've not drunk a drop," protested the second man.

"She says you have; why lie to me?" demanded Bergson.

"Why—she—she"——

"It doesn't matter now. We will settle later the price you pay." He turned to Waring. "This Waring, who telephoned Henderson—he said that his name was Philip Waring. You, Carvajal, find out where he lives. He is a fool! None but a fool would have come to this house on so flimsy an excuse. But—he thought better of it. He may be the sort of fool to think again. He—he can't know anything. And he may think again before he tells the police. It is a chance. And we must take that chance. You, Carvajal, find him. Kill him!"

Waring's nerves were taut, and yet he almost laughed at Bergson's command. To find himself and kill himself—but his sense of the ludicrous was less insistent than his sense of peril.

"And after that?"

"You are a man, Carvajal," cried Bergson. "No doubts, no wondering, no thinking for yourself! After that, you say? You came here, on the Montania, as Jacques Pelletier, eh? Then resume that name. Go to—oh, the Plutonia, and remain there."

"And if I can't get this Waring?"

"Try! I shall delegates others, too, as soon as—— We have talked enough. There are two cars outside. Come"——

"But Henderson?" said one of the men.

"He thinks, and not always foolishly. He will telephone from near by before he comes here. If there is no answer he will go to one of the offices—quick."

There was not a police officer in sight as Waring reached the sidewalk. There was not a man within a block. Helplessly—it would do no good to attack half a dozen armed men by himself—he watched the two cars drive off. There was not even a taxi in sight whereby he could trail them. He could think of no excuse to detain the girl. He could think of nothing, save the fact that, with "the Society" at his mercy, he had been duped by Henderson and was lucky to have escaped with his life, much less capture the kidnapers of Conybear and rescue that millionaire.

Of course, he could still go to the police. But if he did, what could he tell them of any value? That he had located Bergson, had helped to force Burton Conybear to draw money from the bank—there was the weakness of his position. The police would not complaisantly believe everything Waring told them. They would arrest Waring on suspicion, anyway. If he could lead the police to Conybear's prison, matters would be different. But if he could merely tell them that he had pretended to be one of Bergson's gang and could not tell them where the gang was now—the police were an unimaginative lot; they would not believe that anyene, an innocent anyone, would have found it necessary to assist in a crime in order to get evidence.

Waring thought of the girl. Even now, perhaps, Bergson was discovering that she lied, that Cantrell and Durney had not taken a drink, that she was not in danger at their hands. Still, Bergson had seemed to know that the men upstairs were drinking men; would not believe their protestations of complete abstinence. Claire would not be blamed for failing to give them Henderson's message at once. And she was quick-witted enough to explain away her failure to tell Cantrell and Durney of "Carvajal's" arrival.

Waring's intention to play a lone hand hardened. Yes, he must play a lone hand, for her sake as well as his own. And despite her peril and his own, he could hardly forbear smiling as he turned down Fifth avenue. It was absurd, this commission to stalk and slay himself.

CHAPTER IX.

"WELL, what have you done?"

Kelcey, standing stiffly at attention, waited until the Commissioner had hung his coat and hat upon a hook. Then he answered.

"Sent over to the Era office for a photo of Waring. Ought to be here any minute. Ordered a hundred copies made as soon as possible and sent to each precinct. Telephoned Portsmouth. Henderson not there."

"Not there?" Herkomer was at his desk now and he stared at the Sergeant. "Where is he?"

"Servant answered that he'd gone to New York a while ago on business."

Herkomer frowned. "What else did you do?"

"Sent six men off in search of Waring. Looked him up in the Blue Book. Belongs to the Exploration, the Bachelors', the Mummers' and the National Clubs. Man to each of them and a couple to his apartment."

"Who's his lawyer?"

"Sent a man to the Era as you ordered. Told him to look up Waring in the 'morgue' there. Probably have all that information when he returns, sir."

"Send someone out to interview him, whoever he is. Get all you can about Waring's finances; see if he owns any property that he could have mortgaged to Conybear. See if"——

A knock on the door interrupted him. Kelcey admitted a uniformed man who laid on the Commissioner's desk a sheet of paper. It was a brief dossier of Waring. Herkomer nodded comprehendingly at Kelcey.

"Very quick work, Sergeant."

He glanced at the terse sketch of the career of Philip Waring. Complete, it told little of Waring that Herkomer was not already vaguely aware of, save that it stated the name of the attorney who had, while Waring was crossing the Atlantic last winter, represented him at the early inquiries into the Carey Haig smash.

"This may help a little," said the Commissioner. "Samuel Balch is Waring's attorney. At least, he was at one time. You've worked fast, Kelcey. But I guess we need speed, at that."

"Yes, sir, I imagine so. Shall I send a man out to this Balch?"

"Better. What else is being done?"

Kelcey shrugged his shoulders.

"Nothing, sir. I've told Capt. Casey to drop everything else the Detective Bureau has on hand. There was a raid planned for tonight. Strong-arm squad was going to visit Tex Granville's house on Forty-third street. He's running a wheel pretty openly"——

"The Greenhams? What are they doing?"

"What do they ever do except run up an expense bill?" demanded Kelcey scornfully. "Watchin' the ferries and the railroad stations or somethin' nice and original like that, I suppose."

"Who was going to lead the strong-arm raid?"

"Loot'nant Dan McGraw, sir."

"Better have him do it, after all. It'll keep the newspaper men busy. Tell him to make it spectacular."

"Right, sir. All the frills? Hydraulic jack for the door and all that?"

"Yes. And red fire and a brass band—anything to get the town talking. It'll keep, he'll keep, maybe this other thing dark.

"Have a couple of men go out to Conybear's Portsmouth place. Have 'em stay there till Henderson gets back. Meanwhile, let 'em pump everyone out there. Learn as much as they can. And if they get anything at all, telephone it in."

"Yes, sir." Kelcey saluted and left the office.

Herkomer sat down at his desk. He was a good, capable executive, with a thorough knowledge of police methods. He had studied the Scotland Yard system and the ways of the Continental police.

But—and it was the "but" that confronted the Commissioner now—Herkomer knew his own limitations. He was not a detective. He could direct the operation of the Detective Bureau, could instruct his subordinates to round up "wanted" criminals, could even advise them how to go about that rounding-up process—under certain conditions. But when a crime such as this occurred—there had really been nothing quite like it in his experience—he was at a loss how to proceed. And he could not say that he had nothing to go upon. He had Philip Waring's visit to the bank with Burton Conybear—which might be innocent, but which, if not, gave Herkomer a working basis.

He smiled, although a trifle ruefully. What great detective of fiction was ever given more by the author than this, as a basis from which to deduce? Yes, but Herkomer was only a policeman. And he could deduce nothing, save that it was vital to apprehend Waring. His smile became less rueful. The same deduction, and no more, would be made by the greatest detective that ever mystified an anxious reader.

He picked up a newspaper; a little inconspicuous paragraph leaped from the page at him. Tucked away in a corner, there was no reason why he should have read it. It was an item of a hundred words telling about an accident, fatal, to an unidentified man, apparently a Frenchman, who had been run down by an automobile at Twenty-eighth street. Alarmed by the approach of a tenant of the apartment house that the man was apparently intending to rob, the victim had fled, been knocked down by a car and instantly killed. And the tenant who had frightened the man to his death was Philip Waring.

Herkomer reached for a press button to summon a clerk. The telephone at his elbow buzzed, and while he answered the telephone he postponed sending for the record of the accident.

The headquarters central spoke to him.

"Officer Dooling on the wire, Commissioner."

"All right," said Herkomer.

A moment later Plain Clothes Man Dooling spoke.

"I'm up near the Sinsabaugh place, Commissioner. Phonin' from a drug store round the corner on Madison avenue. William Sinsabaugh, the railroad man and financier, sir. On the Waring matter, sir."

Kelcey had done more than tell Herkomer that he had assigned men to the pursuit of Waring. He had written their names and their posts on a slip of paper on the Commissioner's desk. Herkomer glanced at this list now.

"You are detailed to the Exploration Club, Dooling."

"Yes, sir. And the doorman there is Tom Fields. Before your time, Commissioner. He was 'broke' for drunkenness. But he ain't a bad sort, and we remembered each other, and he gave me the tip-off on Waring. Waring had been in there half an hour before I got there. Been in with Mr. Sinsabaugh. They only stayed a minute or two—had a drink, I guess; then they left in a taxi outside the club. The chauffeur was there, and I asked him where they had gone. Straight to the Sinsabaugh house, he told me. I chased right up here, and Officer Carmichael was on the corner. He knows Sinsabaugh by sight, and he said he'd been on fixed post at the corner for half an hour, and he hadn't seen Sinsabaugh nor anyone else come out. He's watchin' the house now while I phone. Sergt. Kelcey said to make a pinch, sir, and if Waring should come out of the Sinsabaugh house I'll do it—or Carmichael, if he should come this minute. But I didn't know but perhaps you was in a hurry, Commissioner, and breakin' into the house without a warrant and takin' him away"——

He paused, to let the Commissioner digest the inalienable rights of Anglo-Saxons.

"That's all right," said Herkomer. "You don't need a warrant for murder. I am in a hurry. Go to the Sinsabaugh house with Officer Carmichael. Ask for Waring. If he won't come out to see you, effect an entrance any way you see fit. The charge is murder. If he asks you questions, don't answer them. Bring him in!"

"Right," said Dooling. The receiver clicked, and Herkomer leaned back comfortably in his chair. He forgot all about his worry of a little while back; accident to the unknown man in front of Waring's house was suspicious enough to justify the charge of murder and protect Herkomer from action for false arrest.

The telephone rang again. Eagerly Herkomer answered it, to hear a very discomfited Officer Dooling state that Waring had slipped through his fingers.

"I didn't believe Sinsabaugh, sir. The servant who answered the door told me that Mr. Waring was dining with the Sinsabaughs, but Sinsabaugh came out and said there was a mistake. Mr. Waring had gone half an hour ago, and I searched the house, and—he ain't there, sir. Only guest was a young lady. The butler said Waring hadn't been there, and there wasn't any place set for him, and then the servant that answered the door said he must have been mistaken, and—what'll I do, sir?"

"You watch the house, Dooling. If Sinsabaugh goes out right away, follow him, and when you get a chance, phone here. I'll rush a relief, so that Sinsabaugh won't know that he's being followed, right up to you."

He hung up the telephone and pressed the button. To the clerk who entered he said that he wanted Sergt. Kelcey to come to him.

Events in the Social World

THE FATALIST

Usual Season's Thrills and Excitement Among Debutantes Over Who's to Be Queen of the Veiled Prophet Ball Are Replaced This Year by Wonderings as to Who Is to Be the Next "War Bride"—Announcements of Engagements Are Coming Thick and Fast.

THIS time last year every one was thrilled and excited over the coming Veiled Prophet ball. If we had had one this year it would have been next Tuesday night, and by now every debutante would have been on the qui vive awaiting her first big affair. The Queen and her court would have been chosen, the gowns would have their final fitting, and everything would be in readiness for the opening event of the social season. As it is now about all that is occupying the attention of society outside of war work and war work benefits, is wondering who will be the next ''war bride.'' Announcements are liable to come most any time for orders are not things one can wait upon, and almost each week brings news that some bridegroom-eelct has obtained a leave and the plans for a wedding made.

SOCIETY is keenly anticipating "The Italian Merenda," which is to be given at Cicardi's at 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. Just what a "Merenda" is or will be like is rather puzzling to the average American mind, so to relieve any further anxiety, especially to those not familiar with the Italian language, it is the Italian term for "tea," so the entertainment on Tuesday, after all, will be just a "tea," but with so many added attractions besides what is usually expected at an American or English "tea," that it will take more the form of a musical and literary affair. It is for the benefit of the war library fund, a most worthy war service work which provides libraries for our soldiers and sailors, keeping their minds occupied in their leisure hours, thus tending to their moral and mental uplift.

Eugene Angert will preside at the "Merenda." Mrs. Berenice Wyer, wife of Capt. Wyer of Jefferson Barracks, will play "A Ballade." Orrick Johns will recite an original ode, Capt. Dolphin of the British Recruiting Mission will give a talk on "Life in the Trenches," and other interesting features will be on the program. The list of patronesses include Mmes. Paul Blackwelder, Edward Walsh, Alfred Shapleigh, Theodore Benoist, Lon Hocker, Eugene Angert, George Mepham, J. C. Jones, Herbert L. Parker, W. A. Hardaway, Philip Fouke, George Gellhorn, Eugene Senseney, T. M. Meston, B. F. Bush and F. C. Rand.

IT is very gratifying to see what women are accomplishing in the world work of today. In the Food Conservation rally which took place on Thursday, Mrs. Oscar Johnson was awarded a prize for the best farm products display. They were raised under her personal supervision on the farm surrounding her country home at St. Albans, Mo. Mrs. Harry Hawes, whose country home at Sappington is one of the most interesting and attractive places around St. Louis, was another prize winner with her canned products. Isn't it splendid to think that women who have long taken an active part in social life can meet a crisis which faces us like the present one and be leaders in the great war work as well as leaders in society in time of peace?

Another work in which an imposing list of women are interested and which will attract much notice is the booth at Vandervoort's in which the second issue of Liberty Bonds are to be sold. Among the prominent women who will have charge tomorrow are Mmes. Ira Wright, Julius Walsh Jr., John O'F. Delaney, Harvey Mudd, Charles Nagel, Walter F. Scott, George Tiffany, George Niedringhaus, J. M. Franciscus, Walker Hill, Sam Fordyce Jr., Perry Francis and Miss Mary Clark.

WOULDN'T it almost be a tragedy if the Imperial Club should abandon its entertainments for the coming winter? With the Lennox Club no longer in existence, what would there be left in the way of important social affairs to divert the minds of society from the grimness and depression of today? It is true there could still be large Red Cross balls, one for the Food Conservation Committee or any of the other wonderful war relief activities that might in a way compensate for the lack of the regular yearly society events, but even those could not take the place that has so long been occupied by the V. P. and the Imperial.

The coming week will witness a number of weddings of importance. Wednesday Miss Elise Lammert Smith will become the bride of Arnold Morrow. The ceremony will take place at the home of the bride-elect's father, in Kingsbury place. Thursday Miss Isabel Capen will be married to John Anderson Scudder II, at the country home of her parents, "Wentworth Terrace," on the Clayton road. Saturday the wedding of Miss Katherine Guy to Henry Fenimore Cooper II will take place at Mr. Guy's summer home in Cooperstown, N. Y. On Saturday also will occur the wedding of Miss Helen Elizabeth McCombs to Edwin Fowler Bright at Jackson, Mo., the home of the bride-elect. A private car will depart Friday night carrying a number of guests who will live on the car while there and return to the city Sunday morning. The wedding of Miss Virginia McQueary to Hubert Brown Sturtevant also will be an event of Saturday, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. Howard McQuary of 5771 McPherson avenue. October seems to be popular with brides this year, and before the month is over many more weddings of prominence are expected to take place.

This week will see a general exodus of St. Louis Daughters of the American Revolution to attend the annual conference which takes place Wednesday at Marshall, Mo. St. Louis for the first time in 10 years will present a candidate for the State regency. She is Mrs. John Trigg Moss of 6017 Von Versen avenue.

Among others who will attend the conference are Mesdames A. V. L. Brokaw, Walter Trask, Samuel Baker Jr and McCune Gill, delegates from St. Louis chapter; Mesdames John Trigg Moss, L. M. Ottofy, W. C. Ferris, L. C. O'Reilly, R. A. Burns, J. M. Jones, J. B. Suddeth, Charles H. Hoke, V. M. LaFon and Miss Essie Matlock, representing Cornelia Green chapter, Mrs. R. S. Bettis, Samuel McKnight Greene and William D'Oench, Jefferson chapter; Mrs. E. E. Cowles, George Newcomb and Miss Jane Glover, Laclede chapter, and Mrs. A. B. Chapin and William A. Hard, Kirkwood chapter.

Yesterday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock occurred the marriage of Miss Virginia Bevis Longstreth to Harry Ames Richards of Stamford, Conn. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Z. B. T. Phillips of St. Peter's Episcopal Church, at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. G. Lacy Crawford of 5635 Waterman avenue. Mrs. Warren Clark, sister of the bride, was matron of honor and Miss Lida Crawford, a niece, was bridesmaid. Norris Pierson of Stamford, who is in training at the aviation field near Belleville, was best man, and James Crawford and James Stevens, nephew and cousin of the bride, served as groomsmen. Bevis Longstreth, the bride's brother, who is in training at Fort Sheridan, gave his sister in marriage.

After the ceremony a reception was held and later a wedding supper for the bridal party and immediate family was served. Mr. and Mrs. Richards departed last night for a honeymoon trip and will be at home in Stamford, Conn., after Nov. 1.

Mrs. Richards is the daughter of Mrs. Florence Bevis Longstreth and a niece of Mrs. G. Lacy Crawford and Mrs. Lida Vevis, so comes of a family noted for its handsome women. Mrs. Longstreth, who with her daughter has spent most of her time in New York the last two years, will remain in St. Louis this winter.

WHOSE ENGAGEMENT TO MR. JOHN WEBER HAS BEEN ANNOUNCED.

Details of the wedding of Mrs. Frances Cabanne Scovel to Capt. William F. Saportas, which took place in Honolulu Sept. 13, have just reached St. Louis. The ceremony was performed at the home of Mrs. Augustus C. Murphy, at 8 o'clock in the evening. Father Ignatius Fealy, Chaplain of Schofield Barracks, officiated. Mrs. George K. French was matron of honor and little Helen Hiserman was flower girl. George K. French gave the bride in marriage. The house was decorated in pink roses and pink gladioli. About 20 guests were present. The bride was gowned in cream-colored net and carried white gardenias and sweet peas.

After an informal reception, Capt. Saportas and his bride departed for a trip to Waikiki Bay and other interesting points on the island, and on their return will be at home at Schofield Barracks, where Capt. Saportas is stationed.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Steigers, 5156 Von Versen avenue, returned to the city last week after an absence of two months at the Mt. Washington Hotel, Bretton Woods, N. H., and touring the New England States.

DANDRUFF SOON RUINS THE HAIR

Girls—if you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and you hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.—ADV.

15,000 BOYS IN TRAINING SCHOOL FOR NAVAL WORK

Special Instruction Given In Nine Separate Schools at Great Lakes Station.

5000 IN CLASS DAILY

GREAT LAKES Ill., Sept. 29.—Fifteen thousand youths are in training at the Great Lakes naval trainin gstation. Special training is given in nine instruction schools here. The daily classes are attended by 5000 men. The length of the courses vary and many bright students qualify in a fraction of the alloted time.

To the student "rookie" one of the most attractive branches is the radio school. Two towers, 400 feet high, with power to receive and transmit messages as far as the Panama Canal, enable the students to get practical experience in wireless telegraphy. Three hundred students are graduated every three months in radio. They complete their course in the Naval Reserve Radio School at Harvard University.

One thousand students are attending classes in the hospital school, learning to care for the sick and wounded. Many of the students are university graduates and several are registered physicians. In the medical branch instruction is given in pharmacy, botany, bacteriology, anatomy and first aid to the injured. It is planned to graduate 2500 students a year.

Gunnery School Conducted.

Another interesting department of the big training depot is the gunnery school. Youths who show aptitude for this highly essential arm of the service are entered for a two months' training course. Before they are rated and sent to sea they must be able to take apart and replace guns of every caliber used in the fleet. Sixteen hundred gunner's mates a year will be turned out of this school.

Uncle Sam will be furnished 1200 quartermasters each 12 months by the Great Lakes station. There is no connection between a quartermaster in the navy and a man of the same title in the army. The navy man has charge of the steering of the ship and also of signals. This course lasts eight months.

Before July 1 next year 1900 coxswains will have been graduated from the school for the petty officers in charge of small boats. The coxswains' school also gives advanced courses in artillery, signaling, deck and marlinspike seamanship.

Pick Men for Signal Work.

As everything depends upon the proficiency, vision and speed of the men who signal in the navy, only exceptionally apt students can qualify for this branch. They are handpicked by their company commanders and 200 signalmen are sent to sea every two months.

Bluejackets must be well fed and the food must be prepared by experts. To insure the proper preparation of food a cooks' and commissary school has been established. Plain and fancy cooking is taught the men by chefs who have spent years in the service.

All clerical work in the navy is done by yeomen. They keep the books, type letters, and, in fact, do the same service as that performed by an office force on land. Yeomen are instructed in shorthand, typewriting, bookkeeping and the official forms used in the navy.

A musicians' school is being conducted under the instruction and leadership of Lieut. John Philip Sousa of the United States Naval Reserve Force.

MEN IN AUSTRIAN INTERNMENT CAMPS DESCRIBE SUFFERING

5000 Men, Women and Children in Cattle Trucks Five Days Without Food or Drink.

LONDON, Sept. 29.—The Berne correspondent of the Daily Mail telegraps: "I had a talk today with some men who recently came to Switzerland from Austrian internment camps at Katzenau, near Linzquote after many hardships. 'Our unhappy company, some 5000 in all, men, women and children, huddled together in cattle trucks with hardly standing room, reached Esztergom in Hungary,' they said. 'We had to sleep three nights in an open field in the wind and cold, for no provision had been made for shelter. Some of us had enamel washing basins and we sat in them all night to keep off the wet ground. On the fourth day tents were given to us, but many of the people died, especially from dysentery.

"'Then we were all put into cattle trucks again by this cruel and stupid Government and sent far away to Wielandstal. Never shall I forget that journey without sleep. Some of the children were screaming and many of the people were sick. There was no exit at the stopping places from the locked wagons, no lavatories, and no mercy from anybody.

"'At Katzenau at present there are 6000 interned, chiefly Russians, Italians and Servians, and also some English. The Italians come from the Trentino and are starving and dying. The English barrack is damp and unhealthy and the food full of bugs. Many of the inmates are ill and doctors are no better than butchers.'"

SOLDIER SAFER ON SEA THAN CIVILIAN, EDUCATOR ASSERTS

McKendree College Man, a Rhodes Scholar, Tells of Trip to War Front.

HEARS BIG GUNS BOOM

Aeroplanes at Work Daily and Are Under Fire Almost Continuously.

Crossing the sea as an American soldier is safer than crossing it as a civilian, in the opinion of Cyrus Gentry of Mascoutah, Ill., Rhodes scholar at Oxford and professor at McKendree College, Lebanon, Ill., who has [illegible] in wartime in both capacities.

In a letter to E. P. Baker, dean of the college, he says the voyage from New York to England was by a route he had never sailed before and he and the other members of the Twelfth Engineers, a St. Louis regiment, were well protected.

Commenting on the situation, where he is within sound of the guns, he writes: "It is easy to see that the allies have the upper hand now. There are 20 allied aeroplanes crossing the German lines to every one of theirs that crosses ours. We fire 10 to 100 times as many shells from our artillery. We are now in the position they were at the beginning. If they start firing we give them more than they send over. They are being slowly driven back. I saw over 100 prisoners taken not long since and the Tommies report that they won't fight with the bayonet. When they are no longer in shooting range they try to surrender. Let's hope they all surrender, and that shortly."

Expects No Early Peace.

He expresses the opinion, however, that an early peace is improbable. He tells of the few days spent by the regiment in England and of the parade in which his company was the color company.

"The British," he writes, "put forth a reception the like of which has not been seen during this war. The Queen has since written us a letter congratulating us on our appearance."

He was given 24 hours' leave to visit Oxford, where he was a student before the war. "It was the same old place," he writes, "but as it was vacation time, few of my old friends were there. I was the first American soldier to appear there, as well as the first Rhodes scholar to come back as a member of the American army."

From England they were hurried across the Channel safely, but somewhat uncomfortably, and placed in camp near the port of their arrival.

"There," he writes, "we were provided with steel helmets, which we immediately termed iron soup plates, and two gas masks. We were drilled in these gas helmets and how to put them on quickly. This was the first intimation of how close we would be to the firing line."

The next day they traveled eight hours on slow French railways and marched three miles to their permanent camp.

"We are in a district which the Germans have vacated recently," he continues, "and the ruin is appalling. There are at least 10 villages near here and I'm sure there isn't a single house intact and I can't say positively that I have even seen one whole wall that was undamaged. Trenches and barbed wire entanglements are found in many fields and shell holes provide a home for millions of frogs. Large factories are a mass of brick, charred timber and twisted iron. Much of the damage was done by shell fire and what was left was blown up by the Germans before retiring. Fruit trees are sawed off and cemeteries have vaults opened. Acts of plunder I did not believe before I am now convinced of.

Hears Artillery at Front.

"We are in easy hearing of the artillery at the front. Many of the larger guns are right around us here. Aeroplanes and observation balloons are in the air every clear day and they are being fired at continually. The smoke of the shell as it bursts near them can be seen and later the report is heard. The other day a German shell burst near a British aeroplane over their lines and the report was 32 seconds in arriving.

"At night the firing is great. White star shells light up No Man's Land and the surrounding country and red, yellow and green signal lights add a touch of color. We can, of course, see the flames of the British guns around us, but the light of Fritz's firing can only be seen as reflected in the sky. It was at a nearby village the other day when a German plane appeared above. An anti-aircraft battery, a few hundred yards away, gave it a rousing reception. I have never yet seen one brought down, though I have watched hundreds of shots explode around them."

Iowan Thrusts Foot Under Train and Loses Toe.

INDEPENDENCE, Io., Sept. 29.—Floyd O'Brien, 30 years old, called on to leave for the Camp Dodge cantonment of the national army, went to the Illinois Central station, where he held his right foot on the track while a passenger train passed over it.

O'Brien's great toe of his right foot was severed. He admitted that he injured himself so that he would not have to report for service. The exemption board has his case under advisement.

LEMON JUICE IS A SKIN WHITENER AND A BEAUTIFIER

Prepare a quarter pint of beauty lotion at about the cost of a small jar of cold cream.

The juice of two fresh lemons strained into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white makes a whole quarter pint of the most remarkable lemon skin bleach and beautifier at about the cost one must pay for a small jar of the ordinary cold creams. Care should be taken to strain the lemon juice through a fine cloth so no lemon pulp gets in, then this lotion will keep fresh for months. It really will bleach and remove such blemishes as pimples, blackheads, freckles and tan and is the ideal skin softener, smoothener and beautifier which absorbes readily and is not sticky or greasy.

Just try it! Make up a quarter pint of this harmless lemon lotion and apply it daily to the face, neck, arms and hands. It really does soften, freshen, bleach and bring out the hidden roses and beauty of any skin.

Your druggist will sell three ounces of orchard white at little cost, and any grocer will supply the lemons.—ADV.

Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert L. Beckley of 6444 Marmaduke avenue and family and several guests have returned from their camp at Sulphur Springs, Mo.

A surprise party was given in honor of the Frank Clement at the home of Mrs. Schaub, 3944 Castleman avenue, Tuesday evening. Those present were Misses Mabelle and Hazel Snyder, Elenora Linck, Josephine Benz, Addaline Morcella, Emma Brockner, Marie and Helen Schillig; Harold Payne, Eugene Blackshaw, John Ditch, Ben Grevier, Albert Travier, Arnold Krahn, Ralph Collicott, L. A. Moore, Mmes. H. S. Bibbins and L. A. Moore.

The engagement of Miss Hope Burton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Burton of Kansas City, to James Macdonald Chaney, son of the late Rev. J. M. Chaney and Mrs. Chaney of 5673 Cates avenue, was announced in Kansas City yesterday. The wedding will take place Oct. 29.

QUEEN MARIE WRITES OF SPIRIT OF THE EXILED RUMANIANS

Never will we know where they all lie, those brave sons of time who by thousands have died. We can only pray that thou shouldst not weigh too heavily upon them and that within thy bosom their rest should be sweet!

Far and wide, scattered in all four corners of the land, silent and uncomplaining they lie in graves that are marked by no crosses, in places that have no names. * *

They lie waiting, and they are not impatient, so sure are they that we shall come back!

When I was young—quite young—a beautiful dream I did cherish. I dreamed of planting gardens wherever I went, wishing that nothing but flowers should mark the places where I had passed. As I grew older that dear dream vanished with many vanishing dreams. Reality called me and few gardens had I leisure to plant.

Now, should I ever return it would be upon those nameless graves that I would sow my flowers, upon those thousands and thousands of graves where our heroes lie hearkening for the tramp of returning armies — those would then be my gardens that I would love!

Like my other dream, this dream may never come true. But as this year I am a helpless exile, I think that perhaps God himself will remember our dead and sow flowers on their graves!

Spring is coming! Therefore, surely will God sow his own flowers upon the graves of our dead. * * *

Garland's
SERGE AND SATIN DRESSES
A Wonderfully Attractive Showing at $25

Don't you believe—Don't you KNOW, if there were better dresses to be had at $25.00 that Garland's would have them?

This Store with its enormous business, its wonderful buying power (a result of the enormous business)—its buyers constantly in the market, always watchful and alert for the good things—why shouldn't we have the best Dreses at $25.00, as we do in all other kinds.

The Dress at left of sketch is Navy Serge, draped sides and panel back trimmed with soutache braid, white georgette and lace collar, brown suede leather belt.

But navy and black are not the only colors, you can have choice of brown, green, plum, taupe and purple. Taffetas, too, at the same price, and dozens of combinations of the three fabrics, and Georgette enters into the making of many. Lots of buttons are used. Sizes for women and misses.

SAGE TEA DANDY TO DARKEN HAIR

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair.

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night if you'll get a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old famous Sage Tea Recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray or becoming faded have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound tonight and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

"POLLYANNA" DRAWS ITS OWN AUDIENCE

Persons Who Seldom Attend Theater Flock to View "the Glad Play."

"Pollyanna," which opens a week's engagement at the Jefferson Theater tonight, is one of the few plays which draw their audiences from outside the ranks of customary playgoers.

"Ben Hur" was such a play, or rather is such a one, for "Ben Hur" is again on the boards, drawing very much as it did 15 years ago. "Way Down East" was another. "Where do these people come from?" theater managers used to ask, as they saw their audiences assembling for these plays. "We've never seen them here before."

The regular playgoers go to "Pollyanna," and perhaps enjoy it most of all, for it is a welcome change from the nerve-strain of problem plays and the fripperies of comedy, musical and otherwise. But the characteristic thing about a "Pollyanna" audience is its sprinkling of whitehaired old people, eager children and clergymen.

Has Made "Glad" Record.

When it was first shown here, at the Olympic Theater, two years ago, "Pollyanna" was a dramatic experiment. It had opened in Detroit shortly before, and a New York engagement was still in the doubtful future. But the genuine good cheer of the play, and the faithfulness with which it followed the charming story of the "glad book," made it an assured success in its first season. It reached New York a year ago, and though some critics undertook to pick its philosophy to pieces, public approval kept it at the Hudson Theater for 15 weeks. This season it is being played by three companies touring different parts of the country, but the one which comes here is the "No. 1" company, with Patricia Collinge, the original Pollyanna, in the title role.

The management of the Jefferson and that of the "Pollyanna" company have promised to give 5 per cent of this week's gross receipts to the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund.

"Experience," which comes to the Shubert-Garrick tonight, is another play which draws others than habitual theater-goers. It came here last season, after becoming an established success in New York and Chicago, and was at the Garrick two weeks. It was generally praised for the vividness of its allegorical pictures and the excellence of its acting, but some took issue with its supposed teachings, and one of these was Rabbi Leon Harrison, who preached on the subject later. He held that Youth, the hero of the play, was a weakling, or he would not have descended the downward path so readily and quickly, and that the method of his restoration was not a convincing one. Other ministers, however, have indorsed the play as teaching a wholesome lesson.

The cast which will appear here includes Leonard Doyle, as Youth, Duncan Penwarden, Leona Hogarth, Beatrice Benton, Mae Paul, George B. Miller and Fred Mosley.

"Fair and Warmer," a farce seen at the Jefferson last season, will return there next week. The following week, beginning Monday night, Oct. 15, David Warfield will appear in his memorable success, "The Music Master."

McIntyre & Heath Return.

McIntyre & Heath, who have been for nearly 20 years the leading blackface comedy team on the vaudeville stage, will head tomorrow's bill at the Orpheum. Their present act is entitled "On Guard." The first episode of the British war picture, "The German Retreat at the Battle of Arras," which was first announced for last week, but was delayed, has been announced for this week. Other features of the bill are Josie Heather, English comedienne; Harriet Rempel and company; Medlin; Watts and Towns; Maurice Burkhart; and Sprague and McNeece.

A new Hawaiian play, "A Daughter of the Sun," will come to the American this afternoon. A troupe of native ukeleleers, or ukelelists, or ukeleliacs, or whatever the garlanded players of these infant guitars are called, figures in the show. James A. Bliss, formerly in a stock company here, is in the cast.

Joe Jenny and the Empire Comedy Four will help entertain at the Columbia tomorrow, as will Arthur Sullivan and company in "A Drawing From Life;" Le Petite Mercedes, danseuse; the Kimiwa Troupe, and others.

"Good-by Broadway," announced as a song and dance revue, heads the Grand's bill tomorrow. Boyle Woolfolk, the producer of this act, says he bought it from Florenz Ziegfeld of "Follies" fame. Fred and Minita Brad, Tabor and Green, and Fogarty and Williams are among the other participants.

Some Shrinking Violet.

Today's bill at the Gayety bears the modest title of "The Best Show in Town." Its cast includes Frank Hunter, Frank Wesson and Bert Lahr as comedians, and Lynn Canter, Bud Walker, Clare Keating, Virginia Ware, the Davenports and the Isabella Sisters. The chorus is heralded as "snappy."

Joe Hurtig's "Whirlie Girlie Girls" are to be at the Standard, and the two parts of the bill are "Me, Him and I" and "The Suffragettes' Jail." Teresa Adams, John Bowman, Tiney Hilson and Helen Spencer are among the singers and comedians.

AMERICAN MILITARY AID ONLY PHANTOM, VON TIRPITZ AVERS

Former Head of German Admiralty Tells Hungarians Submarines Will Defeat England Ultimately.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 29.—In an interview in the Neues Pester Journal of Budapest, Admiral von Tirpitz, former German Minister of Marine, characterized America's military help in the war as a phantom. He asserts there is no possibility of transporting a considerable American army to Europe.

The Admiral gives his Hungarian readers a long list of reasons why they should, and must, hold out with Germany and Austria until the submarines have won the war for them, but declares it is unwise, "on account of political reasons," to prophesy the moment of England's collapse.

Supreme in Autumn Fashions

World's Foremost Creations Centralized by Bedell

At the New Bedell Fashion Shop

In Washington Ave. at Seventh St.

The wonderful success of the New Bedell Fashion Shop, since the Gala Opening here just a few weeks ago, can be attributed almost entirely to the matter of Bedell Styles. Bedell Styles are welcome, not because they are Bedell Styles, but because they are the world's styles—sifted and sorted out by our highly trained experts for you—and reproduced overnight if necessary in the same modes, fabrics and colors that are the hit of the hour on Paris or London or New York boulevards. Every Bedell shop is a Safe Haven for the "Particular" Person—and a Heaven to the economically inclined.

The New Fashion Shop grows positively more fascinating every day. Last week we thought the shop had reached the limit in variety and brilliancy of fresh new tailored and dress things. But the great boxes and dress trunks that have come streaming in all week have attained a new glory—bringing a zest and chic smartness that made us look twice to see if the trunks hadn't in some manner come from Paris itself. So we're going to invite you to make a special point to drop in tomorrow—just like Another Opening. What a hurry—a quick swallowing of coffee—and a sharp call to the chauffeur and an early ride downtown to see them First!

Restrained Models in Fall Dresses

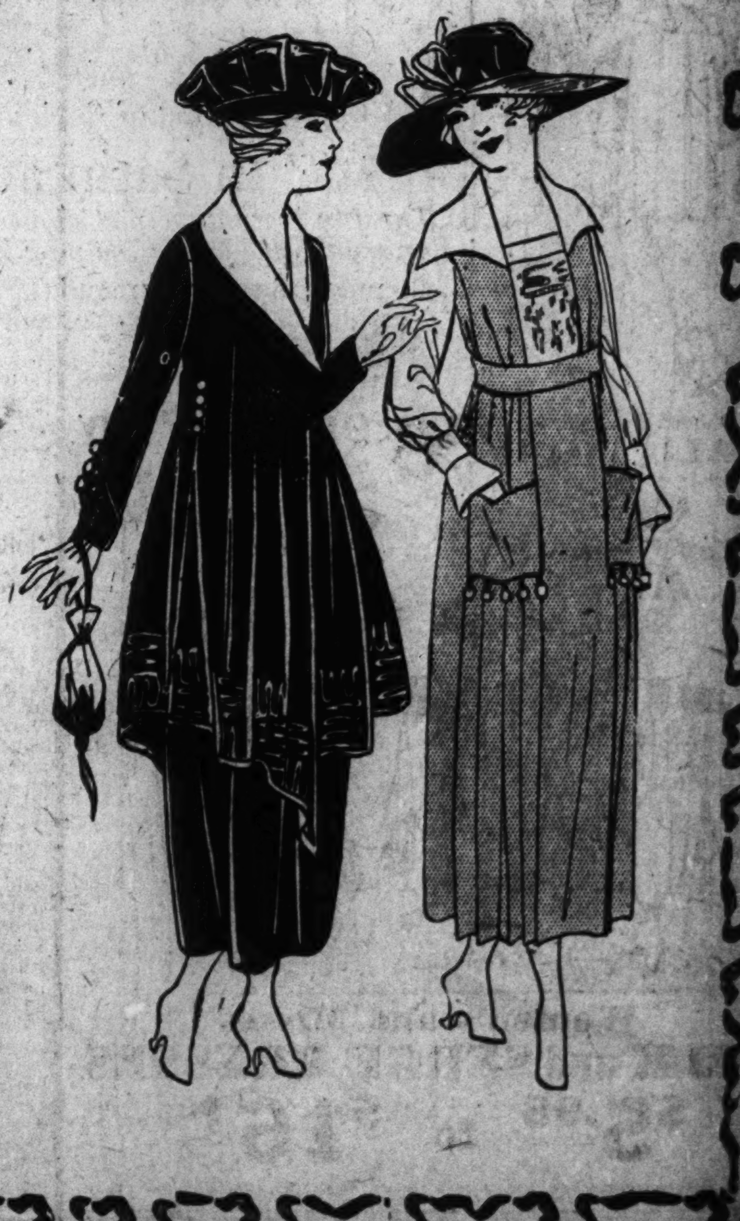
The True Aristocrats Now Come Forward

$19.75 $25 $35

Like the principals of the new plays, these new and commanding dresses have held off their entrance until just the "psychological moment." Well cut silhouettes that snub those you have seen, restrained but graciously self-confident—and very moderately priced.

Brave Blue Serge Tailleurs Unlike That Have Held the Stage Till Now—Slenderized Paris-Bedell Silhouettes—Bringing Out the Figure to an Advantage—Reversed Style—Decisions in Silks That Are Smarter Than Anything.

Then there are those lovely, dressy gowns that all women acknowledge. Youthful, happy, billowy lines—fairy-fancies in sombre tones that might almost have been made of a silver cloud and its lining. Then at $45 there are some de luxe new Evening Dresses that will interest the Smart Set.



Autumn Coats, Soft and Wooly $35

They are beautiful! In soft warmth-without-weight fabrics with amazing collars that muffle up warmly about the chin. Lined with Silk and assisted—wherever help is wanted—with goodly furs. Belts, pockets and everything. Black, Dark Blue and Taupe. Other very extraordinary Coats tomorrow at $25.

Tailored Suits, Smartly Plain $35

There's a certain simplicity and straightness of cut about these astonishing Suits that makes them possible for women of the most exacting and exclusive tastes. Who but Bedell would ever think of turning out—much less do it—true aristocratic models at such a moderate fee?

Alterations Free—Means $2.50 to $5 Off Every Price

We love comparisons—on either Style or Price. But, remember, Madam, Bedell prices include the making of Alterations. If our suit is $50, and another charges $50 plus $5 for alterations, why stand for it? And let no one hint or intimate that Bedell Alterations are anything short of the Very Best. They're famously good!

FEDERAL AGENT BUYS WHEAT HERE WITH DISPATCH

SYSTEM IS A SUCCESS

Commission Merchants Carry Samples and Inspection Records to Flesh's Office.

The United States Food Administration Grain Corporation has opened special offices on the floor of the Merchants' Exchange, where all the wheat that comes into the local market is bought by the Government and distributed to millers or stored in elevators.

It required less than an hour yesterday for Edward M. Flesh, second vice president of the Grain Corporation, in charge of the St. Louis district, to buy and distribute 52 cars of wheat—approximately 100,000 bushels. No money passes on the floor of the exchange, but the grain commission merchants, as soon as they receive a car of grain, deliver the sample to Flesh, and such information as is necessary for him to buy and distribute the grain. When warehouse reecipts are delivered to Flesh he gives the commission merchant a check for the grain.

About noon each day the commission merchants go to Flesh's cage, carrying with them their samples of grain and records of inspection and grading. The grain merchants line up in front of the cage like depositors before the windows of receiving tellers in banks and pass their samples under the wickets. Flesh has his own expert inspector, who, with himself, carefully reinspects all of the samples. In case of any doubt as to the quality of a carload of grain he orders a reinspection.

Musty Grain Inspected Again.

All grain that is musty or damaged is set aside on a special counter, where it is subjected to examination by a special committee comprised of one grain man and one miller. This committee makes a critical inspection of the damaged grain and determines the price. The grain is again closely examined by Flesh and his expert inspector, who determine finally what the Government shall pay for the grain.

The grain is bought and ordered distributed with such dispatch that it is unloaded from the cars the very day it is received in St. Louis. The quick unloading of the cars releases them for other service, in line with the efforts of the railroad companies to meet the extraordinary war time transportation demands by making all cars do 20 to 40 per cent more work than in ordinary times.

Flesh goes to his Merchants Exchange office about 11:30 a. m. each day. He has several clerks, besides his inspector, to assist him. All requisitions for grain that he has received from the nine states in his district, within the past 24 hours, are transferred from his office in the Boatmen's Bank building to the Merchants' Exchange office. These requisitions are filled, if enough grain is received to fill them. If there is any surplus, it is stored in elevators to the account of the Government. The supply is just about sufficient to meet the demand at the present time, but Flesh expects as soon as the farmers finish their fall work, they will rush their wheat to market and that the receipts at St. Louis then will run as high as 300,000 bushels a day.

System Is a Success.

Flesh said yesterday that the system of Government control of wheat and rye was working without friction anywhere. All speculation in wheat ceased when the Government took control and fixed the price a month ago.

In line with the Government's work of conservation, Flesh has adopted the policy of saving the samples of wheat, brought to the floor of the exchange, for human food. Formerly it was the practice of the grain merchants to sell these samples for chicken feed. A ten-pound sample is taken from each car. There was nearly nine bushels of wheat in samples from the 52 cars yesterday. As soon as all transactions based on these samples are closed they will be bagged and sold to millers.

CHURCH TO BE DEDICATED TODAY

Ceremony This Afternoon at McCausland Avenue Presbyterian.

The new McCausland Avenue Presbyterian Church, 1517 McCausland avenue, will be dedicated this afternoon by the congregation and a party of visitors which will include the Rev. Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman of Philadelphia, moderator of the Presbyterian General Assembly. The Rev. David Reiter, pastor of the church, also will be assisted in the ceremonies by the Rev. Drs. Skilling, Russell, Odell and Roemer.

The new church is of brick and stone, and cost $26,500. It seats 375 persons, and this capacity can be increased to 600 by opening the doors connecting with the Sunday school room. A three weeks' revival will be conducted in the new church by the Rev. Chester Birch.

House Goods in Bazar Sale.

An automobile, several loads of coal, brass beds and a kitchen range are among the articles to be offered for sale Oct. 3, 4, 5 and 6 at the bazar and carnival to be given by the St. Pius parishioners. The proceeds from the event will be used to purchase furnishings for the new $100,000 church building. The bazar will be held in the church auditorium, 3520 Utah street.

PACIFIST PROCLIVITIES "BUST" PEARSON'S MAGAZINE

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—An involuntary petition in bankruptcy against the publishers of Pearson's Magazine was filed in the Federal Court here. Liabilities were given as $100,000, with assets unknown. The Court appointed P. B. Olney Jr. as receiver.

Alleged pacifist and socialistic tendencies of the magazine, causing a falling off of circulation were held partly responsible for its troubles i na statment by Harry Zalkin of counsel to the receiver. This, coupled with the high cost of paper, inability to raise advertising rates and the amount of money due authors, he says, made an effort at reorganization necessary. Publication will be continuel by the receiver, he said.

Few Drops When Corns Hurt, Pain Stops! Corns Lift Out

Don't let corns ache twice! Lift any corn or callus off with fingers—Here's magic!

No humbug! Any corn, whether hard, soft or between the toes, will loosen right up and lift out, without any pain.

Ask at any drug store for a small bottle of freezone, which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to rid one's feet of every corn or callus.

Put a few drops directly upon any tender, aching corn or callus. Instantly the soreness disappears and shortly the corn or callus will loosen and can be lifted off with the fingers.

Freezone doesn't eat out the corns or calluses but shrivels them without any irritation.

Just think! No pain at all; no soreness or smarting when applying it or afterwards.

Women! Keep freezone on your dresser and apply a few drops whenever a corn begins aching. Pain stops, corn goes!—ADV.

LOOK AT CHILD'S TONGUE WHEN SICK, CROSS OR FEVERISH

Give "California Syrup of Figs" at once if bilious or constipated.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, it is a sure sign that your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.

When peevish, cross, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, doesn't eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has stomach-ache, sore throat, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated waste, undigested food and bile gently moves out of the little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

You needn't coax sick children to take this harmless "fruit laxative;" they love its delicious taste and it always makes them feel splendid.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. To be sure you get the genuine, ask to see that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.—ADV.

MACLYN ARBUCKLE SCORES SUCCESS IN A SHAW PLAY

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—George Bernard Shaw professes that he needs no aids to shed additional luster on the nuggets of wit which he strings into conversational plays. He is modestly content to be the whole show. Last night Mr. Shaw had to divide attention with a brand new theater. The house in which "Misalliance" saw the light for the first time in New York is in Forty-fourth street, west of Broadway, and bears the name of the Broadhurst. The house in every way created a very favorable impression.

So, also did "Milalliance." This farce, in Shaw's characteristic vein of witty, satirical banter, has been accessible in the printed page for three or four years. Few readers of it probably expected to see it acted, for it is written in one interminably long single scene, and it contains not so much as a vestige of culminative action or consecutive thought. Few of Shaw's plays do.

But William Faversham, who produced it, made most expert use of it. He sliced it up for convenience into three parts, and gave it a cast which ought to fill even Shaw's heart with gratitude. Thanks to the clever impersonations, many passages which seem dreary in print actually sparkle on the stage. The audience, which remained rather dubious through the opening section, warned up amazingly in the second act, and from this point the laughter at the shallo wbut adroitly turned sallies was almost continuous. A real success was the result, and in bringing about this happy outcome Shaw owes as much to Faversham as Faersham owes to Shaw.

Much Talk About Little.

It would need one skilled in solving enigmas to describe what "Misalliane" is all about. It is about nothing in particular, and at the same time almost everything. In the general plan a smug, prosperous, self-satisfied, self-opinionated and more or less hypocritical middle class English family—their proserity is founded upon the prosperous manufacture of underwear—is ranged against some members of the office-holding aristocracy. The daughter in the former—a vertiable huntress of men, and all body, but no brains—is engaged to marry the son in the latter, who is all brains and sensitiveness, but of no physical strength or courage. This is the "Misalliance." Into the group fall an aviator—litterally from the sky—a woman acrobat, and an addle-pated representative of the downtrodden masses. The alliances in the end are those that would be least expected.

All this moves to the accompaniment of a steady stream of Shaw's talk, for whatever character happens to be speaking, it is Shaw who really does the talking. All his familiar insincere hobbies are ridden again. He rails as of old against all conventions and existing institutions. It is all very thin, very diabolic, and sometimes—for Shaw—very forced. But in the main, the surface sparkles, and audiences are sure to be greatly entertained—if they divest themselves of the thought that such great talent coud be put to so much better uses.

Arbuckle as a Briton.

"The lift of the party," was Maclyn Arbuckle as Tarleton, the underwear manufacturer. This dependable, breezy actor, a former St. Louisan, somewhat feased by his simon-pure British role. Nevertheless he created a distinct and humorous characterization which was full of unction, which always indicated amusing discomfiture, and which was staged with full appreciation of every ounce of its fun. It was the best acting Arbuckle has ever done.

All the other performers were of good quality. It is hard to discriminate, but some who basked in the audience's special favor were Elizabeth Risdon, Mrs Edmund Gurney, Katherine Kaelred, Philip Leigh and Warburton Gamble. Mr Faversham deserves special credit for his skilled direction of the whole presentation.

SIXTH MISSOURI INFANTRY IS EN ROUTE TO FORT SILL

NEVADA, Mo., Sept. 29.—The Sixth Missouri Infantry, Col. Linxwiler, commanding, left the State Military Reservation here today for the Divisional Training Camp at Fort Sill, Okla. The men went aboard three special trains of 57 cars, 43 of which were coaches. The first train left at 10 o'clock this morning and the others followed an hour apart.

The departure of the Sixth was scheduled for yesterday, but the coaches which were to have been used in the movement were wrecked in a collision with a Frisco train at Kellyville, Okla. Fourteen coaches which came through the wreck undamaged, reached Nevada this morning.

General H. C. Clark and Mrs. Clark will leave tonight. Only one regiment, the First, from St. Louis, remains on the Nevada reservation. It is expected to get away Monday.

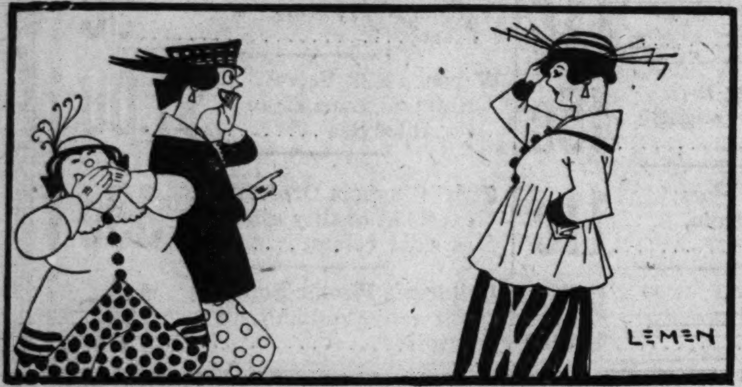
JESTS AND JINGLES

By

W. H. JAMES.

ARABELLA LAPSES.



MISS ARABELLA SIMPKINS BROWN, all bent on conservation.
Said she would keep expenses down to aid the fighting nation.
She vowed by all she held so dear she'd be most economic,
She planned to take her last year's hat and put a ribbon on it
And get along with only that for this year's winter bonnet.
She wouldn't buy another dress, the project was a bold one,
But help our Uncle Sam to go and pulverize the Kaiser.
She wouldn't care how people talked, or even called her dowdy,
If, while in saving garb she walked, we'd lick that Prussian rowdy.
She'd gladly have her boots half-soled, or heeled if they should need 'em,
For this Miss Arabella Brown, the fairest of creation,
Resolved to keep expenses down and practice conservation.
But, sad to say, all flesh is weak and vows are easy broken;
In last year's hat she looked a freak and critics were outspoken,
And you may safely set it down she'll buy a "cute creation."

HIMSELF UND HIM.

WHO runs to shoot us when we fall,
While shouting "Deutschland Over All?"
Der Kaiser!
Who bombs our soldiers when they're sick,
And thinks he's turned a noble trick?
Der Kaiser!
Who guides assassin submarines,
In hope to win by any means?
Der Kaiser!
Who proudly writes his name in blood
And tramples Mercy in the mud?
Der Kaiser!
Who tears a treaty into bits,
And does the thing his purpose fits?
Der Kaiser!
Who claims to rule by right Divine,
While all below him are but swine?
Der Kaiser!
Who talks of peace and bares the steel
To grind a world beneath his heel?
Der Kaiser!
Who laughs when fiendish deeds are done,
Content to be a super-Hun?
Der Kaiser!
Who fools the dupes who call him Great
And die that he may strut in state?
Der Kaiser!
Who walks, a curse upon the earth,
Which damns the day that gave him birth?

JUST TALKING AROUND.

"HELLO, Binks."

"Howdy, Jinks. What are the latest peace terms?"

"I think it's all settled."

"How's that?"

"The fellow next door says he'll restore my garden on certain conditions?"

"What happened to your garden."

"O, I see."

"Yes, and now he's willing to make peace with me."

'That's nice of him.'

"Sure, he is willing to fill up the holes the chickens made, if I accept his terms."

"And what are the terms like?"

"Well, I must give him half of my yard for a chicken pen."

"Is that all?"

"No. His chickens must have a place in the sun and I must feed them."

"And will he replant your garden?"

"I should say not. I must furnish the seed."

"And put in whatever you like?"

"No, I must plant things his chickens will like."

"Say, what's the name of this neighbor of yours?"

"Wilhelm."

"Are you going to accept his terms?"

"No, I'm going to keep on wringing his chickens' necks when they come into my yard."

"Go to it, Albert."

WHAT'S GOING ON.

FRANK A. VANDERLIP is working for the United States Government in special war service at a salary of $1 a year. This goes to show how a deserving man can work his way up. A short time ago he was only the president of the largest national bank in the United States.

One of our drafted boys went to Camp Funston in a $75 suit, "so as to make a good impression on the General." A Sergeant took his suit away from him when he got off the train. He's in overalls now and he hasn't yet seen the General. But he's going to "get the Kaiser," just the same.

News that Senator La Follette's son will join the navy suggests a thought as to the difference between the elder La Follette and the Kaiser, in their respective spheres. La Follette is a minority of one, and the Kaiser is a majority of one.

People We See in the Hotel Lobbies

The old residenters who gather around to tell each other over and over again the tales of the old days. Si Hecker's general store was on the very spot where the hotel now stands.

The fellow who drapes himself over the telephone counter and delivers a cheap monologue to the hard-working operator.

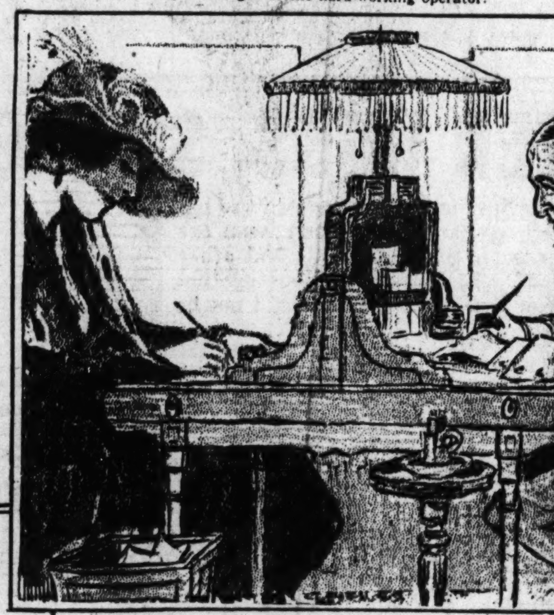
The man who drops in for an after-dinner nap in a big cozy chair



The fellow who has an awful lot of letters to write when the other side of the desk is properly decorated

THE POST-DISPATCH MOVIE: Millie, the Milkmaid, and Carrie, the Cow, Are Between Two Fires

FINANCING FOR NEW INDUSTRIES URGED BY DAVIS

HOW CITY WOULD PROFIT

Suggestion Advanced in Connection With Industrial Survey Being Made.

In connection with the industrial survey that is being made of St. Louis under direction of the Chamber of Commerce, J. Lionberger Davis, the president, is advocating the organization of an Industrial Promotion Corporation to extend financial aid to new enterprises.

The industrial survey is being made by Ernest P. Goodrich, engineer of the Bush Terminal of New York, and several assistants. The object is to determine with definiteness what articles St. Louis can manufacture cheaper than any other city.

The survey will determine the cost of delivering raw materials in St. Louis, in comparison with similar costs in other cities, and it is expected that it will be found that St. Louis can offer facilities at a lower price for the manufacture of many articles than any other city in the country.

The preliminary survey indicates that St. Louis is probably a better city for the manufacture of automobiles, all things considered, than Detroit.

Many Enterprises Blocked.

Davis told a Post-Dispatch reporter that there were many worthy enterprises that could be established in St. Louis if there was some organization that made a business of financing them. The promoters of many of these enterprises are unable to offer such security as banks require for making loans, he said, but if there was a corporation comprised of 100 or more wealthy men who would furnish money for such institutions, the city eventually would become a much more important manufacturing center.

Davis cited as an example of such enterprises a small steel corporation that was financed by a few men who believed that the business would become profitable. Within a year, he said, the business had been thorough-established, and the corporation is able now to obtain the necessary credit to conduct its business.

Cheaper Sites for Industries.

He pointed out that one of the things necessary for the industrial growth of St. Louis is cheaper land for manufacturing sites. He suggested the purchase of a 400-acre tract to be used exclusively for industrial sites. Many manufacturing plants have been located in East St. Louis, he explained, solely because land could be bought much cheaper than on the west side of the river.

When Goodrich was here making his preliminary survey he gave his indorsement to the River des Peres project, by which it is proposed to lay out industrial sites in the River des Peres valley in connection with the scheme to straighten and deepen the channel of the stream or to convert it practically into a sewer.

'WHATEVER MY WIFE SAYS IS TRUE,' J. L. NUGENT DECLARES

Further Than That, Son of Late Dry Goods Merchant Declines to Discuss Divorce Suit.

Julian Lake Nugent of 29 Westmoreland place, son of the late Byron F. Nugent, dry goods merchant, yesterday declined to discuss charges made against him in the divorce petition of his wife, Beatrice Provost Smith Nugent. "Whatever Mrs. Nugent says is true," he said to a Post-Dispatch reporter.

Mrs Nugent charges that several times her husband became intoxicated in public places and she was forced to go after him and take him home. She says he frequently expressed a desire for a divorce.

Mrs. Nugent, who is stopping at Hotel Jefferson with her mother, said she would not ask for alimony. She will seek the custody of her two children, William B. and Julian Lake Nugent Jr. The Nugents have been living apart since May 3. They were married in 1913.

FRANK FLORENCE ACQUITTED OF CHARGE OF MURDER

Former East St. Louis Detective Official Declared He Shot Henderson Trafton in Self-Defense.

Frank Florence, formerly Assistant Chief of Detectives of East St. Louis, was acquitted by a jury in Belleville yesterday of a charge of murdering Henderson Trafton, an East St. Louis detective, whom he shot and killed on the night of Nov. 17 last.

The shooting occurred in East St. Louis at Second street and Missouri avenue. Florence and Trafton had been friends for years, but for several months prior to the shooting they had frequently quarreled. Florence, at his trial, declared he shot in self-defense.

Doctors Stand Amazed at Power of Bon-Opto to Make Weak Eyes Strong---According to Dr. Lewis

Guaranteed to Strengthen Eyesight 50% In One Week's Time in Many Instances

A Free Prescription You Can Have Filled and Use at Home.

Victims of eye strain and other eye weaknesses, and those who wear glasses, will be glad to know that according to Dr. Lewis there is real hope and help for them. Many whose eyes were failing say they have had their eyes restored by this remarkable prescription, and many who once wore glasses say they have thrown them away. One man says, after using it: "I was almost blind. Could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without my glasses and my eyes do not hurt any more. At night they would pain dreadfully. Now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for 15 days everything seems clear. I can read even fine print without glasses." Another who used it says: "I was bothered with eye strain caused by overworked, tired eyes which induced fierce headaches. I have worn glasses for several years, both for distance and work, and without them I could not read my own name on an envelope or the typewriting on the machine before me. I can do both now and have discarded my long distance glasses altogether. I can count the fluttering leaves on the trees across the street now, which for several years have looked like a dim green blur to me. I cannot express my joy at what it has done for me."

It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time, and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by the use of this prescription. Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Drop one Bon-Opto tablet in a fourth of a glass of water and let it dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start and inflammation and redness will quickly disappear. If your eyes bother you even a little it is your duty to take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have saved their sight if they had cared for their eyes in time.

Note: Another prominent physician, to whom the above article was submitted, said: "Yes, the Bon-Opto prescription is truly a wonderful eye remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to eminent eye specialists and widely prescribed by them. I have used it very successfully in my own practice on patients whose eyes were strained through overwork or misfit glasses. I can highly recommend it in case of weak, watery, aching, smarting, itching, burning eyes, red lids, blurred vision or for eyes inflammed from exposure to smoke, sun, dust or wind. It is one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family." Bon-Opto, referred to above, is not a patent medicine or a secret remedy. It is an ethical preparation, the formula being printed on the package. The manufacturers guarantee it to strengthen eyesight 50 per cent in one week's time in many instances or refund the money. It can be obtained from any good druggist, and is sold in this city by Johnson-Enderle-Pauley, Judge & Dolph, Wolff-Wilson and other druggists —ADVERTISEMENT.

KENNEDY ADMITS PAYING FOR AN 'AD' FOR 4-ROOM FLAT

Defendant in $25,000 Breach of Promise Suit Also Sent Woman to Furniture Dealer.

DENIES MARRIAGE PLANS

Declares She Told Him She Wanted to Rent Home for Her Father and Mother.

William E. Kennedy of 5122 Vernon avenue, son of William J. Kennedy, president of a stationery concern, yesterday testified in the $25,000 breach of promise suit brought against him by Miss Ruth Katheryn Behymer of Cape Girardeau, Mo., that he sent flowers to the plaintiff, paid for an advertisement for a four-room flat which was published in the Post-Dispatch, and sent her to a furniture dealer to get prices on fittings for an apartment. However, he denied having asked her to marry him.

The defendant identified a card ebaring the name of a Grand avenue florist, and in answer to a question as to whether he had ever sent flowers to Miss Behymer, replied in a loud voice: "Once."

The testimony was taken in the form of a depositions at the office of Bert F. Fenn, 415 Locust street, attorney for the plaintiff. Anthony F. Ittner acted as referee, and W. S. Campbell represented the defendant. Miss Behymer is a daughter of Homer Behymer, a retired contractor of Cape Girardeau.

Regarding the advertisement, Kennedy said he probably gave the money to Miss Behymer to pay for it, adding: "I gave her various sums. She was always more o rless broke."

Sent Her to Price Furniture.

Kennedyl admitted having sent Miss Behymer to a Mr Kraft of the Furnitur Exchange to price furniture for an apartment. He denied having told Kraft that Miss Behymer was his fiancee, and said he introduced her as "a customer I've sent to you."

"She informed me," said the witness, "that she had received a letter from her mother, that her mother and father were coming to live with her, and that she was going to get a flat of her own, settle down and get married."

"Whom did she say she was going to marry?" the witness was asked.

"She said she had half dozen on her string," said the witness. She named E. J. Meyers, Dr. Bunch, Steve Kelley, Charlie Pearson and Carl White." No further identification was given in the testimony.

"Wasn't the name of W. E. Kennedy on the list?" the witness was asked. He replied with an explosive negative.

Denies Seeing Answers.

Kennedy denied having opened or ever seen several answers to the advertisement which were introduced in evidence, and said he was certain he did not meet Miss Behymer at the Planters Hotel for the purpose of examining the answers. The plaintiff, who wore a fawn-colored coat suit and a wide-brimmed hat of rose color, prompted her attorney as to the details of these questions.

Kennedy deposed that he was single and a salesman for his father's company, earning $80 a month. He said he met Miss Behymer at her boarding house, 5077 Von Versen avenue, on the evening of Feb. 11 last. There were several other couples present, he said, but he did not recall their names.

On examination, he recalled Hilda Hardeck, who, he said, was "living with a family" in the 5300 block on Berlin avenue. He also remembered Mrs. Frederick Andris, who, he asserted, had removed from the Von Versen avenue address and now was living on the South Side.

Says He Did Not Propose.

"Did you ever ask her to marry you?" inquired Attorney Fenn.

"Never!" exclaimed Kennedy, while the plaintiff shot a deadly stare at him from behind her eyeglasses.

Kennedy also denied having met a man named Edward Wilson at Miss Behymer's boarding house and telling him that he was going to marry her. "He was a perfect stranger to me," the witness explained.

Kennedy said he never asked Miss Behymer to get prices on apartments or went with her to look at flats. But he admitted that Kraft visited him with a memorandum of the cost of the furniture Miss Behymer had picked out, and that he took the list to her the same night. She stated that the prices were too high, the witness said, and tore up the list.

Some One Told His Mother.

In answer to another question, Kennedy admitted that his mother, on March 9, received a "mysterious" telephone message, in a woman's voice, informing her that he was planning to marry Miss Behymer. The witness asserted he had no idea of the identity of the woman who sent the message.

Joseph Frank, a salesman for the Hub Furniture Co., testified that the plaintiff visited his store in March and priced furniture for a four-room flat. He said that while in the store she put in a telephone call for a "Mr. Kennedy." Because he was unable to state that the man at the other end of the wire was W. E. Kennedy, Frank was not permitted to repeat Miss Behymer's conversation.

Chester A. Kennedy, brother of the defendant and vice president of the stationery firm, pleaded a failure of memory when asked to recall the subjects of conversation he was supposed to have had with Mrs. Andris concerning the reputation of the plaintiff. He said he had two or three conversations with Mrs. Andris. He was asked whether his brother ever mentioned her name to him.

"If he did it's privileged," said the witness, declining to reply.

He denied that one week prior to the filing of the suit and the first publication of anything concerning the case in the newspapers, he called Mrs. Andris by telephone.

Prays for Husband, Shoots Him Dead.

DENVER, Colo., Sept. 29.—After kneeling at the bedside of her sleeping husband and breathing a prayer for his soul, Mrs. Patrick Henry Riley early today drew a revolver and shot him through the head at their home here. He died three hours later. Mrs. Riley gave herself up to the police. Riley was 44 years old. She is 46. They have no children. "He was cruel and it had to be done," Mrs. Riley told the police.

The Post-Dispatch is the only evening newspaper in St. Louis that receives or publishes news gathered by the Associated Press.

Home Guards Form Social Club.

Company M of the First Regiment Missouri Home Guards, after drill Friday night, formed a social organization and elected the following officers: Theodore Benoist, president; Charles McClure Clark, vice president; T. H. Gist, treasurer; Rudolph Weinert, secretary and John D. Webb, assistant secretary.

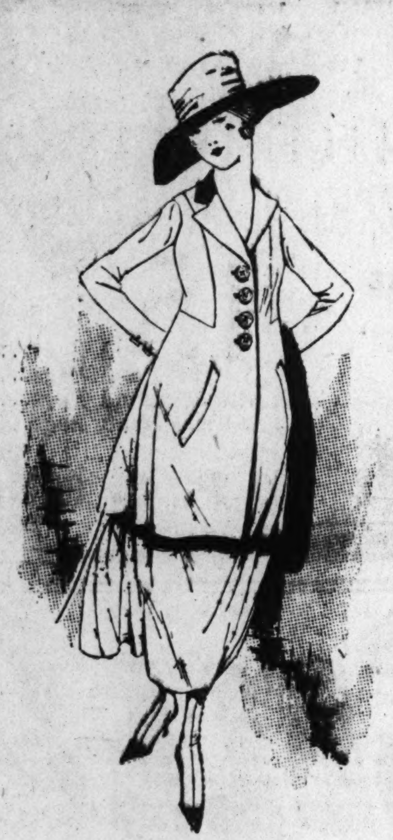
St. Louis' Complete Garment Store

And These Are Offerings That Help to Prove It!



Suits at $24.75

◖ More than 500 suits at this one price—in all sizes for women and misses. Think of that variety to choose from! Everything that is new—serges, gabardines, silvertones and other substantial fabrics — well tailored throughout—practical and substantial.

Frocks at $39.75

◖ Almost as many in number—far greater in the variety of styles. Practical street suits—dressy models — and combinations of the two that will serve every Fall and Winter purpose. Many are fur trimmed—all have the newest fashion features. But the main point is VARIETY.

Plush Coats at $35.00

Some are all of plush. Others are trimmed with Kerami, or Siberian wolf. Plush is always a favored fabric, and these are of the same good quality that has always marked the assortments at this store.

Better Coats at $39.75

◖ Again—VARIETY. Case after case—belted, semi-belted, flaring. New crystal cloths, Burellas, broad cloths and other staples. Wholly practical, as all good coats should be, without sacrificing the attractive features that all women seek.

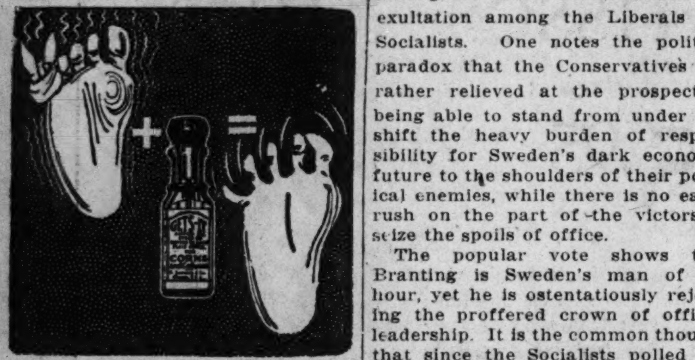
"I Should Worry Now About Corns!"

They Peel Off With "Gets-It."

Two corns are no worse than one, and one is nothing at all—when you use "Gets-It," the one real corn-shrinker, corn-loosener, peel-it-right-off corn-remover. That's because two drops of



One Corn Plus "Gets-It" Equals One Foot, Corn Free.

"Gets-It" eases your corn-pains at once, and you know that that old corn has been "nipped in the bud." "Gets-It" makes cutting and digging at a corn and fussing with bandages, salves or anything else entirely unnecessary. Remember, "Gets-It" is safe.

You'll not have to take off your shoe or pumps under the table at the cafe to ease your squirming soul. See that you get "Gets-It." Don't be insulted by imitations. 25c is all you need pay at any drug store for "Gets-It," or it will be sent direct by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago, Ill.

Sold in St. Louis and recommended as the world's best corn remedy by Judge & Dolph Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Lowell Drug Store, A. P. Bentz, Johnson-Enderle-Pauley Drug Co. and Keiffer Drug Co.

Skin Without Wrinkles Now Easy to Have

There's no excuse for any woman having wrinkles now. It has been found that a simple mixture of saxolite and witchhazel has a remarkable action upon the deepest wrinkles, no matter what their nature, whether caused by worry, habitual frowning, a debilitated condition or the ravages of Father Time. This harmless remedy, which anyone can easily make and use at home, acts both as an astringent and a tonic. The combined effect of tightening the skin and heightening its vitality is to immediately affect every line and wrinkle, keeping the cuticle smooth and firm as in youth.

The proportions are one ounce saxolite (powdered) to one-half pint witchhazel, ingredients which are found in every drug store. The solution should be used as a wash lotion. It is equally effective in disposing of flabbiness of cheek and neck, as well as sagging below the eyes.—ADV.

ALL SWEDEN WORRIED BY IMPENDING HARDSHIPS

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

(Copyright, 1917.)

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 29.—An aspect of the overwhelming defeat of Swedish reactionaries in the elections just concluded, astounding to Americans, is that there is no depression among the beaten Conservatives nor exultation among the Liberals and Socialists. One notes the political paradox that the Conservatives feel rather relieved at the prospect of being able to stand from under and shift the heavy burden of responsibility for Sweden's dark economic future to the shoulders of their political enemies, while there is no eager rush on the part of the victors to seize the spoils of office.

The popular vote shows that Branting is Sweden's man of the hour, yet he is ostentatiously rejecting the proffered crown of official leadership. It is the common thought that since the Socialists polled the greatest popular vote and have a big plurality in the Reichstag, they should take over the Government, but an all-Socialist Government does not look good to the Socialists themselves. Even the Conservatives hint that they will loyally support a Liberal government but the Liberals too are shy. The reason why the winners are loath to take office is hinted at in Dagens Nyheter headlines, saying "Sweden faces a hard winter." Food and other conditions are already bad in Sweden, but they are going to grow so infintely worse before the winter is over that the practical politicians are not enthusiastic about entering the new government.

This is the real reason why there is no probability of Branting's entering the new government and why no one party appears to be willing to assume the heavy responsibility. It can almost certainly be said that the Swartz - Lindman combination is doomed to go, but the political gossip is that there will be procrastination about putting in a new government.

Arab Nationalists Hanged by Turks.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 29.—Reports from Turkey show that Djemal Pasha, commander of the Turkish forces in Syria, has caused to be hanged all the members of the committee of Arabs in Syria, who before the war were engaged in directing the Arab national movement.

New System of Fat Reduction

Here's a new way for all fat people to laugh together at that old bugaboo—Obesity. The saying that "there is nothing new under the sun" does not now apply to fat people any more. Here is something new for them—a new sensation, a new pleasure, a new and graceful figure, easily found by anyone who is passing beyond the limits of slimness. Everyone has heard of the Marmola Prescription; that harmless combination of fat-defying elements which has become known as the most successful of all reducing treatments. Now there comes another idea—the idea of condensing these same pure, harmless ingredients into a pleasant little tablet. Taken after eating and at bed-time, they help the stomach to dispose of all the fatty foods, converting them into compact, solid flesh, muscle and energy, without dieting or exercise. Marmola Prescription Tablets regulate the entire system—do for you what bodily exertion and self-denial cannot do, and the fat, once routed, is gone for good. You can prove all this at a trifling cost. Marmola Prescription Tablets are sold by all druggists or sent post paid by the Marmola Co., 864 Woodward ave., Detroit, Mich. A large case, sufficient to bring lasting results—is but 75c.—ADV.

Don't Stay Gray

Tint your hair to the shade desired with "Brownatone." This new preparation is far superior to any mixture that contains henna, sulphur, silver, lead or similar preparations.

There is no danger of an itching or poisoned scalp when you use "Brownatone," for this simple preparation positively contains no lead, mercury, silver, sulphur, zinc, aniline, coal-tar products or their derivatives. You just brush or comb it into the hair and presto!—your gray hairs instantly disappear—your hair is a beautiful and uniform color throughout—the ends are as dark as the balance and you have any shade desired from a light brown to a black. Just a moment's "touching up" once a month and no one can ever detect it.

No rubbing or washing off—no fading. Prepared in two shades—one to produce golden or medium brown, the other dark brown or black. Two sizes—25 cents and $1.00.

We will send absolutely free, for a short time only, a sample bottle of "Brownatone" if you will send us your name and address accompanied by 10c to help pay postage and packing. No samples at dealers. This offer is made for you to try "Brownatone" Hair Stain, and find for yourself just how superior it is to all so-called "dyes," combs, etc. The Kenton Pharmacal Co., 589 Coppin Bldg., Covington, Ky.

BAVARIAN PREMIER PROTESTS 'INSULTS' IN PRESIDENT'S REPLY

Tells Diet Bill Is Being Drawn to Expend Representation in Reichstag.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 29.—Protest against the "insults and calumnies" in President Wilson's reply to Pope Benedict's peace note, were voiced by Count von Hertling, the Bavarian Premier, in a speech to the Diet, according to Munich dispatchs. After a survey of military and political situations, the Premier took up the subject of the papal peace note and the replies made to it by the central powers as well as the unreceptive attitude of Germany's enemies.

"In all circumstances," said the Premier, "we decline interference by our enemies in our internal political arrangements. We desire ourselves to regulate whatever is susceptible of amelioration or requires alterations."

Count von Hertling, before closing his address, announced that the Bavarian Government was engaged in drawing up a bill which would result in giving trade and industrial interests stronger representation in the Reichstag.

NEW LIBERTY BOND CAMPAIGN WILL BE OPENED TOMORROW

Church Bells to Be Rung and Whistles Blown at 10 A. M. Here.

PARADE WILL BE TUESDAY

Organization Effected to Dispose of War Securities.

The beginning tomorrow of the second Liberty Bond selling campaign, from which $3,000,000,000 or more is to be realized for the Government's war fund, will be marked in St. Louis by the blowing of factory whistles and the ringing of church bells at 10 a. m., the hour set by Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo for the formal launching of the campaign.

The campaign organization of this, the Eighth Federal Reserve District, reports it is fully prepared for a speedy and successful campaign in this district. Rolla Wells, Governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis, is general chairman of this committee and W. R. Compton is head of the Administrative Committee.

Selling Teams Organized.

The actual placing of St. Louis' allotment of the bonds will be handled by the Investment Bankers' Committee, composed of expert bond and insurance salesmen. The chairman of this committee is Clarkson Potter and vice-chairmen are John R. Longmire and J. S. McCourtney. Teams of salesmen, with a captain over each, have been organized and it is expected that there will be friendly rivalry among them for the honor of placing the greatest amount of bonds during the month the campaign is to continue.

To arouse public interest in the bond campaign, a parade in which thousands of persons are expected to participate, will be held downtown beginning at 3:30 p. m. Tuesday. It will start from Twelfth and Market streets and will be led by Capt. D. K. Edmunds of Jefferson Barracks as grand marshal and a company of United States infantry. In the line will be a Mounted Police detail, the two St. Louis regiments of the Home Guard and other organizations.

Interest Rate 4 Per Cent.

Features of the bonds which are expected to appeal to investors are the 4 per cent interest rate, the partial exemption from taxation and the easy terms upon which they may be purchased. A considerable portion of the issue, no doubt will be taken by the purchasers of the first issue, which more only 3½ per cent interest, but which were sold with the privilege of an exchange for any subsequent issue of higher rate.

The only taxes to which the second issue will be subject are estate or inheritance taxes and graduated additional income taxes commonly known as surtaxes and excess profits and war profits taxes. The conditions of these taxes are such that only the purchaser of Liberty Bonds in large amounts would be taxed on his holdings. The ordinary purchaser would not be affected.

The terms on which the bonds are to be sold are 2 per cent with the application, 18 per cent Nov. 15, 40 per cent Dec. 15 and 40 per cent Jan. 15.

MEETING TO PLAN FURTHER CONSERVATION WORK HERE

A meeting of two delegates from each of the women's clubs, civic, religious, business and war relief organizations in St. Louis will be held at 3:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at the Planters Hotel, to discuss plans for the reorganization of the Women's Central Committee on Food Conservation.

This association, which was formed last April to take care of the food conservation program in this city, pending the appointment of a Federal Food Administrator, terminated its six months' career as provided in its original charter on last Tuesday, when an all-day food conservation rally was held at the old Art Museum, at which canned and dried fruits and thrift garden products were displayed.

The principal business of the meeting will be to draft a new constitution, extending the work of the organization over another six months. In addition to the regular delegates, any man or woman who has served the association in any recognized capacity will be made welcome at the meeting and allowed to vote.

50,000 CIRCULARS ADVERTISE OPENING OF NEW MARKET

Farmers Have Been Asked to Supply Jefferson and Park Avenues Station, Which Opens Saturday.

Fifty thousand circulars have been distributed among consumers in the district for a mile around Jefferson and Park avenues to advertise the opening of the second "farmers' market" on Jefferson avenue, below Park avenue, next Saturday. Farmers and gardeners in St. Louis and Jefferson Counties have been asked to bring their produce to the new market.

The work of establishing and advertising the market was in charge of the South Jefferson Avenue Business Men's Ipmrovement Association. Farmers who obtain permits to station their wagons on Jefferson avenue will occupy spaces designated by the Director of Streets and Sewers and will not be allowed to take stands haphazardly.

At the request of the United States Department of Agriculture the Joint Committee on Farmers' Markets will watch the trend of prices charged at these "consumers' markets." The Government wishes to know what effect the St. Louis experiment will have on the cost of food in the city.

Walk-Over SHOES

GIVING women the proper style in footwear is something that the Walk-Over Boot Shop is specially prepared to do. The style in Walk-Over Shoes for women comes from Paris. In that city, a style-expert from the Walk-Over factory not only studies the prevailing modes, but collects information from the makers of women's gowns. This last is a direct clue to what the coming shoe-styles are to be, because shoe-styles always follow close upon the styles of dress.

As a bit of interesting fashion news, we will advise our customers that the trend of fashion seems to point to another year of tan and brown shoe popularity for both men and women. The large number of men, and women too, who are wearing khaki, together with the tendency toward the military colors in all clothes, are increasing the vogue for tan and brown leathers.

We offer our customers in Walk-Over shoes, styles that are correct, in shoes that are designed by experts to afford the utmost ease and comfort, while conforming naturally to the lines and movements of the feet.

PROSECUTION OF MILK PRODUCERS IS RECOMMENDED

District Attorney Karch Advises Government Action Under Sherman Law.

NEW PRICES TOMORROW

Two St. Louis Firms Announce 13-Cent Rate; Others Will Charge 14 Cents.

Federal prosecution of members of the price-fixing Southern Illinois Milk Producers' Association, on the charge of violating the Sherman anti-trust law, has been recommended to the Department of Justice in Washington by United States District Attorney Karch of East St. Louis.

If Karch's recommendations are approved, the prosecution may come in time to halt the new increase in wholesale milk prices which the Illinois dairy owners apparently intend to make on November 1, following their success in getting the St. Louis distributors to pay them $3.20 a hundred pounds for the October milk supply. This was an advance of $1 a hundred pounds (11.63 gallons) over the price of $2.20, paid under the contracts which end today.

St. Louis consumers of milk tomorrow will begin paying 13 or 14 cents a quart, instead of 11 cents. The Grafeman Dairy Co. and the Jersey Farm Dairy Co. yesterday announced a price of 13 cents a quart, 7 cents a pint. The Pevely and St. Louis Dairy Cos. announced a rate of 14 cents a quart, 8 cents a pint, Friday, and yesterday the Union Dairy Co. announced a 14 and 8 cents rate.

13-Cent Rate an Experiment.

The Grafeman company's decision to undersell the other "big fellows" was in the nature of an experiment, Vice-president Mannebach of the company said. As the new prices in all cases are only for a month, he said, the Grafeman company will ascertain if it can make a profit at the 13-cent rate, and at the same time avoid suffering from the decrease in milk consumption which distributors expect to result from the increase in price.

Mannebach also said the company would make economies by consolidating certain routes, and would try to save bottles through the enforcement of the new bottle law, which prohibits the sale of one company's bottles, with name blown in the glass, to other concerns.

District Attorney Karch said yesterday that he had forwarded to Washington a full report on the activities of the dairy owners' combine. He said he had also sent facts regarding the methods of the distributing firms, but that he had gone into more details in the producers' case.

Evidence that the producers' organization enforces its price scale on its 3018 members, was furnished to Karch by a Post-Dispatch reporter, who obtained a printed copy of the association's by-laws. One of the by-laws provides that any member who sells milk at a lower price than that fixed by the milk board of the organization shall be punished by expulsion.

Federal Agent at Meeting.

The absolute fixing of the wholesale price by the association's executive board was demonstrated in the dealings of the last few days with the St. Louis distributors. An agent of the Department of Justice attended the meetings held by the producers' organization at the East St. Louis City Hall, and it is believed that evidence of the kind required for prosecutions has been obtained.

A pont which the Government's representatives have not overlooked is the agreement of the association that its members shall sell only to St. Louis distributors. This is considered clear evidence of an illegal combination in restraint of trade.

Pending action by the Federal authorities, the State of Illinois will probably not undertake a prosecuton according to John E. Hamlin, the East St. Louis lawyer who investigated the milk situation for Attorney-General Brundage of Illinois.

Hamlin said the case appeared, because of the interstate character of the business, to be primarily one for the Federal authorities. This does not mean that there is not materal for a prosecution in the state courts, but that the Federal Government could probably make the prosecution more effectively.

Attorney-General Brundage was in Chicago yesterday, looking into the milk situation there. The milk producers supplying the Chicago market have raised their wholesale price to $3.48 a hundred pounds, and the retail price has risen to 13 cents a quart. Hamlin pointed out that the Chicago case was not an interstate one, as is the St. Louis case. The Chicago market is supplied largely by Illinois producers.

Prices on certified milk, which is frequently prescribed by physicians for infant feeding, have been increased by the Pevely and St. Louis companies to 20 cents a quart, 10 cents a pint, and by the Jersey Farm to 17 and 9 cents.

SCOUT MASTER DROWNED IN FUTILE EFFORT TO SAVE BOY

Alton Church Worker Sinks Suddenly While Bringing Youth to Shore.

Eugene Ferris, 8 years old, of 1612 Maple street, Alton, a Boy Scout, and William Strittnatter, 21, of 1318 State street, Scout Master of a boys' troop, were drowned yesterday afternoon in the Mississippi River a mile north of Alton.

The Scout Master, a strong swimmer, had gone to the aid of young Ferris when the latter, in wading about, got into deep water and was carried out into the river by the current. He had succeeded in getting to the boy and had grasped him by the hair and started swimming for the shore, when both sank.

Strittnatter had taken young Ferris and eight other boys of his troop on a hike. The boys prevailed on him to permit them to get into the water and he joined them.

Strittnatter was cashier for the Beall Tool Co. at Alton and was a church worker.

GENERAL STRIKE DECLARED BY ARGENTINE WORKMEN

Anarchistic Group Gives Ultimatum to Street Car Line—Socialists Refuse to Join Movement.

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 29.—A general revolutionary strike throughout Argentina was declared today by the anarchistic workmen, the strike to include all unions belonging to their federation. The Socialistic workmen's unions refused to join in the movement.

The only street car line in Buenos Aires that had not been affected by the strike that has been in progress in the city was given until 11 o'clock tonight to comply with the workers' demands.

It is asserted by persons close to President Irigoyen that he will declare martial law throughout the republic as soon as Congress adjourns, at midnight on Sunday. This is expected to put an end to the countrywide agitation favoring a rupture with Germany, as well as stopping the general strike.

THREE PERSONS INJURED IN COLLISION OF AUTOMOBILES

Edward F. Beach, Whose Car Was Commandeered by Lewis Boys, Is Arrested.

In a cillision of automobiles owned by Edward F. Beach of the St. Regis Apartments and Fred Hensick of Washington avenue, at 10:25 last night, three members of Hensick's family were thrown to the street and slightly injured. They were: Mrs. Hensick, 35 years old, and their two children, Gilbert, 11, and Virginia, 8.

Beach was arrested, charged with careless driving and feloniously wounding. He was driving south on Sarah street and Hensick was westbound on Washington. It was Beach's car that the Lewis brothers seized about two years ago, when he and Mrs. Beach were in it in front of the St. Regis Apartments, and drove on a wild ride to escape from the police when about to be caught in a robbery.

AMERICAN HOSPITAL UNITS ALREADY ON FIGHTING FRONT

By Associated Press.

AMERICAN TRAINING CAMP IN FRANCE, Sept. 29.—While awaiting field experience with their own troops the army hospitals within the American zone are sending mobile units composed of doctors, nurses and orderlies to both the French and British fronts. These units are operating in the most advanced casualty clearing stations in co-operation with the British and French surgeons.

Doctors and nurses alike are equipped with gas masks and other means of protection against German attacks, which are becoming more and more frequent on hospitals in the forward areas.

The American hospitals are plainly marked with great red crosses. They are situated far from any fighting units or supply depots for fighting material, so if they should be bombed, it will be a deliberate act by the enemy aimed direct at the sick and wounded and other noncombatants.

FIRST AMERICAN TELEPHONE LINE IN OLD WORLD COMPLETED

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Sept. 29.—The first complete American telephone line ever operated in the old world was finished today. It connects Gen. Pershing's headquarters with the remotest hamlet where American troops are quartered. It totals in length hundreds of miles, its last link being 35 miles long. The only thing about the system that is French is its poles, which were cut in the forest by a detachment of cavalrymen turned wood choppers. The wires, insulators and instruments are all American.

The system was erected by the signal corps and an engineering detachment, composed, as it happened of Pittsburgers. The first American message over the line to headquarters from the commanding officer was characteristically crisp: "Hello, how does she work?"

Minnesota Petition Referred to Committee on Privileges and Elections.

REPORT ON IT UNLIKELY

Object of Attack Absent When Memorial Is Presented—It Is Not Discussed.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—A communication from the Governor of Minnesota and the State Public Safety Commission requesting the expulsion from the Senate of Senator La Follette of Wisconsin, was presented in the Senate today by Senator Kellogg of Minnesota and referred by Vice President Marshall to the Senate Privileges and Elections Committee.

Senator Kellogg received the communication. Before presenting it he conferred with Vice President Marshall, Senator Martin of Virginia, Democratic leader, and Senator Pomerene of Ohio, chairman of the committee to which it was referred. Any further action will first come from the committee.

Senator La Follette was not in the chamber when the communication was presented. There was no discussion.

Four other communications, one from the Washburn Loyalty League of Washburn, Wis., and three from individuals demanding La Follette's expulsion, were received by the Vice President and presented to the Senate.

Senator Pomerene indicated that the Privileges and Elections Committee would take no action, for the present, at least. He said he could not decide until after conferring with other members and that a quorum of the committee could not be obtained probably during this session.

The Minnesota resolution follows:

"Whereas, Senator Robert M. La Follette made an address of a disloyal and seditious nature at a public meeting before a large audience at the Nonpartisan League convention in St. Paul on the 20th of September.

"Whereas, The utterances of Senator La Follette, with all the prestige of his high office as a Senator of the United States, made under protection of a guarantee of the president of the Nonpartisan League that no disloyal speeches would be permitted during the alleged conference between producers and consumers on the high cost of living, have already served to create treasonable sentiment in the State of Minnesota, and, being spread through the public press, can have no other effect than to weaken the support of the Government in carrying on the war, be it hereby

"Resolved, That the Minnesota Commission of Public Safety respectfully petitions the Senate of the United States to institute proceedings looking to the expulsion of the said Robert M. La Follette from the Senate as a teacher of disloyalty and sedition, giving aid and comfort to our enemies and hindering the Government in the conduct of the war. Be it further

"Resolved, That copies of this resolution, together with copies of La Follette's speech, be forwarded the President of the Senate, Senators Nelson and Kellogg."

STUDENTS AT SCOTT FIELD COMMENCE "SOLO" FLIGHTS

Two in the Air Alone for 20 Minutes; Four Others Go Up Without Instructors.

Army aviation students at Scott Field, near Belleville, after three weeks of training, have begun to make "solo" flights, that is, to go alone in an airplane.

The first student to go up alone was M. O. White of Boston. Shortly afterward, W. J. Johnson of Jersey City, N. J., was permitted to go up alone. The flights lasted about 20 minutes and were entirely satisfactory to the officers.

Four other students then made flights alone. They were H. M. Pierce, N. E. Pierson, H. H. McVey and Joe Wehner. Heretofore the students always had been accompanied while in the air by an instructor who had control over the machine.

6 SENTENCED IN SAN FRANCISCO FOR ANTI-DRAFT CONSPIRACY

Attorney Daniel O'Connell Told by Judge His Acts Were Close to Treason.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 29.—Daniel O'Connell, an attorney, was sentenced to seven years in prison in the United States District Court today for conspiring to obstruct the selective draft law.

"The act for which you stand convicted was very close to treason," declared Judge W. C. Van Fleet in sentencing O'Connell.

Others indicted and convicted with O'Connell were sentenced as follows: Dr. E. Hoffman, three years; Carl Wacker, 18 months, and a fine of $250; Thomas Carey, two years; Herbert D. and David J. Smith, brothers, one year. Appeals will be taken.

ALLEGED FINANCIAL AGENT OF GERMANY ARRESTED IN PARIS

Levantine Resident of Paris Declared to Have Handled $8,000,000 German Fund.

"TO SUBSIDIZE THE PRESS"

Propaganda in Behalf of Premature Peace Charged to the Prisoner.

PARIS, Sept. 29.—Bolo Pasha, the Levantine resident of Paris who has been the object of a judicial investigation concerning his supposed relations with the enemy, was arrested today at his hotel where he has been confined to his rooms for several days by illness.

In today's issue the editor of Action Francaise declares the German Government turned over to Bolo Pasha about 40,000,000 francs ($8,000,000) part through the former Khedive of Egypt, in Switzerland and part through an American channel.

The money, it was stated, was intended to subsidize the press in the interest of premature peace.

The arrest of Bolo Pasha had been expected for a long time, but was delayed by the difficulties of securing positive evidence regarding the course of large sums of money known to have passed through his hands.

Swiss banks declared that as the case was a political one they were unable to give the information requested. Captain Bouchardon, acting as examining magistrate for the court-martial in Paris, received information from the United States concerning the origin of part of the funds handled by Bolo Pasha.

Part of Money Reported Traced.

According to statements printed in the afternoon newspapers, funds amounting to 10,000,000 francs ($2,000,000) have been traced back from Bolo Pasha to the Deutsche Bank.

Two police inspectors are keeping close watch upon Bolo in his apartment, while Dr. Socquet, a physician designated by Capt. Bouchardon, is engaged in conferences with the arrested man's doctor as to whether the condition of the prisoner will permit his transfer. If the decision is a negative one he will remain under close watch until he is able to be removed to prison.

Immediately after his arrest Bolo Pasha wrote a letter to Premier Painleve which was delivered to the premier by Jacqus Bonzon, Bolo's counsel. The letter read:

"M. Painleve, Minister of War, supreme head of military justice: "I beg of you to finish with the affair. I have been tortured for eight months and nothing reprehensible has been found against me. I have accepted all investigation regarding my fortune, going back from yesterday to a remote period, and have given all facilities to justice. My health has given out now that I am before my judges and I charge Maitre Bonzon to hand you this letter."

Information From U. S.

An official communication issued by Premier Painleve this afternoon read:

"The Bolo affair is going to enter into a new phase. Capt. Bouchardon has just received from the United States important information hitherto unknown here. It concerns particularly the origin of funds to a considerable amount held by the accused. In consequence of this information, Bolo was placed under arrest."

ONLY 10.35 MILES OF STREETS PAVED HERE IN THE LAST YEAR

Record Lowest, With One Exception, in 12 Years—Cost of Work Was $561,596.

New streets constructed in St. Louis in 1916-17 totaled 10.35 miles, which, with one exception, was the lowest mileage built in about 12 years, according to the annual report of President Kinsey of the Board of Public Service, filed yesterday. The cost of this improvement was $561,596.98.

Brick was used as paving material on 4.29 miles. The 7.33 miles of alleys built in the same period cost $153,689.74. New sewers laid in the 12 months totaled 8.37 miles and cost $327,230.

The additions bring the mileage of hard paved streets to 413.26 miles. There are also 260.30 miles of soft paved streets. The total length of sewers, including the additions made last year is 859.82.

Anarchist Wins French War Cross.

Paris, Sept. 29.—Louis Maitre Jean, husband of the notorious Rirette, whose name frequently has been mentioned in connection with the Bonnot gang of Anarchists, has been decorated with the war cross for "continuously carrying orders to and fro under heavy bombardment and rifle fire during the offensive of Aug. 19." He was three times wounded, once when carrying aid to his wounded Lieutenant. He abandoned his anarchistic beliefs during the war.

$120,000,000 OF NEW WAR BONDS TO ST. LOUIS DISTRICT

This Is Minimum Amount and McAdoo Asks for Subscriptions of $200,000,000.

ISSUE IS APPORTIONED

Treasury Secretary Expects $5,000,000,000 Response to $3,000,000,000 Offering.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—Treasury officials tonight announced the apportionment of the Second Liberty Bond issue, to be offered next Monday, among the various Federal Reserve districts of the country. Virtually two-thirds of the loan is expected to be raised by the New York, Boston, Cleveland and Chicago districts, with one-half apportioned to the first three named districts.

Apportionments indicate only what each district is expected to do and may be entirely upset, as in the case of the first Liberty Loan, by the actual subscriptions. In making the apportionments, officials used two bases the minimum of $3,000,000,000 and an expected amount of $5,000,000,000. Apparently in offering the second issue officials hope to realize a $5,000,000,000 response.

Apportionment by Districts.

Following is the apportionment by Federal Reserve Districts as announced by the Treasury Department:

District.	Per Cent.	Minimum.	Expected Amount.
Boston	10	$300,000,000	$500,000,000
New York	30	900,000,000	1,500,000,000
Philadelphia	8¼	250,000,000	415,000,000
Cleveland	10	300,000,000	500,000,000
Richmond	4	120,000,000	200,000,000
Atlanta	2¾	80,000,000	135,000,000
Chicago	14	420,000,000	700,000,000
St. Louis	4	120,000,000	200,000,000
Minneapolis	3½	105,000,000	175,000,000
Kansas City	4	120,000,000	200,000,000
Dallas	2½	75,000,000	125,000,000
San Fran.	7	210,000,000	350,000,000
Total	100	$3,000,000,000	$5,000,000,000

"In each case," the announcement reads, "The amount has been computed on the percentage basis and while the banking resources of each district—that is, the total resources of the national banks, state banks and trust companies—have been given large consideration, other factors have been taken into account, such as the income tax collected from each dstrict, the assessed value of property therein, the subscriptions received from each district to the first Liberty Loan and the amount of bonds allotted on such subscriptions, the capital available for bond investment in each district and its population."

Basis of Apportionment New.

The basis of apportionment thus varies materially from that used in the first Liberty Loan, when the banking resources of each Federal Reserve District were the sole basis of calculation. Apportionment by states, easy of computation in the first issue, cannot be determined except by treasury experts in the second offering. It is likely that such apportionment will be announced shortly.

Governors of the Federal Reserve banks have been notified by Secretary McAdoo of the apportionments. The sums stated in the "Amount expected" column are designated as "the amount which each district should subscribe in order to secure the result imperatively demanded for the defense and security of the nation."

BRITISH BLOCKADE OF GERMANY IS TO BE DRAWN EVEN TIGHTER

LONDON, Sept. 29.—A still more vigorous blockade of Germany is to be enforced by the entente allies as a result of the conference of Lord Robert Cecil, British Minister of Blockade, with the French Minister of Blockade.

Today the King signed a proclamation prohibiting the exportation of certain articles to Sweden and Holland. The King's approval was also given to other measures to make it more difficult for the enemy to obtain supplies through neutral countries.

GERMAN AIRPLANES IN GROUPS AGAIN BOMBARD LONDON

Bombs Dropped in Northeastern and Southeastern Districts and Elsewhere---Two Raiders Shot Down Friday.

LONDON, Sept. 29.—Hostile airplanes raided London again tonight. An official communication from the home office on the latest raid says: "Hostile airplanes crossed the coasts of Kent and Essex in groups between 8 and 9 o'clock. Several attacks were made upon London and some bombs were dropped in the northeast and southeastern districts. Bombs were also dropped at various places in Kent and Essex. No reports of casualties have yet been received.

London's warning of an impending raid was given quickly by policemen riding through the streets with "take cover" signs on their breasts, and everyone hurried to shelter. Soon the distant roar of guns was heard. Then the explosion of guns and the crack of shrapnel bursting in the air came nearer. The flash of the bursting shells in the night was incessant, From all directions the defense guns boomed.

Mingled with the sound of the guns the whirring of Gothas was heard overhead. Bombs began to drop, as could be told by their peculiar explosion. The fire of the anti-aircraft guns seemed heavier than in any previous raids and it was obvious that barrages were being thrown up to defeat the purpose of the raiders. At this time it appears that the barrages at least prevented the raiders from having their own way.

"Lord French, commander of the home defenses, reports that the latest information indicates that about 20 enemy machines participated in last night's raid. Bombs were dropped in a number of places in Kent, Essex and Suffolk, but no casualties and only insignificant damage has been reported up to the present. Repeated attacks were made on London, but in no case did the raiders penetrate the outer defenses.

"One enemy airplane is reported to have been shot down in the Thames estuary and a second one off the coast."

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 29.—A German airplane of the Gotha type descended near Sas Van Gentin, Zeeland, this morning. One of its three passengers was severely wounded. The two unwounded passengers attempted to escape to the frontier, but were caught, and all three will be interned. The machine was armed with three machine guns and had aboard six bombs.

Italian Official.

Rome Seut. 29.—The official statement issued today said:

"Yesterday, by completely successful surprise attack, our troops rectified our line between Sella-di-Dol, and the northern slopes of Monte San Gabriele. Eight officers, 261 men and a few machine guns were captured. The position was maintained and strengthened notwithstanding the fact that the enemy, having recivered from his surprise, repeatedly counter attacked.

"Our air attacks were concentrated on the military zone of the Carso which was effectively bombarded with about three tons of bombs, and on the fortified naval center of Pola, where the submarine base and arsenal were again bombed with numerous projectiles by a strong bombarding squadron; an enemy machine was forced to land near Tolmno and was subsequently destroyed by our artillery.

"Last night hostile aircraft dropped incendiary bombs on the town of Palmanova. Very slight damage was done and there was no casualties."

French Official.

PARIS, Sept. 29.—The official statement issued by the War Office tonight reads:

"The artillery action was quite intense on the Aisne front, particularly in the sectors of Pantheon and Hurtebise. On the right bank of the Meuse the bombardment continued violent on both sdes in the region north of the Bois de Chaume."

German Official.

BERLIN, via London, Sept. 29.—Today's official statement says:

"Violent drumfire in the evening east of Ypres was followed only by local British infantry attacks at Zonnebeke, which we repulsed. On the Ypres-Passchendaele road the enemy was driven out of the crater line which he still held there."

British Official.

LONDON, Sept. 29.—The official report from British headquarters in France tonight reads:

"This morning the enemy attempted to raid two of our posts on Hill 70, north of Lens. The attacks were repulsed after a sharp fight; we captured a few prisoners. Two of our men are missing.

"On Sept. 28 artillery and photographic work was continued by our airplanes. More than four tons of bombs were dropped on the enemy's airdromes at Gontrode and Carmieres and on hostile dumps, billets and railways. Another six tons were dropped on similar targets, including airdromes at Gontrode, where the enemy's aircraft guns, machine guns and searchlights were most active. In spite of the heavy barrage which was put up over the airdromes, all our machines returned. During the raids our airplanes again used machine-gun fire to good effect against all the enemy troops and transports seen.

"As a result of the air fighting, nine German machines were brought down and four others were driven down out of control. One machine was brought down by anti-aircraft guns. Three of our airplanes failed to return."

The Admiralty also announced today that naval aviators had dropped seven tons of bombs on military establishments in Belgium.

British Naval Aircraft Raid Enemy Stores in Syria.

LONDON, Sept. 29.—A British official statement issued tonight on aerial operations, says:

"Naval aircraft made a bombing raid Thursday on storehouses, etc., on the southwestern side of Beirut Harbor (Syria). Many direct hits were observed and fires were started. It was observed that the damage caused to a shed as a result of the August raid was in the course of repair. All our machines returned safely. The storehouses on the Mole were afterwards shelled by a cruiser and set afire."

British Take Important German Supply Base in Africa.

LONDON, Sept. 29.—The War Office tonight announced a further success against the German forces in German East Africa. The announcement follows:

"Our troops yesterday occupied Nahungo, an important German supply base, 82 miles southwest of Kilwa, after considerable resistance. Our advances in the Lukeledi Valley and the forward movement of the Belgians on Mahenge are continuing steadily."

FIVE MORE VACANT HOUSES BURNED IN EAST ST. LOUIS

Frame Structures Had Been Vacated by Negroes During Riots —Three Men Arrested.

Five vacant frame houses, occupied by negroes prior to the recent race riots in East St. Louis, were destroyed by fire last night. The houses were at 614 and 624 and 521 South Fourth street and 626 and 419 Pigatt avenue.

Deputy Fire Marshal Brucks, after an inquiry, caused George W. Johnson, 64, years old of Fourth street and Trendley avenue; Arthur White, 31, of 416 Converse avenue, and William Gietermann of 418 Market avenue, to be taken into custody pending investigation. About a dozen such vacant houses have been burned since the riots.

Two More Americans Die Overseas.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—Two more deaths among the American troops abroad were announced today in a cablegram from Major-General Pershing. Private W. C. Sullivan of an infantry regiment died Sept. 24 of cerebro spinal meningitis. Benjamin Heyward, a stevedore, died Sept. 24 of heart disease.

Order for Lenine's Arrest.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 29.—Premier Kerensky has issued an order to the criminal investigator to employ the militia to arrest Nikolai Lenine and M. Zinovieff, his assistant in the Maximalist agitation.

STORM KNOWN TO HAVE KILLED 14 PERSONS ON GULF COAST

Property Damage Inland Apparently Greater Than First Was Supposed.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 29.—At least 14 persons lost their lives in the hurricane which swept the east gulf coast yesterday, and property damage inland apparently was greater than first supposed. Some of the storm-stricken area, notably Pensacola, Fla., still is cut off from wire communication tonight.

Nine fishermen were drowned in Sister Lake, near Houma, La., by the capsizing of a shrimp schooner, while Crestview, Fla., reported that five persons had been killed there.

Where the storm swept inland over Southern Alabama and Florida it did considerable damage to crops. It apparently had diminished greatly late today and had passed out over the South Atlantic Coast.

British Columbia Dry.

VANCOUVER, B. C., Sept. 29.—At 10 o'clock tonight the legal sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage ceased in British Columbia. Monday the provisions of the new provincial prohibition act becomes operative and the bars and the liquor stores go out of existence.

CONFEREES AGREE ON $2,700,000,000 WAR TAX BILL

Revised Measure, to Be Reported Monday, Levies $1,000,000,000 on War Excess Profits and $842,000,000 on Incomes.

Married Persons Will Pay 2 Per Cent on Incomes Exceeding $2000 and Unmarried, $1000.

One-Cent Tax on Letters Is Imposed, Levies on Liquor Are Heavy and Stamp Taxes Are Retained.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—Final agreement on the $2,700,000,000 war tax bill was reached late today by the Senate and House Conferees and the report will be presented to the House Monday. Levies of approximately $1,000,000,000 on war excess profits and $842,000,000 on incomes were left unchanged but a new system of calculating excess profits was adopted.

The conference report provides that the graduated tax of from 20 to 60 per cent on excess profits of corporations, partnerships, and individuals shall be levied on a basis of invested capital compared with invested capital of the three pre-war years of 1911, 1912, 1913. This is a substitute for the Senate taxes of from 12 to 60 per cent based upon a similar comparison of pre-war and present profits.

The income tax section virtually was unchanged except for rearrangement of surtaxes on incomes between $15,000 and $40,000. The graduated surtaxes of from one to 50 per cent on incomes from $5000 to those of a million dollars and over were approved.

Two Per Cent on Incomes.

The Senate increase of from two to four per cent of the income tax on corporations, joint stock companies and insurance companies was approved, together with the new normal individual tax of two per cent on incomes of unmarried persons in excess of $1000 and of married persons of more than $2000.

The graduated excess profits rates are 20 per cent on excess profits not in excess of 15 per cent of the invested capital for taxable year; 25 per cent on profits in excess of 15 per cent and not over 20 per cent of such capital; 35 per cent on excess over 20 and under 25 per cent of capital; 45 per cent on excess over 25 per cent and under 33 per cent of capital and a maximum of 60 per cent on profits in excess of 33 per cent of such capital.

In calculating war excess profits the term "invested capital of corporations and partnerships" was declared to include "actual cash paid in, actual cash value or other tangible property paid for stock of shares, at the time of payment or January 1, 1914, but in no case to exceed the par value of the original securities, paid in or earned surplus and undivided profits used or employed in the business, exclusive of undivided profits earned during the taxable year."

The allowances for intangible assets, include "actual cash value of patents and copyrights paid in for stocks or shares at the time of payment *good, will, trade marks trade brands, franchises*if for bona fide payments not to exceed the cash value." It stipulates that such intangible assets exchanged for securities, before March 3, 1917, not exceeding 20 per cent of the total shall be included at a value not exceeding a fair cash value at the time of purchase.

Tax on Second-Class Mail.

In lieu of the House zone tax on second-class publications the conferees included a new zone system effective July 1, 1918, with different rates for reading matter and advertising matter with special, but increased rates for religious, agricultural publications.

A flat increase on reading matter of a quarter of a cent a pound until July 1, 1919 and 1-2 cent thereafter was provided. Advertising matter exceeding 5 per cent of the total space would be taxed from a quarter to 2 1-4 cents additional until July 1, 1919, and from 1-2 cent to 4 1-2 cents more until July 1, 1920; and from 3-4 cent to 6 3-4 cents to 1921 and from one cent to 9 cents thereafter.

An additional 1-8 cent per pound until July 1, 1919, and 1-4 cent thereafter on religious, agricultural, fraternal and similar publications was adopted.

The one-cent tax on letters, excepting drop letters and postal cards, was restored by the conferees. A one cent additional tax on postal and private mailing cards was added. The first-class mail increases are estimated to raise $90,000,000 and is effective thirty days after the passage of the act.

The Senate provision [illegible]

from postage letters written by soldiers and sailors abroad was retained.

The Senate one-cent stamp tax on bank checks was not restored, but its tax of 1 cent on parcel post packages costing 25 cents or more was retained. Other stamp taxes all made effective Dec. 1 were retained and the House tax on indemnity bonds was restored.

The conferees levied 8 per cent of the Senate rate of 5 and the House rate of 10 per cent on passenger transportation, estimated to raise from the compromise levy about $60,000,000, instead of $37,500,000 under the Senate plan. The three per cent tax on freight transportation was retained and the tax on express transportaton was increased so that one cent would be levied on each 20 cents paid, instead of each 25 cents.

The House 10 per cent tax on Pullman accommodations, cut to five per cent, by the Senate, was restored and it is estimated to raise $5,000,000.

In lieu of the House five per cent tax on sales of automobiles by manufacturers and the Senate federal license tax on owners, the conferees adopted a three per cent tax on all motor vehicles, including trucks, payable by manufacturers, producers and importers.

Taxes of three per cent on manufacturers' sales of musical nstruments and jewelry also were written in, with a tax of 1-4 of a cent a foot on motion picture film.

On sporting goods, the revised bill levies three per cent on manufacturers' sales instead of five per cent proposed by the House and two per cent by the Senate. The three per cent levy also was adopted for cameras in lieu of the Senate two per cent rate, and chewing gum manufacturers would be taxed two per cent of gross sales, a reduction of three per cent from the House rate.

The Senate two per cent manufacturers' sales taxes on perfumes and patent medicines were retained.

A new system of graduated inheritance taxes was written into the bill in lieu of the House plan and despite the Senate's rejection of such taxes. The new rates on inheritances, with those of Americans in military service exempted, range from one half of one per cent on $50,000 estates to ten per cent on estates of $10,000,000 and more.

The bulk of the increases of between $250,000,000 and $300,000,000 made by the conferees in the Senate bill was obtained from the postage, public utilities and manufacturing sales sections and the new inheritance taxes.

With few exceptions the new taxes are effective with the passage of the act.

Both Senator Simmons and Representative Kitchin, heading the Senate and House conferees, tonight expressed satisfaction with the conference revisions and they believe the compromise measure is an improvement over both the Senate and House bills.

Income Tax Section.

The income tax section was adopted virtually as written by the Senate. The new two per cent normal tax on incomes of more than $2000 for married persons and $1000 for single persons is in addition to the present law exempting incomes of less than $4000 for married persons and $3000 for single persons. Thus those between the new low exemption bases and the present exemptions will pay only the new two per cent tax, but married persons having an income of $4000 or more and single persons whose income is $3000 or more would pay the full four per cent normal tax. The Senate provision allowing an additional exemption of $200 for each dependent child to heads of families subject to the present law was retained. The exemption for children, however, does not apply to those subject to the new reduced taxes with the $2000 and $1,000 exemptions, respectively, for married and single persons.

Surtaxes were agreed on as follows: One per cent on incomes over $5000 and less than $7500; two per cent between $7500 and $10,000; three per cent between $10,000 and $12,500; four per cent between $12,500 and $15,000; five per cent between $15,000 and $20,000; seven per cent between $20,000 and $40,000; ten per cent between $40,000 and $60,000; fourteen per cent between $60,000 and $80,000; eighteen per cent between $80,000 and $100,000; 22 per cent between $100,000 and $150,000; 25 per cent between $150,000 and $200,000; 30 per cent between $200,000 and $250,000; 34 per cent between $250,000 and $300,000; 37 per cent between $300,000 and $500,000; 40 per cent between $500,000 and $750,000; 45 per cent between $750,000 and $1,000,000 and 50 per cent on incomes exceeding $1,000,000.

Heavy Tax on Liquors.

Increased Senate rates on whiskey and beer were retained and the rate on wines somewhat reduced. The tax on distilled spirits was made $2.10 a gallon when for beverage use and $1 less for industrial purposes, estimated to raise $135,000,000. The amendment prohibiting importation of distilled spirits for beverage use was retained. Floor taxes to reach withdrawn liquors were approved. Beer was taxed $1.50 a barrel additional, to raise $46,000,000, an increase of 25 cents a barrel over the present house rate. Present wine taxes were doubled.

Taxes on non-alcoholic beverages were compromised. On prepared syrups and extracts the taxes, graduated from 5 to 20 cents, instead of from 3 to 12 cents a gallon, were adopted. Grape juice and other soft drinks are taxed 1 cent a gallon, as provided by the Senate on reducing the original two-cent rate of the House.

Senate rates on cigars and cigarettes were retained but those on snuff were increased from four to five cents a pound.

Stamp Taxes Agreed On.

Stamp taxes agreed upon are:

Bonds of indebtedness, four cents on each $100; indemnity and surety bonds, 50 cents; parcel post packages, one cent for each 25 cents of the cost of transportation; capital stock, original issues, five cents per $100; sales and transfers, two cents per $100; sales of produce on exchange, two cents for each $100 value in merchandise; drafts, checks, payable other than on sight or demand, promissory notes, except bank notes for circulation and renewals, two cents for all sums below $100 and two cents for each additional $100 or fraction thereof; conveyance papers, 50 cents between $100 and $500, and 50 cents each additional $500; custom house entries, from 25 cents to $1; entry for withdrawal from banded warehouse, 50 cents; passenger vessel tickets for ports other than those in the United States, Canada and Mexico, between $10 and $30, one dollar; between $30 and $60, three dollars, and above $60, five dollars; voting proxies, ten cents; power of attorney, 25 cents; playing cards, decks of not more than 54 cards, an additional five cents on the present rates.

House and Senate provisions for a tax of 5 cents each on telegraph, telephone and radio messages costing 15 cents or more, and designated to raise $7,000,000, were retained, but the House tax on gas, electric and telephone service was eliminated.

Taxes on Life Insurance.

Taxes on life insurance, eliminated from the House bill in the Senate. were amended and reinstated, raising about $5,000,000. Effective Nov. 1, the new taxes on new insurance policies issue sare 8 cents per $100, or fraction thereof, on life insurance, and 1 cent per $1 on the premium charged on marine, casualty, fire and inland insurances.

Amusement taxes agreed upon provide that all persons entering places of amusement free, except employes, and officials on duty, and children under 12, would pay a tax rate of 1 cent on each 10 cents or fraction thereof of the admisison charge. This tax also would apply to cabarets and similar performances where the cost of entertainment is included in other costs, such as service. Holders of annual box seats would pay 10 per cent of the annual rental. Nickel theaters and shows, rides and other outdoor park amusements with a maximum admission of 10 cents, and benefit entertainments and agricultural fairs, were exempted.

After Nov. 1, 1917, members of all clubs, except certain fraternal orders, paying more than $12 annual dues, would be subjected to a 10 per cent tax.

On excess profits the conferees agreed upon a minimum deduction of 7 per cent and a maximum of 10 per cent, instead of the 6 to 10 per cent fixed by the Senate. Other exemptions are $3000 for corporations and $6000 for individuals. Corporations, partnerships and individuals having no capital stock would pay a flat rate of 8 per cent on net profits in excess of $3000 on corporations and of $6000 on individuals and partnerships.

Miscellaneous income tax amendments inserted by the Senate were generally adopted, including the so-called Jones amendment for a tax of 10 per cent on corporations' undistributed surplus, without allowance for income taxes paid. The 10 per cent tax would not apply to undistributed income actually invested or employed in business or invested in Federal securities after Sept. 1, 1917, and a 5 per cent penalty for surplus retained, but not employed, is provided.

In making provision for administration and collection of the new and existing taxes, the conferes provided that the special tax of 12½ per cent on war munitions manufactures shall be reduced to 10 per cent, but retained to Jan. 1, 1918. It now yields about $29,000,000 annually, and the Senate had proposed its repeal.

MAN WAITS 7 YEARS TO BECOME A CITIZEN AND IS TOO LATE

Because the application of Carl Wilhelm Bauman, 34 years old, of Alton, a native of Russia, for final naturalization papers was filed two days later than the seven years' limit from the time of the application for first papers, he will have to begin the naturalization process all over again, setting him back five years in his effort to become a citizen.

Bauman applied at the Alton City Court for second papers yesterday. It was found his first papers were taken out Sept. 26, 1910. He said he had neglected applying for second papers because he thought there was plenty of time. He will have to take out first papers again and wait five years before the second papers may be issued.

POLICE ROW CAUSED INCREASE IN CRIME, GRAND JURY SAYS

The June grand jury, holding that there recently has been an increase in crime in St. Louis, in its final report yesterday to Judge Davis lays the blame to the dissension which has existed for several months in the Board of Police Commissioners.

No names are mentioned in the report, but it is apparent that the reference is to the disagreements between President Mansur and Commissioner Fouke on one side, and Commissioners Giraldin and Sheahan on the other, which last week made it necessary for Mansur and Fouke to call in Mayor Kiel, ex-officio a member of the board, and to cast deciding votes in the proceedings.

The grand jury says in its report:

"After a thorough investigation of the crime situation in St. Louis, the grand jury is convinced that there has recently been a great increase of crime in this city.

Heads Not in Harmony.

"It is not difficult to conceive why this is true when the heads of the Police Department are not in harmony. The condition which the testimony before us shows to exist among the heads of the Police Department can only impair the usefulness of the department as a whole. It is our opinion that if the police officers are more vigilant in the performance of their duties and have the united support and co-operation of the heads of the Police Department, the condition will be greatly remedied.

"No member of the Police Department from the highest to the lowest, should continue with the department, unless he can and will render effective service. Results, and not personal or political favoritism should determine the fitness of the officer for whatever position he holds.

"With the approach of winter, the grand jury strongly urges upon the heads of the Police Department a thorough co-operation and its best efforts towards reduction of crime in this city."

Fouke, who was elected vice president of the Board of Police Commissioners Friday to supersede Giraldin, ousted from the office by President Mansur, Fouke and Mayor Kiel because of his criticism of Mansur and Fouke, would not discuss the grand jury report further than to say that he was trying to do his duty as a Commissioner.

At President Mansur's residence it was stated that he had an inviolable rule that he would not discuss police matters at his home.

Action in Auto Thefts Suggested.

Calling attention to the large number of automobiles stolen recently, the report contains a recommendation, originally made by Circuit Attorney McDaniel, that certificates of ownership be issued by the city to all automobile owners, and that policemen be stationed at all outlets of the city to examine these certificates and to prevent the escape of automobile thieves from the city.

Another recommendation is that policemen make daily investigations of the sale of used automobiles, tires and accessories, to learn whether those offered for sale have been stolen.

Reporting on its examination of city institutions, the grand jury reports that all are conducted in a clean and efficient manner, but recommends that the Industrial School be condemned. The report states that it is unsafe and that the children kept in it should be removed to a place of safety.

The report states that the Morgue is insanitary and the building it occupies dilapidated and unsuited to its purpose. The jury recommends that it be replaced with a new Morgue, equipped along modern lines.

TWO MEN ARRESTED AFTER SHOOTINGS AND ROBBERIES

Prisoner Exchanges Shots With Policeman When Cornered in Locust Street Room.

Earl Huston, 30 years old, of 3734 Olive street, and William Horchler, 19, of 2027 Eugenia street, were arrested last night after a series of shootings and robberies in which the police say they participated.

The police assert the men had a quarrel Friday night with John Miller, 22, of 3221 Morgan street, and started out last night to find him. They encountered him in a saloon at 309 North Garrisan avenue, and Huston and Miller exchanged shots, after which Horchler ran out the front door, where he met a policeman and was arrested.

Huston went out a back door and the police lost track of him until a few minutes later, when a woman in a house at 2830 Locust street reported that she had been robbed of 20 nickels on the front steps and that the robber had gone into the house.

Policeman Meinz, who was summoned, found a man with a revolver in a room in which another woman said he had robbed a man of $3.50. Huston fired at the policeman, who returned the fire, the bullet knocking the revolver from Huston's hand, but not injuring him. Miller was arrested later.

LAST OF MISSOURI TROOPS TO LEAVE FOR CAMP TODAY

When First Artillery Reaches Fort Sill All of State's 4500 Guardsmen Will Be in Training

With the departure today of the First Missouri Field Artillery for Fort Sill, Ok., St. Louis will have sent all its 4500 national guardsmen into active training for service in France.

The artillerymen will depart in two sections—the first leaving Union Station at 10 a. m. and arriving at the camp about 6 o'clock tomorrow morning; the second departing at 6 o'clock tonight and arriving at Fort Sill tomorrow afternoon.

The first section, in command of Col. Frank M. Rumbold, will consist of B, C and F Batteries, headquarters, supply companies and hospital detachment, occupying 11 day coaches for the men and one sleeping car for the officers.

A and D Batteries, in command of Maj. Daniel Jones, will be in the second section. The ordnance equipment formerly used by A Battery, consisting of four 3-inch field pieces and 34 horses, will be carried with this section. The train will be made up of nine day coaches for the men, a sleeping car for the officers, 12 freight cars and 2 horse cars.

More than $35,000 was paid to the men Friday for the period from Aug. 5, when the regiment was called into service, to Sept. 2.

TWO BLOCKS OF NINTH STREET TO HAVE ONE-WAY TRAFFIC ONLY

Restriction to Be Applied at Night as Well as in Day From Washington to Locust.

Ninth street, between Locust and Washington avenue, was set aside yesterday as a one-way traffic artery at night as well as during the day. Traffic will be permitted to move only from south to north in every hour of the 24. This is the first St. Louis street to be restricted day and night to one-way traffic.

Talbert explained that the new regulation was made necessary by the congestion that has followed the opening of the Orpheum Theater and as a provision for traffic to and from the Statler Hotel.

Viscount Ishii Says the Door of China Will Be Kept Open

Head of Japanese Mission to U.S. in New York Speech Proclaims "Monroe Doctrine" for Far East.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Proclaiming a Monroe Doctrine of the Far East, Viscount Ishii, head of the Japanese mission to the United States, warned the nations of the world tonight that his country will not tolerate aggressions against the territory or independence of China. At the same time he pledged Japan not to attempt similar aggressions on her part.

Speaking at a formal dinner in honor of the imperial envoy's visit to New York, the Ambassador of Emperor Yoshihito outlined publicly, for the first time since he set foot on American soil, the policy of his Government as it relates to China.

"Circumstances for which we were in no sense responsible gave us certain rights on Chinese territory," Viscount Ishii said, "but at no time, in the past or in the future, do we or will we seek to take territory from China or to despoil China or her rights.

"We wish to always continue to be the sincere friend and helper of our neighbor, for we are more interested than anyone else except China in good government there. Only we must at all times, for self-protection, prevent other nations from doing what we have no right to do. We not only will not seek to assail the integrity or the sovereignty of China, but will eventually be prepared to defend and mantain the integrity and independence of China against any aggressor. For we know that our own landmarks would be threatened by any outside invasion or interference in China."

Door Never to Be Closed.

While he warned the world against any attempt to invade the rights of the republic of the Far East, Viscount Ishii promised that the door to legitimate trade in China never would be closed by Japan. This declaration was cheered by the 1000 public men, bankers, merchants and captains of industry, who heard him.

Viscount Ishii's address was regarded as the most important he has delivered since the arrival of the mission in the United States. He discussed frankly his country's aspirations and desires as they relate to China, and denounced the propaganda of ill-will, "the persistent cry of the closed door." He did not hesitate to assert that in seeking the trade of China his country possessed natural advantages in trade by means of which it was bound to succeed in China "unless we are very stupid or very inactive." Leading up to the discussion of the open door, he said:

"It is with no light appreciation of the honor you have done us and the nation I represent—no lack of knowledge of my shortcomings—that I acknowledge your courtesy and hospitality throughout our visit to the city of New York. I cannot hope to meet the obligation or to find words fitting the occasion. I can only hope that as time goes on other opportunity may come to me, and my countrymen to demonstrate our appreciation in some small degree. Let me assure you that our door is open, and while we cannot offer you opportunity equal to this, the latch string hangs outside always for the men from New York and the men from America.

Door Is Always Open.

"The door is always open. It has always been open. It always must remain open, not only to the guest who comes to trot around our little island for a round of pleasure, but to the representatives of these vast commercial interests represented so well in this gathering of kings of commerce.

"In spite of all the effort to make you belive ethat Japan as she grew stronger, was always trying to close the door, I tell you that there never has been an hour when our common sense or our sense of our own responsibility failed us. Why close our door in violation of our pledges, or endeavor to close our neighbor's door when we are in honor bound to protect it? The opportunity for you to trade in Japan or China has never been an equal opportunity in its literal sense. As you went far afield and brought us knowledge of the West, taught us how to grow and how to trade, so we, as we gained wisdom, knowledge and strength, went into other fields of trade and to learn. We went to China, where the door wasopen to us as to you, and we have always realized that there Nature gave us an advantage. There was no need—there is no need—to close that door on you, because we welcome your fair and honest competition in the markets everywhere. We are trading there where we have a natural advantage and where, unless we are very stupid pupils or very inactive, we are bound to succeed, and we are trading here, where your advantage is equally and naturally as great.

"Grumbling Is Enemy's Work."

"I am persuaded that the grumblings and the whisperings about a door closed in China by the Japanese against America did not come from the broad and generous heart of the enterprising American in New York or elsewhere, but is the result of ten years of an enemy's effort to create prejudice and distrust. Gentlemen, I assure you that a closed door in China has never been and never will be the policy of my government. The door is open, the field is there. We welcome co-operation and competition, all tending to the betterment of the equal opportunity.

"But this propaganda of ill will has by no means stopped with the persistent cry of closed door: Much has been written about Japan's policy toward China as being one that sought only the aggrandizement of Japan and the confusion, disruption or oppression of our neighbor. Here again let me reassure you. The policy of Japan with regard to China has alwoys been the same, we want good government, which means peace, security and development of opportnuity in China. The slightest disturbance in China immediately reacts upon Japan. Our trade there is large and increasing; it is valuable to us and China is our friendly neighbor—with vast and increasing potentialities for trade.

"Circumstances for which we were in no sense responsible gave us certain rights on Chinese territory, but at no time in the past and at no time in the future do we, or will we, seek to take territory from China or to despoil China of her rights. We wish to be, and to always continue to be, the sincere friend and helper of our neighbor, for we are more interested than anyone else except China in good government there, only we must at all times, for self-protection, prevent other nations from doing what we have no right to do. Not only will we not seek to assail the integrity or the sovereignty of China, but we will eventually be prepared to defend and maintain the integrity and independence of China against any aggressor. For we know that our own landmarks would be threatened by any outside invasion or interference in China.

Germany Worst Enemy of China.

"For many years our common enemy has been the worst enemy of China, as Germany is the worst enemy of all that is honest and decent and fair. Since the outbreak of the war in Europe China has been the hotbed of German intrigue, and in all this China has perhaps been the greatest sufferer. I cannot give you positive proofs about the German in the Far East, as you have had them placed before you by the alert authorities in Washington, but I can give you as my conviction that the German in China is responsible for most of the unfortunate occurrences and the malicious widespread misinformation scattered throughout the world for the purpose of impairing the relations of the countries concerned in China and securing the downfall of China to Germany's advantage.

"When Japan or America appeared to make progress in China we always have had sinister rumor of oppression or the false suggestion of a policy directed against the integrity of that country; boycotts which have cost you, first of all, and then us, millions; revolution, disturbances and civil war have prevented a development of which China first of all, and her honest friends might profit.

"Gentlemen, I ask you, in the light of more recent developments, to try out the history of the last few years and find proof for yourselves of how greatly in this matter, as in much else, we have been misled.

"I am endeavoring to secure your co-operation in this work of revision of a situation built upon misconception and fraud. I am asking you to cast out the devil of suspicion and distrust in order that we who are allies and partners may rebuild the shattered edifice of actual confidence which means so much as a stronghold for us both. We are neighbors, friends and allies.

"The Pacific Ocean is our common highway. This is guarded and the highway has been swept by our ships of the pirates of the seas so that our countries' trade may continue and our intercourse be uninterrupted. We guard the Pacific Ocean with our ships, but more than this, and better than ships or the men or the guns, is the assurance of the notes exchanged between your Secretary of State, Elihu Root, and our Ambassador, Takahira, of 1908, in which it was mutually agreed and formally resolved to respect the territoral possesions belonging to each other in the region of the Pacific Ocean. Gentlemen, Japan is satisfied with this. Are you? If so, there is no Pacific Ocean question between us. We will co-operate. We will help and we will hold, each of us, what is guaranteed under that agreement."

KUEHLMANN SAYS GERMANS WORK IN CLOSEST HARMONY

Foreign Secretary Denies Divergence of Aim Among the Empire's Leaders.

BERLIN, via London, Sept. 29.—The German Secretary for foreign affairs, Dr. Richard von Kuehlmann, speaking before the main committee of the Reichstag, said he could not venture to say what would be the immediate outcome of the papal steps toward peace.

"This courageous initiative of the Pope," the secretary said, "will mark an epoch in the history of this tremendous battle of nations and will appear as an unfading page in the annuals of Vatican diplomacy. The Pope threw the word 'Peace' into the turmoil of battles at a time when events threatened to transform Europe into a place of blood stained ruins.

'Embodies People's Desires.".

"The German people and the German Government, whose consciousness of their strength and internal security always made it easy for them to emphasize their willingness to conclude an honorable peace, have reason to welcome gratefully the initiative of the curia, which made it possible for them to set forth again their national policy in a clear, unambiguous manner. I say intentionally the national policy, as I hope and believe the reply of the German Government, both as regards its form and contents, embodies the desires of an overwhelming majority of the Germans.

"For our purely German development, the note is also a landmark. It is the first result of the collaboration between all the factors of the Government, and the representatives of the German Parliament. That has been attempted here for the first time and with a cordiality that has no precedent, so near as I can see, even in purely parliamentary states."

This collaboration, the Secretary added, both with regard to its principle and results, is of a kind which a statement having the German foreign policy at heart, might regard with perfect confidence. He denied that there is in Gremany today one policy of the Gevernment and another policy of the people, and declared that this legend could be destroyed if the Reichstag stood behind the policy represented in the reply to the Pope.

Extra Attractions
You'll Be Glad to Find

It is not the expected things that make Mitchells so appealing, but the features you don't expect.

There is added equipment, extra luxury, over-strength. There are countless comforts, beauties and conveniences which are rarely seen. There are 31 distinct features in Mitchells which nearly all cars omit.

Extra Smart Styles

You first note the distinctive body styles. There are eight new types of bodies, and each one is exclusive.

That is because we have our own body plant. We have our own artists and experts.

Before designing a body they examine every like-type body built. And all their best attractions are combined with ours.

Then our own body plant saves us much on each car. And that entire saving goes into luxuries and beauties which very few cars afford.

Extra Equipment

Mitchells are the most complete cars built. They have 31 rare features. These include a power tire pump, a dashboard engine primer, reversible headlights, shock-absorbing springs.

There is a light in the tonneau, a locked compartment. There is heat-fixed finish which stays new. There is extra-grade leather which lasts.

But the chief Mitchell extra is doubled endurance. Mitchells are now built to the standard of 100 per centover-strength. That is twice the usual margin of safety. This extra strength has made them lifetime cars. It has reduced repair cost 75 per cent. Two Mitchells that we know of have already run over 200,000 miles each.

Bate-Built Cars

Mitchells are all built—chassis and body—under John W. Bate, the efficiency expert. They are built in a factory which he designed and equipped. They are built under efficiency methods which save us millions of dollars annually.

That saving pays for all these extras, in beauty and strength and equipment. With all these extras, Mitchells undersell all like-class cars.

17 EXEMPTIONS BY LOCAL DRAFT BOARDS REVERSED

Sixty Other Decisions Freeing Men From Military Service Upheld in Two Days.

Seventeen registered men who had been exempted by their ward boards, will have to serve in the national army as a result of Government appeals decided by the District Board yesterday and Friday night. Decisions upholding the exemptions granted by local boards were made in 60 other appealed cases heard in the same time.

Seventy-one of that number of cases appealed by the Government were from the Sixteenth Ward, 13 exemptions being reversed and 58 affirmed. Three exemptions appealed from the Fourth Ward were reversed and of three from the Twenty-eighth Ward, one was reversed ana dtwo were allowed to stand.

Alfred Vorhaus Must Serve.

One of the cases in the Twenty-eighth Ward was that of Alfred Vorhaus, of 5740 Kingsbury place, whose exemption, granted by the local board, had been reversed on Government appeal last Wednesday. the board yesterday allowed Vorhaus a temporary stay until Dec. 1, when he must begin military service.

Arnold Jerome Barnett of 5719 Westminster place, whose exemption was reversed on Government appeal last Wednesday, asked the District Board to reconsider his case, offering additional affidavits. The board refused to reopen his case. Barnett is the son of Ben Barnett, a pawnbroker.

Dr. Martin Hayward Post Jr., 5530 Delmar boulevard, who was granted exemption by the Twenty-eighth Ward Board on the ground that he had a dependent wife, will have to serve in the national army. The District Board reversed the Ward Board on a Government appeal. Dr. Post holds a commission as First Lieutenant in the Medical Officers Reserve Corps.

J. Robert Essen, of Centaur, Mo., whose claim for exemption on agricultural grounds was denied by the District Board yesterday, filed an appeal to President Wilson.

The exemption of George H. Bender of Webster Groves, which had been reversed Sept. 26 on the Government's appeal, was reconsidered and the exemption allowed to stand because it was shown that he was married in August, 1909, instead of August, 1917, as the Government attorney had contended in his appeal.

Cases Won by Government.

In the following cases, in addition to those already mentioned, the government appeals were successful, the exemption granted by local boards being reversed:

Grover Null, Eureka, Mo., exempted by County Board No. 3, married May 3, 1917.

Robert Thomas Gegge, Eureka, Mo., exempted by County Board No. 3; married June 8, 1917.

Anthony A. Rankin, 3320A Park avenue, exempted by Sixteenth Ward; dependent mother.

Homar Gore, 3312 St. Vincent, exempted by Sixteenth Ward; married April 10, 1917.

Frank Jones, 2942A Clark, exempted by Sixteenth Ward; married April 30, 1917.

S. A. Sheet, 2936 Laclede avenue, exempted by Sixteenth Ward; married May 17, 1917.

Claims and Appeals Allowed.

Bernard A. Springrose, 2817 Keokuk street, dependent parents; denied Sept. 21, allowed on rehearing.

Henry L. Mueller, 3009A Shenandoah, dependents.

John Deniszuk, 1409 N. Ninth street, dependents.

Paul Denis 1402 N. Ninth street, dependents.

Flour Drops 40 Cents a Barrel.

CHICAGO, Sept. 29.—Standard family flour dropped 40 cents to $11.40 a barrel today, the first change, it was said, since the fixing of wheat prices by the Government. It was said to be due to a freer movement of wheat to market.

LOAF OF BREAD WASTED AT TRIAL OF WOMAN'S DAMAGE SUIT

Used to Demonstrate Cutting Machine From Which Plaintiff Suffered Injury.

A long loaf of bread was sliced and wasted Friday in the Court of Justice of the Peace McChesney, at the Pontiac Building, in the trial of a suit brought by Marie Fagan against a restaurant at Forest Park Highlands, claiming $500 damages for the loss of the tip of her left thumb in a bread cutting machine.

The plaintiff maintained the machine was dangerous to operate. The Justice sent a constable out to get one of the machines and a loaf of bread.

The court clerk, unaccustomed to operating such a machine, was told to slice the bread. He did so without apparent trouble or danger and the plaintiff lost her suit. Justice McChesney remarked that he regretted that he had no meat with which to make sandwiches of the sliced bread and thus make use of it.

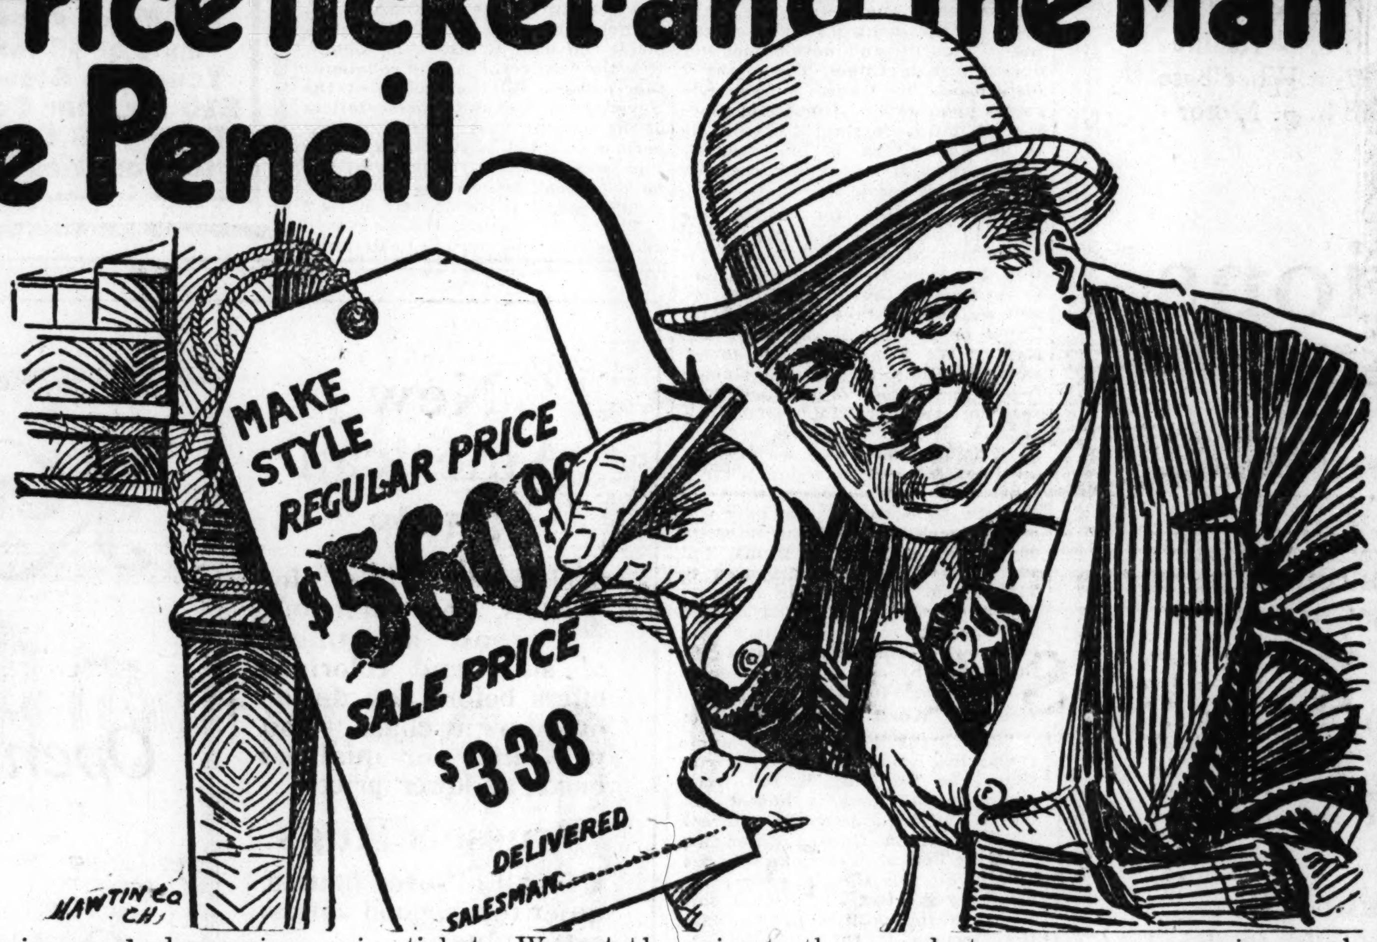
This New Player Only $248



We have used the blue pencil indiscriminately on every piano and player-piano price ticket. We cut the price to the very last penny on every piano and player in our large stock—by our utter disregard of prices we have made it possible for every family in St. Louis and vicinity to own one of these beautiful pianos or players at such low prices that you will be astonished.

THEY MUST BE SOLD, no matter what the cost. We declare emphatically that we will not allow a single instrument of any kind, nature or quality, to stand on the floors if prices will sell them. We advise that you come early—do not wait until the last moment. The store is thronged with eager buyers from early morning until late at night. Come at once.

THE END IS DRAWING NEAR—within a comparatively short time this sale will be declared over. Your opportunity will then have passed, and do not be among those who will say "I am sorry I did not get down there sooner." Come to this great sale now. Come prepared to do business. Bring what you can for a first payment. We will arrange terms to suit you.

Prepare Your Home for the Benefit of Your Children's Education While Opportunity Offers

Remove the pictures from the wall, take out the piano and family album and you have no home; just a staying place. We are asking you to prepare your home with a piano or player now. There is nothing else that you could buy that would so lend to the environment of culture, to the contentment and proper education of your girls and boys, and to the refinement and to the pleasure of the home. Musical training plays an all-important part in the social position of our children and we should see that it is not neglected.

10-rib Mayo Money's Worth

You hardworking men who know the real value of a dollar, spend less than a dollar for 10-rib Mayo Underwear. For 10-rib Mayo Underwear is the only medium-priced underwear that's "actually knit in the dollar way". (10 ribs to the inch instead of 8.)

Take your 10-rib Mayo Underwear from the back of the bedroom chair. Then prepare for the truest, snuggest underwear comfort that a man ever had.

You'll thank that 10-rib knitting for the added warmth of Mayo Underwear; for its added stretch and "give".

You'll compliment yourself on your own good buying judgment when you see how that 10-rib Mayo fabric wears. You'll say that Mayo lasts more wash-days than any underwear you ever had before.

If you don't get your Mayo Underwear soon, we both lose. We lose the sale. You lose the Mayo 10-rib comfort, 10-rib elasticity and 10-rib durability.

WELCH INDICTED ON A CHARGE OF ACCEPTING BRIBE

Former Prison Doctor Is Arrested and Gives Bond for $1000.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Sept. 29.—The special grand jury tonight returned a sealed report which contains an indictment against Dr. James C. Welch for accepting a bribe.

It is believed the report also contains indictments against a former prison official, which will not be made public until Monday.

Sheriff Richter served the warrant on Welch immediately after the grand jury reported. An hour later Welch filed a bond for $1000, signed by the Rev. A. Sterling, prison chaplain, and Arthur Nall, a clerk in the Adjutant-General's office. The bond was approved by Judge Slate and Welch was released.

Dr. Welch was official physician at the penitentiary until Friday night, when he resigned after the Post-Dispatch had discovered and published evidence that he had solicited and accepted $100 to sign a sick parole for a convict.

Mrs. Harry Clayton, wife of the convict, declared that Welch had written her two letters, soliciting $100, for which he promised to sign a sick parole for her husband. She said that she sent him the money, but that he failed to obtain her husband's release.

Dr. Welch was appointed prison physician May 14 by Gov. Gardner. Two of his brothers, Senator Lee Welch of Mountain View and Golin H. Welch, Representative from Dent County, were members of the last Legislature.

Lawrence Huegle, Bertillon officer at the penitentiary, also resigned Friday night. Huegel was implicated in the disinfectant exposures, which had revealed that former Commissioner John W. Scott bought large quantities of costly germicides from the Germo Manufacturing Co., of St. Louis, for which Huegel was the local agent.

Both resignations were accepted to take effect immediately.

The indictments returned by the grand jury tonight are the latest developments in a series of exposures of mismanagement and misappropriation of state property by state officials and employes, all of which were discovered and published exclusively by the Post-Dispatch after an exhaustive investigation.

Grand Jury Takes Recess.

The grand jury announced tonight that it had taken a recess until Oct. 8, when it will convene to complete its investigation of the management of the penitentiary under former Warden D. C. McClung.

T. J. McElroy, former superintendent of the prison clothing plant was called before the grand jury today. The Post-Dispatch had published a statement from him in which he declared that McClung and members of his family had their clothing made in the prison tailor shop, at state expense, and had not paid for it.

GOV. GARDNER SEES SECRETARY BAKER ABOUT GUARD CASE

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—Gov. Gardner of Missouri arrived in Washington late this afternoon bringing a message of loyalty of Missouri to the country and Government.

"We'll see it through," he said, "even if it takes all the hide off."

The purpose of the Governor's visit was to see Secretary Baker about the consolidation of the Missouri National Guard which destroys the identity of several regiments.

Gov. Gardner went at once, on his arrival here, to the office of Secretary Baker. There he impressed upon the Secretary how the men who had enlisted in the national guard felt about the re-organization order. He was with Secretary Baker an hour and left with an appointment for Monday afternoon, when the War Secretary will give him a final answer as to what will be done.

What He Told Baker.

"I told Secretary Baker that there was deep resentment in Missouri against the army reorganization plan in so far as they affect Missouri National Guard regiments," Gov. Gardner said.

"I called upon these men to join the guard at the request of the National Government. I understood, and so did they, that they were to serve in Missouri infantry regiments. To destroy their identity by mixing them up with troops of other States is unfair, especially to split up the Second Regiment and deprive it of the veteran colonel who brought the reorganization up to its present high degree of efficiency.

"I made it plain to Secretary Baker that whatever his verdict, I would support him. I told him as I shall tell the President that Missouri is behind the Government in this war and will do everything possible to bring it to a successful conclusion 'even if it takes the hide off.'

Secretary Makes Statement.

To newspaper men Secretary Baker said: "The Governors and Senators and Representatives of many states have complained against the breaking up of state units. In most instances the argument advanced against consolidation has been that it would tend to destroy the neighborhood feeling.

"A solution frequently advanced is that national guard units which are far below the required war strength be filled up by taking conscripted men from the same states. The trouble about that procedure is that it would have the effect of putting a majority of wholly untrained men in regiments which have had some service on the border and delay their departure for France. By consolidating the two regiments of men who have had considerable training this difficulty would be eliminated and a relatively small number of new and untrained men would be required to fill up the gaps."

One cause of discontent over the breaking up of state units has been that the officers would be lost. Mr. Baker explained that the plan is to see that no officer deprived of his command in this way shall lose either his rank or his opportunity for service. Where necessary, such officers will be carried as supernumerary numbers, as has been done many times in regular army units.

"Best in the Long Run"

A word about over-draperies —made in our own shops

The valance is made of mulberry velvet trimmed with bullion fringe and rosette and tassel ornaments of putty tone. The side hangings are of mulberry and putty-tone striped velvet with pullbacks of plain velvet.

This velvet we can furnish in many patterns and in a full line of colors including amaranth, plum, prune, gobelin blue, orange, maize, reseda and verdure green.

Trolicht-Dunker designers are cleverly original and have skilled artisans at hand to perfectly do the work they plan.

All of our shop-made draperies, as well as fabrics of which draperies are made and fabrics for upholstering furniture, are so reasonably priced that to buy here is to practice true economy.

TO LAY CORNERSTONE TODAY

The cornerstone of the new King's Highway Christian Church, King's highway and Labadie, will be laid at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon, the Rev. J. H. Harrison, editor-emeritus of the Christian Evangelist, officiating. The Rev. W. G. Johnston, pastor of the present church, now known as the Hammett Place Christian Church, will make the invocation.

The new structure, which will be of brick and stone, will cost $40,000 and will be finished in a year.

EAT BIG MEALS! NO INDIGESTION OR UPSET STOMACH

Do some foods you eat hit back—taste good, but work badly; ferment into acids and cause a sick, sour, gassy stomach? Now, Mr. or Mrs. Dyspeptic, jot this down: Pape's Diapepsin helps neutralize the excessive acids in the stomach so your food won't sour and upset you. There never was anything so safely quick, so certainly effective. No difference how badly your stomach is upset you usually get happy relief in five minutes, but what pleases you most is that it helps to regulate your stomach so you can eat your favorite foods without fear.

Most remedies give you relief sometimes—they are slow, but not sure. "Pape's Diapepsin" is positive in neutralizing the acidity, so the misery won't come back very quickly.

You feel different as soon as "Pape's Diapepsin" comes in contact with the stomach—distress just vanishes—your stomach gets sweet, no gases, no belching, no eructations of undigested food, your head clears and you feel fine.

Go now, make the best investment you ever made, by getting a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store. You realize in five minutes how needless it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach disorder due to acid fermentation.—ADV.

WHY SOCIETY WOMEN WASH THEIR OWN HAIR

They do, not because it is a fad, but because they wish to obtain the greatest possible hair beauty and be sure they are not using anything harmful. They have found that in washing the hair it is never wise to use a makeshift, but is always advisable to use a preparation made for shampooing only. Many of our friends say they get the best results from a simple home-made canthrox mixture. You can use this at a cost of about three cents a shampoo by getting some canthrox from your druggist, and dissolving a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water. This makes enough shampoo liquid to apply to all the hair instead of just the top of the head, as with most preparations. Dandruff, excess oil and dirt are dissolved and entirely disappear in the rinsing water. Your hair will be so fluffy that it will look much heavier than it is. Its luster and softness will also delight you.—ADV.

Miller's Antiseptic Oil Known as

Snake Oil

Will Positively Relieve Pain in Few Minutes.

Try it right now for Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Lumbago, sore, stiff and swollen joints, pains in the head, back and limbs, corns, bunions, etc. After one application pain disappears almost as if by magic.

A new remedy used internally and externally for Coughs, Colds, Croup, Sore Throat, Diphtheria and Tonsilitis.

This oil is conceded to be the most penetrating remedy known. Its prompt and immediate effect, in relieving pain is due to the fact that it penetrates to the affected parts at once. As an illustration pour ten drops on the thickest piece of sole leather and it will penetrate this substance through and through in three minutes.

NEW SCHEDULES AT HIGH SCHOOLS TESTED

Longer Recitation Periods and Shorter Days Expected to Promote Efficiency.

High school students are undergoing close scrutiny by Board of Education officials during this school year to determine whether the new system of lengthened hours and lightened curriculum ultimately will prove beneficial, according to Assistant Superintendent of Instruction Bryan.

At the beginning of the term the recitation periods were increased from 45 to 55 minutes and a school day was reckoned six such hours, instead of seven. To avoid congestion classes are started at 8:30 a. m. and continued until 3:30 p. m., with a half hour intermission for lunch, in comparison with the former hours of 9 a. m. to 3:15 p. m.

In addition, courses were so lightened that only four subjects needing home preparation were required, instead of five. It was specified also that as an equivalent to one of these four, two so-called "vocational" studies, such as manual training, mechanical drawing or domestic science, requiring no home study, might be taken. Capable students who had made grades of 80 per cent or more were allowed to study an additional subject if they desired.

Certain subjects were made elective instead of required, as heretofore. Chief among these were languages: Latin, German, French or Spanish, one of which all students formerly were required to take. Latin now is required only in the classical course. Greek is elective in all courses.

The minimum required subjects are English, three years; history, one year; music, four years; physical training, four years; community civics and the vocations, half year each. Former requirements were English, four years; history, two years; mathematics, two or four years; science, two or four years; languages, two years.

It is believed these changes will result in increased concentration by students and a larger and better volume of work in each course than previously. Under the new system Assistant Superintendent Bryan believes no student can say fairly that he is compelled to take more subjects than he can carry.

English Boys, now 26, Enlisted as Privates and After 20 Months' Service Are Corporals.

LONDON, Sept. 29.—The twin sons of Mr. and Mrs. Orland Gaston—Christopher and Clifford Gaston—of Ringmer, Sussex, are renowned for their devotion to one another.

They resemble each other, are inseparable, think and act alike, and have never been known to quarrel. Each is 6 feet high, and 26 years old.

They formerly were attached to the Brighton Police, which they joined and left together. When they joined the Royal Sussex Regiment, one more robust than the other was adjudged fit for foreign service, and the weaker one for home service. This distressed the pair, and the weaker of the two again visited the authorities and pleaded that they could not be separated, and that he wished to be with his brother on foreign service. The authorities, touched by the simple devotion, arranged that they should be together.

They joined as privates, were in the trenches together, and have been at the front for 20 months. Together they were promoted to lance corporals, and at the same time were transferred to the military police. Christopher was wounded, and begged not to be sent to the base, lest he should be sent home without Clifford. He was allowed to remain, and Clifford saw him every day. The two were granted leave together, went home together, and only returned to the front recently.

When infants, so alike were they that, to distinguish one from the other, different colored ribbons had to be tied on their wrists. Throughout their lives they have always shared in everything, and in peace time, and when home on leave, they count their money every night to make certain that each possesses the same sum.

CAMP FUNSTON UTILITIES UNDER SINGLE MANAGER

Quartermaster Captain Will Be in Charge of Light, Heat, Water and Other Service Plants.

CAMP FUNSTON, Kan., Sept. 29—Camp Funston, is going to have a city manager who will look after all utilities and see they are properly operated and maintained and good service is given. Capt. Fred J. Herman, constructing quartermaster, received word from the Quartermaster General he was to look after that work.

There will be finally, it is believed, about 60,000 men here. There is a waterworks system, miles of roads, both paved and unpaved, an electric lighting system, transportation, sewerage, heating and the collecting and disposal of garbage. Capt. Herman will have charge of everything, and under him will be army officers from the quartermaster corps, who will have direct charge of the various individual properties.

Capt. Herman will be held responsible for the conduct of each of the utilities by the Quartermaster's Department.

SYMPHONY SOCIETY TO CAMPAIGN FOR $12,000

Committee to Open Drive Tomorrow to Complete Guarantee Fund.

The sum of $12,000, now lacking to make up the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra guarantee fund of $40,000, for the season of 1917-18, will be sought by the Symphony Society beginning this week. J. P. Thomy, a member of the executive committee, of the Symphony Society, has been appointed chairman of the committee to raise the money, and the campaign will be opened tomorrow and pushed vigorously until the entire sum is in hand, it is announced.

Thomy and the members of his committee believe it will not be difficult to get the money. The $28,000 now in hand represents the largest number of $1000 subscriptions ever made to the St. Louis Orchestra, and this fact indicates a widening of general interest in the orchestra, in the opinion of the committee, and it is believed the $12,000 will be obtained before the symphony season opens, Nov. 11.

Four Women Give $1000 Each.

Four of the $1000 subscribers already obtained are women. They are Mrs. Newton R. Wilson, Mrs. Hudson E. Bridge, Mrs. Charles M. Rice and Mrs. J. B. M. Kehlor. Among the other subscribers for a like amount are John Fowler, Edward A Faust, J. P. Thomy, George D. Markham, Clarence H. Howard, Benjamin Gratz, Charles Wiggins, Hugo A. Koehler, Hanford Crawford, John F. Queeny, Walter Henning and J. D. Wooster Lambert. The Catlin Estate and the Davis Estate, as well as the Associated Retailers of St. Louis, are on the $1000 list, and an anonymous donor, whose identity even the members of the executive committee do not know, is another.

According to figures given out by A. J. Gaines, manager of the Symphony Orchestra, it will cost approximately $100,000 to maintain the orchestra this season. Of this sum about $60,000 come from the season subscriptions to the concert series and the single ticket sales during the year, leaving a deficit of $40,000 to be covered by the guarantee fund.

Advance Sale Large.

A larger advance subscription sale than usual is reported for this year, due, it is believed, to war conditions. Music is expected to be the principal diversion, when many Americans will not care for gayer amusements. This has been the case in Europe since the war began.

The solo artists engaged for this year are Fritz Kreisler, violinist; Louise Homer, contralto; Harold Bauer, pianist; Emilio de Gogorza, baritone; Julia Culp, mezzo-soprano; Reinald Werrenrath, baritone; Ossip Gabrilowitsch, pianist; Helen Stanley, soprano; Guimar Novaes, pianist; Arthur Hackett, tenor; Willem Willeke, cellist. Albert Spalding, violinist, who was engaged for one pair of concerts, has joined the army. His place in the list has not yet been filled.

RECRUITS BATHE BEFORE THEY ENTER NAVAL SHAM BATTLES

Ablutions and Clean Clothes Required as Preventive Against Infection Through Injury.

GREAT LAKES, Ill., Sept. 29.—Navy regulations require that all men about to participate in a naval battle bathe and put on new and clean clothing before entering the engagement. And here at the Great Lakes naval training station every bluejacket assigned to duty in the weekly sham battle gets a call an hour before the battle is to start to "get under the shower" and "shift into clean clothing." The future man-o'-war's-man usually remonstrates that he had a shower that morning and that his clothes are clean. It makes no difference, the order must be obeyed.

In the official regulations the order is explained by the statement that it is to prevent infection through bits of clothing, torn by shot and shell, entering wounds. And so the precaution is taken for the Great Lakes sham battles for the same reason—and also to accustom the recruit to actual battle conditions so far as is possible.

Another realistic feature of the sham battles is the wearing of gas masks. In the battles the bluejackets hope to engage in across the water these masks protect from gas clouds. At Great Lakes they protect the psuedo fighters from alleged gas walls, which prove to be thin clouds of smoke caused by bursting blank bombs.

U. S. GRANT IV SERVING AS PRIVATE IN THE ARTILLERY

SPARTANBURG, S. C., Sept. 29.—U. S. Grant IV, great-grandson and namesake of the famous General and former President of the United States, is serving as a private at Camp Wadsworth. He is in the artillery. Young Grant was graduated from Harvard in 1915 and entered a Wall street office in New York. When the war broke out he enlisted in the Seventh Regiment of infantry, but later decided that he would like the artillery better and got a transfer.

He never speaks of his ancestry. He is a wholesome, hard-working boy and does not see anything strange in the fact that he is a private. He says the army does not appeal to him as a profession and that he expects to go back into business after the war is over.

His father is a college professor in California. Several of his cousins hold commissions in the army, one being a Major of engineers.

CENTRAL ELEVEN, MINUS VETERANS, BEATS KIRKWOOD

YEATMAN TOO FAST FOR RANKEN DEFENSE

Represented by a team not one member of which had ever before played in a scholastic football game, Central High School yesterday opened its 1917 football season with a 23 to 0 victory over the Kirkwood High School eleven. The contest was the feature half of a high school gridiron twin-bill, on High School Athletic Field. The other half resulted in a 13 to 0 conquest of the Ranken Trades School players by Yeatman High's team.

As it played yesterday, the mid-city eleven may be classed as a green one and woefully lacking in weight for an I. L. title contender, but what it lacks in bulk is made up by a splendid scrapping spirit and an apparent store of inherent class. The only veteran of the 1916 championship eleven available to the squad, captain and center Klaiber, was unable to play yesterday.

Show Well on Defense.

The defense was flawless, the county players being only able to gain first down on one occasion, unless otherwise aided by Central penalties. The tackling was clean and the line was a formidable barrier. What Central lacked in its first game was an offensive punch to carry the ball through the last 20 yards, after smashing the red and white lines for consistent gains. Naturally the team lacks polish as was evinced by its countless penalties and frequent fumbles.

Coming backfield stars in the persons of Wood and Bremser shone brilliantly throughout the play. Wood, fullback, is a brother of Frank Wood, captain of last year's team. He is built a bit stockier than the famed "Hickory" and seems equally adept at smashing an opposing line. Bremser at right halfback made countless gains, was stalwart on the secondary defense, and handled the forward pass capably.

Central's first touchdown came within the first three minutes of play. Kirkwood received the kickoff on its 30-yard line, could not gain an inch, and, instead of punting on the fourth down, was thrown back 15 yards on an attempted end run from kick formation. Central took the ball here, made first on three line bucks, and Roth carried the ball over for the first touchdown. Wood then kicked goal.

Walker's men started a new offensive in the second period, but it culminated unsuccessfully when Wood missed a drop kick from the 25-yard line. Central again held and ran the ball back to the Kirkwood 20-yard mark after receiving it on a punt in midfield. Wood then dropped back and placed a clean drop kick over the goal.

The Final Touchdowns.

In the third period the red and black hosed backs rushed the ball from the 30-yard line to the 4-yard mark, where Kirkwood had kicked out of bounds. Roth then carried the ball through center for his second touchdown. Wood tacked on another point. The fourth touchdown came in the final period when a long forward pass and off-tackle plays again put Roth within scoring distance. Goal this time was missed.

Yeatman Beats Ranken; Subs Used in Last Half.

After shattering the defense of the Renken Trades School eleven, scoring two touchdowns, and easily staving off the feeble attack of the mechanics, the Yeatman High School eleven was satisfied with its 13 to 0 advantage and depended upon a line-up of scrubs in the second half of its inaugural game of the season at High School Field, yesterday afternoon. The reserves failed to score but held the opposing team scoreless, and the game ended with the score unaltered.

The North Side team presented a bulky appearing array of talent, and there is but little reason why it should not be more successful this year than it has been during the seasons past. McKinley High defeated Ranken, 54 to 0, last Saturday, but retained its regular lineup throughout the entire contest.

Hausladen, left halfback, scored both of the touchdowns, while Winkelman booted the extra point. Ranken was at no time in a scoring position. The eleven played well on the defense against such weight odds, but its backfield work when carrying the ball was uncultivated enough to be farcical.

Webster's Strong Team Runs Over St. Charles Boys

Exhibiting one of the most formidable and even-running teams seen so far in the "prep" class, the much-touted Webster High School eleven defeated the outweighted St. Charles representatives 50—0 at the new Webster stadium.

Pulling trick plays and working with a sweeping attack, the Webster boys scored at will on their opponents. Time after time the combination of Phillips, Lincoln, Avis and Gibson plowed its way through the line for large gains.

After making sure of the victory, Coach Roberts substituted his second team in the final quarter. Up to that time Phillips and Lincoln had worried their rivals by unusual performances. Twice Lincoln jumped into the air and intercepted St. Charles' passes and dashed down the field for a touchdown. He skirted the ends, bucked the line and went off-tackle for considerable gains, shaking off many would-be tacklers. Once in the open field, he was nearly sure of crossing the line.

Phillips pressed his teammate for the leading role, the speedy quarterback returning many punts with great ability.

BROWNS' SEASON ENDS IN DOUBLE ROUT BY BOSTON

BOSTON, Sept. 29.—All the base hits the Red Sox did not make earlier in the year they collected this afternoon in their double-header against the lowly St. Louis Browns, whacking out sixteen safeties in each contest and winning, 13 to 5 and 11 to 0.

Had the Browns won one of today's games they would have clinched seventh position for 1917, as it stands now, the Athletics who won a double-header today, may dislodge them by winning their remaining three games. In such case the standing of the teams would be:

	W.	L.	Pct.
Philadelphia	57	96	.373
St. Louis	57	97	.370

It almost made Sox enthusiasts weep to see the deluge of hits when it did not make a particle of difference whether the Barrys or the Fielders collect the laurel wreath. It was the first Saturday of the local football season. Someone told the Sox the pigskin time had arrived, and regulation gridiron scores—13 to 5 at the end of the first half and 24 to 5 for the afternoon.

Foster Has a Circus.

George Foster toyed with the Missourians in the first game and Babe Ruth had them on the hip—on several hips, in fact—in the second game While the Red Sox were making 32 hits, the Browns were scraping together seven in the first and six in the second game.

The batting of everyone was carefree. Koob and Wright were as easy in the first game as was Davenport in the second.

Big Babe did not appear to work up a sweat in the second game. He simply went through the motions and everything tumbled down in front of him. He whacked out two singles and a fierce double in three times at bat and his double came perilously close to clearing the right-field fence.

Babe was the master throughout. He tried to strike out the last three men to face him. He fanned Johnson and Smith, but Severeid, a catcher the Red Sox ought to have, cracked a single through Larry Gardner and spoiled the dramatic windup of the year's play between the Hubmen and the St. Louisans.

Gerber played niftily at short in each game and Jacobson, the pinch first-sacker, was decidedly up against it at first, as the Sox bunted often and the Brown infielders were pegging crazily. The Browns left for home tonight.

Felsch, White Sox' Star Outfielder, Has Edge on Kauff in World's Series

Fullerton Picks Former to Be Batting Star

Analyst, However, Says That Giant Meadowman Is Greatly Improved Ballplayer, Though Sometimes Overconfident.

No. 8—CENTER FIELDERS.

By Hugh S. Fullerton.

	Offensive Value.	Defensive Value.	Total Value.
White Sox	.921	311	1232
Giants	.891	303	1194

HAPPY FELSCH of the Chicago White Sox is one of the greatest ballplayers in the business and one of the best hitters of his style of all time. With the exception of Cobb and Speaker he is the best outfielder in the American League, and some refuse to admit that even the great Tris is better.

It need not, therefore, offend New York fans to discover that Benny Kauff rates quite a distance below Felsch in the comparative figures, and that he is second to the Chicagoan in all departments of play, even base running, at which Felsch never was supposed to shine.

In center, for purposes of a world's series, the White Sox have a big edge on pure dope. Felsch figures to be one of the hitting stars of the series, and if I were predicting instead of figuring pure dope, I would pick Happy to be the Frank Baker of this series. From the present outlook every bit of generalship, all of McGraw's care in selecting pitchers to hamper Collins, Jackson and others of the White Sox, will play straight into Felsch's hands.

Slow to Learn, but Sure.

I HAVE an idea that a large number of National Leaguers do not realize to the full extent what a good ballplayer Felsch has become. They have the opinion that he is a slow thinker and not a finished man. They are at least a year behind the times if they stick to that belief. It is true that, for quite a time Felsch seemed terribly slow at learning the finer points of play, especially in getting into the team attack. He seems not to learn very rapidly, but what he learns he never forgets, and he is one of hte few men who rarely, if ever, repeat a mistake. He finished making his mistakes before the middle of the season.

He can cover more ground than Kauff can, hits left-handed pitching better, hits the ball harder, and can hold his own with the ex-Fed star on the bases.

That sounds like a "dickens of a way" to talk about the great Kauff, but the figures prove each assertion and the figures fail by many points to show what a good ballplayer Felsch has become. He is so good that it ought not to be harmful to give him part of the press agenting Kauff got.

Truth is, Felsch does his work so easily that he never has been praised much. He is almost as good as Speaker in going back after long drives, moves either way with terrific speed, and works well with the other outfielders. He has learned to switch and play batters. He is one of the closest observers in the business of what his own pitchers are doing, and makes his shifts back and forth, in and out, in accord with their style of pitching, which is a thing, so far as I can see, Kauff has not yet mastered.

Felsch Hits Ball Hard.

AT bat Felsch is a bear. He hits good balls, hits them hard, and takes all the distance possible. He runs the bases with the same ease that he catches long drives, and his steals are masterpieces. He has stolen an extraordinary number of bases this season in proportion to the number of times he has started to pilfer. In other words, when he starts he gets there. In looking over Kauff's record it seems to me he has been caught quite as often as he has succeeded in stealing, although he is one of the leaders of McGraw's flying squadron on the bases. I think the records up to date show that the men have stolen practically the same number of bases.

In one respect alone Felsch falls behind Kauff—he cannot sacrifice as well. Sacrifice hitting, you will find, is one of the weak spots in the Rowland scheme of things and his men, who may be skillful, have had little practice in laying down bunts. The majority of Felsch's sacrifices this season have been long drives to the outfield.

Kauff Good Ball Player.

IN this comparison I do not mean in the least to belittle Kauff. He is a good ballplayer, but not the player we imagined he was when he was burning up the Federal League. Last season he looked a joke for a long time, because he was trying to get away with stuff he put over on the Feds and being laughed at most of the time.

He was placed in a position where he had to change his system of playing ball, forget a lot he had learned, and learn the McGraw style of playing the game. It is not an easy thing for any player to switch systems, and it is a testimonial to Kauff's ability that he succeeded in doing it and forgetting many of the bad little tricks he picked up in the Fed League.

This season he is a lot better ballplayer than he ever was before, although a comparative study of figures would seem to indicate he had slipped a bit. The difference is in the class, and not in the player. He is better this year than he was last, even during the Giants' sensational spurt late last year, and undoubtedly the class of the National League is much higher now.

Sometimes Overconfident.

KAUFF still has some bad habits—throwing the ball to the wrong spot, for instance, and delaying his return throw at times with no reason at all, nor any play in sight. He probably will not do such things in a world's series, however, so we may count that out entirely.

If Kauff has a fault it is overconfidence, and it is going to be interesting to study these two men in the coming series because of the vast difference in their temperaments. Felsch is an easy going, seemingly careless fellow who makes little show, and never seems to get excited. Kauff is the "cocky" type of ballplayer, bubbling over with confidence in himself and seemingly absolutely certain that a brass band ought to precede him.

It is in the attack that these men count most. In this series Kauff stands handicapped before the start because it is certain he will have difficulty in hitting Cicotte, who is exactly the kind of pitcher Kauff doesn't hit. On the other hand, if McGraw relies upon Schupp and Sallee to a large extent, as he seems certain to do, Felsch will have all the advantage, because that is the style of pitching he hits very well, and Sallee is the kind he hits for long drives down the alleys. He is a solid driver, especially when he connects with a left-hander's fast ball, and hits are "naturals," that is, terrific drives between the fields, not along the base lines.

Hits All Kinds of Pitching.

THIS season Felsch has hit all kinds of pitching, and his hits have been timely. Perritt would trouble him considerably and a left-hander with a slow ball might check him up.

Once on first the men are about equal, although in this series, Kauff is a bit more liable to pull off something on the bases. His cockiness and habit of taking chances will keep the White Sox defense worried all the time. Felsch never will worry the Giants. If he goes he goes unexpectedly and his success has been largely due to the fact that no one suspected him of it.

There is enough difference between the men, in favor of Felsch, to offset New York's superiority in left field, and it looks as if the question of superiority in the outfields rests with the right fielders. We will take up the study of these tomorrow—and there we will find a complication which may affect all our figures. The managers figure heavily in the right-field question and we will be compelled to figure on them, as well as on the mechanical abilities and the temperaments of the players.

Cicotte's "Shine Ball" Is Still a Mystery to Everybody but Himself

EDDIE CICOTTE'S "shine ball" is considerable of a mystery to everybody but Cicotte himself. His delivery has been O K'd by the president of the American League as perfectly legitimate and there is no ground upon which it can be barred, unless the spitball, in any of its variations, goes at the same time.

This delivery has been called the "shine ball" because Cicotte polishes one spot on the sphere on his pants, and therefore one spot shines out on it more clearly than the rest of the surface.

Players facing this delivery say the ball comes up wavering. The revolutions of the lighter spot accounts for this deception.

Cicotte expectorates in his glove, slaps it over the ball, gives it a twist and delivers it. No foreign substance is used. No trace of oil, licorice or other foreign unguent has been detected. Ban Johnson has had balls taken out of the game and submitted to him. They have been returned to Comiskey, declared perfectly legal.

TWO BILLIKENS HURT.

Yesterday's scrimmage on the St. Louis University campus will cost Coach C. M. Rademacher the temporary loss of two players. Fullback Baker suffered an injured ankle, while Quarterback Connors was also forced to join the hospital squad. One redeeming feature of the workout was the appearance of Ed Welch, a tackle and letter man of the Billiken squad.

ST. LOUIS TENNIS TEAM ELIMINATES MICHIGAN RIVALS

Drewes and Josties Win Two Singles and One Doubles Match in Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, O., Sept. 29.—St. Louis and Cincinnati will battle it out for the national muncipal tennis championship on the courts of the Cincinnati Tennis Club. The deciding matches will be played Sunday, St. Louis players having won the singles and doubles contests played this afternoon from Racine, Wis., players while Cincinnati drew the bye and therefore will meet the Racquet wielders from the Mound City for the championship.

It took just one round of singles to decide who would meet the local team. In the match between Fred Josties and Ralph Hammond of Racine, the Mound City player had a walkaway. The Racine man could not solve his style of play and succumbed easily by the score 6—0, 6—0.

Drewes Not Extended.

Theodore Drewes of St. Louis, matched against L. B. Augustine of Racine, did not have things quite so easy, but nevertheless he emerged the victor in the other match of singles. The score in this match was 6—0, 6—3, the Racine player showing a flash of real style in the second set when Drewes was forced to exert himself somewhat to capture the set.

The St. Louis team then entered into the doubles with the Racine players and won handily. The score was 6—2, 6—2, the same dashing style of play being put up by the St. Louis team in the doubles as they did in the singles.

This eliminates the Racine men from the championship battles and the St. Louis and Cincinnati teams will contest for the title. Cincinnati will be represented by N. D. Benedict and H. C. Simpson. Both are considered excellent players, but there are many who saw the matches this afternoon who believe that the local players will have to go the limit if the championship is to come to the Queen City.

FOOTBALL COACHES MEET; MAKE CHANGE IN RULES

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—At a meeting of football officials, coaches and players held here tonight for the purpose of interpreting the rules governing Walter Camp of Yale, who presided said that from the activity displayed by the men at the various training camps throughout the country, more football would be played here than ever before. All the officials present said that they would willingly give their services at any games which may be arranged at or between army or navy training camps or stations.

By a unanimous vote it was decided to cut out the approved ruling regarding the ball still being in play after it had crossed the side line extended. This was the first time that any approved rule was eliminated by vote or otherwise at any meeting other than a regular one of the Rules Committee.

On the motion of Coach Sanford of Rutgers it was decided to recommend to the Rules Committee the necessity of eliminating the possibility of a player being cut down from behind. The Rutgers coach also made an appeal that the Rules Committee at its next session would adopt the "multiple kick" which he claimed would be much better than the "teeing up" of the ball for a place kick, as now allowed by the rules.

SOLDAN PLAYS WESTERN; REGULARS BEAT SCRUBS

Coach Cook of the Soldan High School eleven announced yesterday that he had completed arrangements, whereby the Western Military Academy team will play Soldan, on Oct. 13. This is the first time in years that the teams have met. Western, according to all reports, has a good team this year. Forty candidates were out for the first few days practice.

Although no regular game was scheduled, the Soldan eleven was sent through a regulation game against the second string men, yesterday morning and scored two touchdowns with the two subsequent goals, while the scrubs counted only a safety.

MEMPHIS HURLER BEATS OPPONENTS WITH NO-HIT GAME

ELLERMANS WIN, 6 TO 2

Beat Wagners, City Champions, in Second Game—Another Double Bill Today.

A no-hit-no-run victory for the southpaw Long, of Memphis, over the Kansas City team, featured the municipal intercity exhibition baseball contests staged at Sportsman's Park yesterday. Long's performance came in the second portion of a double-header, the first game having witnessed a 6-to-2 defeat of the Wagners, local municipal champions, by the Ellermans, the team the former had beaten to win the title.

Against the left-handed shoots of the Memphis twirler the Kansas Cityans never had a chance to score. Just four batsmen reached first on Long, two via the four-balls method and the remainder on errors. He fanned 11 of his opponents. Long's performance came as no surprise to those who knew him. Last year he twirled two games in as many days in his home city and won both, which is quite a pitching feat.

Memphis Scores Five.

Kansas City was forced to use two hurlers in an effort to stop the Southerners who piled up five runs. Memphis scored one in the first inning and three runs in the second, the latter having been accomplished with the aid of only one hit. They counted their fifth and final run in the fifth session.

The contest between the Wagners and Ellermans was halted at the end of the seventh in order to enable the Memphis-Kansas City setto to progress through the regulation nine rounds. Marquard, who pitched for the winners, held the Wagners in check, his support faltering at times, which accounted for the scoring.

On the other hand, Hayes failed to show the form which aided his team in copping the local municipal title. The Ellermans got away to a flying start by counting five runs in the first inning, five singles, an error anl a double steal assisting in the scoring.

The intercity exhibitions will conclude today with another double-header at Sportsman's Park. The Ellermans will play Kansas City in the first game which is scheduled to begin at 1:30. The Wagners and Memphis will contribute the afterpiece. Harris and Smith have been named to officiate in the first contest, while Byrne and Daly will handle the second contest.

Admission to the contests is 25 cents, a charge of 50 cents being made for box seats. In order to enable the youngsters to witness the games authorities have arranged to open the bleachers for a charge of 10 cents.

AZZINE FOULS KABAKOFF IN THE TWELFTH ROUND OF SOUTH BROADWAY GO

Jimmy Azzine, New York bantam, was disqualified by the referee for fouling in the twelfth round of his bout with Harry Kabakoff at the South Broadway Athletic Club last night. The newcomer hit low in the eleventh and repeated in the twelfth, whereupon the referee awarded the bout to Kabakoff on a foul.

Azzine is a rugged boxer who plays almost exclusively to the body. He carried the fight to Kabakoff almost continuously and had he not fouled the local lad, would have won on points. A crowd estimated at between 500 and 600 witnessed the events.

Joe McMullen of St. Louis, made Harry Beecher, a New York lightweight, quit in the fifth round of their scheduled eight-round contest. Beecher took a severe beating and after receiving the count left the ring. Patsy Flanniga nknocked out Johnny Lucke in the third round of the preliminary.

CARDINAL PLAYERS ASK BIG SALARIES FOR NEXT SEASON

Instead of Raises Some of Them May Receive Cuts, President Rickey Says.

BAD YEAR ANTICIPATED

War, and Fact That First Division Teams Barely Broke Even in 1917 Augurs Retrenchment.

By John E. Wray.

ALTHOUGH the Players' Fraternity is as dead as the free silver issue, a nation-wide demand for increased salaries will be made by baseball players this fall. And an equally determined resistance to such demands, on the part of team owners, is anticipated from the position taken by Branch Rickey, president of the Cardinals, who has already been asked for "raises" by members of his club.

"Yes, some of the players have approached me regarding their contracts for next season," Rickey admitted yesterday. "I have told them this: That if they persist in their demands, they will not be members of the Cardinals next year.

"I do not care to mention their names; but two of them are of such consequence that if the club should dispose of them, the fans would raise a terrific roar.

Holdouts to Be Dropped.

"But they will not be in the batting order, next year, unless they abandon their salary ideas. No matter whether the fans kick or not, increases cannot be granted this season. The reason is so obvious that it seems unnecessary to explain it; of course it is financial. With a third place team, this year, and retrenchment in force everywhere, except in the buying of new talent, the Cardinals have just barely cleared expenses. The Cardinals of 1911 made $100,000 and over and didn't finish any higher.

"Furthermore the war is expected to continue and the gate receipts will therefore unquestionably decline. As with any other business, baseball must adjust its expenditures to its income.

"I can assure you that far from advances, retrenchment in the matter of salaries can be looked for this season."

"Have club owners reached an agreement on this point " Rickey was asked.

"No. But as they all have had an experience similar to the Cardinals', they will no doubt follow the same course. Players have gained the idea that because of the scarcity of players, due to war drafts, volunteering and other causes, they can force through their demands. You can't wring water out of a dry towel. So we are prepared to let some of our talent, even to the very best on the club, remain idle and salaryless rather than be held up in time of need."

The "very best" undoubtedly includes "Pep" Hornsby, although Rickey declined to mention any names.

Hug Is Not Signed.

The case of Miller Huggins was not included in the references of Rickey. In response to a question as to Huggins' future, Rickey professed absolute ignorance. Asked if Huggins had submittetd any terms, he said he could not answer.

However, the Rabbit's demands will have to be modest, this year. If the financial shoe pinches too hard, Rickey himself could jump in and direct the team.

In some quarters it is said the club's management would not feel at all embarrassed if the report that Huggins had gone to the American League proved to be true.

The situation in the baseball world is acute, financially. Few clubs made money, last year; practically all second division teams lost money. Some of them proved large losers, and among these may be noted the Boston Nationals, the Pittsburg Nationals, the St. Louis Browns, Washington Americans, Philadelphia Athletics, and probably the Brooklyn and Chicago Nationals and the New York Yankees.

Little Hope During War.

Some of these teams are tied to tremendous annual expenses and cannot get from under, next year. The Yankees pay $55,000 a year for the Polo Grounds. The Boston Nationals are the victims of a bonding scheme which, it is reported, involves them in the payment of $75,000 annually.

Cicotte in Form; Yanks Hit Other Chicago Hurlers

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Chicago and New York divided a double-header here, today, the locals winning the first by 12 to 8 and the visitors taking the second 3 to 1.

In the second game Cicotte was invincible after the first inning, when Miller tripled and scored on Ward's single. The visitors bunched hits on Thormaplen in the sixth and took advantage of New York's misplays. Felsch made a remarkable catch on Vick's bid for a home run in the seventh.

NEW SPORTS PLAN AT PENN

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 29.—The University of Pennsylvania today announced that instead of having all sports conducted by the athletic association, as has been the case for nearly 40 years, complete power has been invested in a "university council on athletics," composed of three trustees of the University, three alumni, three members of the faculty and three undergraduates.

SIMPSON EASY FOR AMES

AMES, Io., Sept. 29.—The Iowa State College football team easily defeated Simpson on State Field this afternoon in the first game of the season by a score of 47 to 0.

Coach Mayser gave 26 men a trial, substituting a full team in the third period.

Score by quarters:

Ames	12	7	14	14—47

AMERICAN LEAGUE CLUBS SCORED 108 RUNS YESTERDAY

173 Hits Were Made in Eight Contests, While Teams Were Charged With 49 Errors.

Yesterday proved a wild day for the clubs in the American League. In all eight contests were staged, and the teams tallied 108 runs, an average of more than 13 per contest. There were 173 hits and 49 errors. Fielder Jones' Browns had the honor of making the greatest number of errors in a single battle turning seven in the opener and 10 in the pair with the Red Sox.

But for excitement the night-cap between the Tigers and Athletics had it on all of them. Going into their half of the ninth five runs to the bad, the Mackmen scored five runs and won out, 12—11. The men of Mack won despite the fact that they were outhit, 15—11. The Tigers made six errors and the Athletics five.

The heaviest scoring battles were those between the Tigers and Macks, in which 35 runs were put over the plate. The Browns had 24 markers scored against them. Nineteen errors were turned in the two battles between the men of Jennings and Mack.

Benton's Pitching Feature.

With a team of substitutes in the field, the Giants won from the Reds. 4—2, overcoming a two-run lead gained by Matty's charges in the opening inning. The pitching of Rube Benton, who held the Cincinnati crew to two hits in the four frames he worked was the feature. McKechnie at third for the losers made three hits, one a triple.

ROUSH AND COBB SURE OF BATTING TITLE IN MAJORS

Leader in Both Circuits Has Advantage of 20 Points Over Nearest Competitor.

With the close of the major league season less than a week away, Ed Roush, the Cincinnati outfielder, appears certain of the National League batting championship.

Unofficial averages released yesterday give Roush, who is hitting .343, a 27-point lead over Rogers Hornsby of St. Louis, his nearest rival. Hornsby, however, has a lead of 3 points in total base hitting. Rousch, who has made 178 hits, cracked them out for 236 bases. Hornsby drove 161 hits for 239 bases. He has 24 doubles, 15 triples and 8 home runs to his credit.

Members of the New York club who are getting ready for the world's series battle with Chicago, continue their effective hitting. Benny Kauff is showing the way to his teammates with .311. Burns follows with .300, and Zimmerman is next with .297. Burns is firmly in possession of league scoring honors, having counter 101 times.

Carey of Pittsburg, who is leading base stealers, brought his total to 49. Cravath of Philadelphia clings to home-run honors with 12, and Deal of Chicago is topping the sacrifice hitters with 28. Cincinnati retained the lead in team batting with .263. The averages include games of last Wednesday.

Leading batters who have played in half or more of their club's games: Roush, Cincinnati, .343; Hornsby, St. Louis, .316; Kauff, New York, .311; Groh, Cincinnati, .305; Burns, New York, .300; Jack Smith, St. Louis, .298; Zimmerman, New York, .297; Wheat, Brooklyn, .296; Carey, Pittsburg, .293; Wilhoit, New York, .292.

Leading pitchers participating in 32 or more games, rated according to earned runs per game:

	G.	W.	L.	ER.
Anderson, New.	37	9	8	1.62
Alexander, Philadelphia	43	29	12	1.76

Cheney, Brooklyn	33	8	11	2.33
Rixey, Philadelphia	37	16	20	2.32
Toney, Cincinnati	42	24	16	2.37

There apparently is no chance for Tris Speaker, the 1916 batting champion, to overcome Ty Cobb's lead in the American League. Averages including games of Wednesday show the Georgian hitting .378 with Speaker 20 points behind him.

There is a merry scramble on for base stealing honors with Cobb and Chapman of Cleveland pressing Bobby Roth for the lead. Roth, with 49, has a one point advantage. Chapman is firmly in possession of sacrifice hitting honors, with 67. Bush, the Detroit shortstop, retains a five-run lead over Cobb in scoring. Bush has counted 100 times. Detroit leads in team batting with. 657.

Leading batters who have played in half or more of their club's games: Cobb, Detroit, .378; Speaker, Cleveland, .358; Sisler, .347; Felsch, Chicago, .308; Harris, Cleveland, .308; Veach, Detroit, .308; McInnis, Philadelphia, .304; Jackson, Chicago, .299; Lewis, Boston, .299; Rice, Washington, .298.

Leading pitchers participating in 33 or more games, rated according to earned runs per game:

Giants Not a Game Baseball Club, Veteran of 5 World's Series Says

JOHNNY EVERS told a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday that the Giants were "not a game ball club." He is the first thus far to make such a declaration, and his views are all the more interesting because he has been through five world's series and has the benefit of such experience.

"A New York sport writer asked me the other day what I thought of the Giants," said Trojan John, "and I told him I didn't think they were a game ball club. I've heard a lot of people say the Giants could win this series, if they talk hard and long enough. But I've found the Giants are not immune to the same sort of punishment. If the Sox will give them as good as they send they will find it an easy matter to hold their own.

"The series should be close because the teams appear evenly matched. I should say the best way to determine the winner would be to flip a coin. That's how close it looks to me. Barring one man on Rowland's team, I don't think the Giants will find a very lady-like outfit. McGraw is apt to make a big mistake if he figures his conversation artists will carry him through."

ST. LOUIS COUNTRY CLUB TENNIS TEAM DEFEATS MUNICIPAL A. A. STARS

The St. Louis Country Club Tennis team gained one more step in its climb to the St. Louis Tennis Association team championship by defeating the Municipal A. A. squad, 4 to 2, at the Country Club yesterday afternoon. This morning the last match of the schedule will be played when the Country Club meets Southampton on the Country Club Courts. A victory for the former team will give it eight victories with not a defeat, and consequently the title.

Yesterday's play was some of the best that has resulted in the team matches. After losing a long drawn first set, 9-11, Roland Hoerr defeated Val Satterfield in the next two sets, 6-0, 6-3. Walter Finger defeated Clarence Gamble, 1916 city champion, 6-8, 6-0, 6-4. The Municipal team took its secnd match when Walter Bowman won from Jim Wear, 6-4, 7-5. Other matches resulted as follows: Drummond Jones defeated Ray Hollinshead, 6-1, 6-1; Henry Cushman defeated E. A. Rice, 6-3, 6-4; Jones and Hoerr defeated Finger and Hollinshead 6-1, 6-4.

Miss Gould Wins All but One Game in Tennis Final

State Champion Victor Over Miss Helen Johnston in Straight Sets, 6-0, 6-1.

Miss Corrine Gould, the 17-year-old women's state tennis champion and Municipal title holder, completed a perfect season yesterday afternoon, when she won the city feminine court supremacy by defeating Miss Helen Johnston, 6-0, 6-1, in the final round match of the annual local tournament at the Triple A. Miss Gould has won each of the 14 tournament matches in which she has competed this season. She has not lost a set, nor has any opponent succeeded in winning more than three games in one set from her. Last week Miss Gould played Miss Molla Bjurstedt, women's national champion, and although defeated, made a commendable showing.

Miss Gould's performance in winning three local titles in one season is unequaled in local tennis circles. She commands an unquestionable supremacy.

In yesterday's match Miss Johnston did not play up to the full extent of her capability. She appeared nervous and fell down on strokes that she usually makes without effort. Her lone won game came in the middle of the second set on her own service.

The women's city double championships are still in progress and will be continued this week. None of the team matches were played yesterday.

CARDINAL ROOKIE TAMES ALEXANDER IN HURLING DUEL

Horstman Holds Philadelphia Hitters to Three Hits, Winning 7 to 2.

This National League schedule is a cruel thing. But for the fact that there will be no more games in the west, after today, one more member of the Huggins' Hurling Unit would get his regular turn on the firing line. This gentleman is none other than Oscar Horstman, whose relief work has been a big factor in keeping the Cardinals on the silken carpets of the first division.

The young righthander came through with a grand exhibition of pitching, yesterday, taming the Phillies 7 to 2. There is, however, so much glory in beating Grover Cleveland Alexander that nearly all other factors entering into a contest where such an instance ocur pale into insignifance. That is precisely what befell Horstman.

While the Cardinals were slamming Alexander for seven runs and 14 hits, the Phils were famishing on a meager diet of three hits and two runs. It was one of the rudest jolts Pat Moran's ace has encountered in the expiring season.

Rogers Hornsby, who has been evidencing unmistakable signs of a hitting slump, shook off the sickness yesterday and registered four healthy blows in as many tries, two of which were doubles. He scored two of the Cards' seven runs and drove in two more, which is about as much as could be expected.

Our Hudsons Are About All Gone

Number of Super-Sixes at present prices limited. Practically all makers have already increased prices.

We now see the last of the Hudson Super-Six cars we will be able to sell at present prices. The factory has given us definite allotments. On at least two models they have notified us that final shipments will be completed within two weeks.

When those cars are sold it means that the last Hudson Super-Six to be had at the present base price of $1650 for the seven-passenger phaeton has gone. Then a new price will become effective. That price will be based upon material costs that are much higher than were those of the present production.

As a single example of the greater cost of an automobile today as compared to the cost of a year ago consider the item of iron. Its low price for the years of 1915-1917 was $12.27 a ton. Today it sells at $52.90 a ton. Iron is used in making the steels, the frame, the motor, the body, etc. Its use in a fine automobile constitutes a large item. You can get from this some idea of the tremendous need for automobile price increases.

Then when you think of the number of cars that have gone up in price in the last few months you get a further understanding of the great opportunity you have in buying a Hudson Super-Six now. More than fifty makers have advanced prices within the past two months. Cars which formerly sold at $1200 and $1300 now cost about as much as a Super-Six. There was no question as to which was the preferred car then, though because of the lower price many such cars were sold. Now that there is no price advantage, Hudson sales are at their highest. People realize more than ever before that a Hudson offers the greatest value on the market. They are taking advantage of the opportunity that the present market condition offers. You, too, can save as they are saving if you act promptly. We know how many cars we are to get, but we do not know how much longer we can accept orders at present prices.

Be guided by the experience of the past as it affects the Super-Six. Buy now. It is like buying any other staple on which you have positive knowledge that there is soon to be a price increase.

Surely there need be nothing said in this connection to persuade you to a Super-Six. It has already established its reputation on every speedway, in every endurance test, in the most difficult mountain climbs, in the most arduous road trips, and most of all in the minds of more than forty thousand users.

SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH'S REVIEW OF MARKET CONDITIONS

NEW YORK STOCK VALUES RECORD MIXED CHANGES ON THE WEEK'S DEALINGS

THE EMBARGO ON GOLD

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly financial review, says:

"It is fairly to be presumed that the Federal Reserve Board in prohibiting further export of gold from here to Spain, was guided by its feeling that the scympathies of Spanish financiers have leaned towards Germany.

"To the extent that this view had any reasonable foundation, it would be an entirely proper war measure to interfere with shipments of our gold to any such destination.

"The fact that gold exports have this week been allowed to go to Japan and Canada—though both were included in the list of countries subject to possible embargo—indicates that the policy of restriction is being pursued with due discrimination.

"The valid point of criticism, on the language of the Reserve Board's own announcement, has been very generally missed. This was the introductory (and therefore most conspicuous) statement that the general policy would be to release gold only when directly and definitely connected with a corresponding import of merchandise.

"No criterion could be economically worse, especially when we may presently be in the position of buying more goods from suspected neutrals than we sell to them, and when we may be selling more to friendly allies than they send to us.

Situation Is Clouded.

"Nor was any such criterion necessary when the board itself sets forth so all-embracing a test as compatibility with the public interest.

"The kind of harm the possibly inadvertent revival of the old-time mercantile theory may do, is illustrated by the contention, gravely made on an editorial page this week, that outside markets which have entrusted gold to American depositories, will be better satisfied to continue the policy if they see that our Government is prohibiting gold exports.

"This conception of financial ideas would throw a somewhat peculiar light on the huge remittances of gold by England to the United States, and on the somewhat prevalent idea that London had thereby greatly enhanced its prestige as a financial market.

"The campaign for our Government's second war loan starts under happy auspices and with a high degree of confidence in the outcome, throughout the banking and investing community. There will doubtless come an interval (as there did in the canvass for the 3½ per cent) when doubts and misgivings will prevail. It is fortunate in the whole that this should be so, for confidence ought not to be replaced by overconfidence and an intense sustained and vigorous campaign will be indispensable up to the time when the subscription lists close.

"Fortunately there is the best assurance that the campaign will surpass in effectiveness even that which resulted in the great success of our subscription of last June. After a while we shall see the publicity machinery converging on the war savings certificates designed for applications in very small amounts. With the number of our industrial and farming workers what it is, and their financial condition what the past three years have made it, there is not the least reason why our own achievement in this task should not far overtop England's receipts of more than $500,000,000 from the same class of applicants since the plan was introduced in 1916.

"German newspapers are reported to be basing their appeal for large subscriptions to the new German war loan on the desirability of 'giving an answer to President Wilson.'

Our own people now have, at least, as good an opportunity of giving an answer to the German autocracy.

"The stock market was irregularly lower on the week. Yesterday's market dropped sharply, but recovered the losses at the close."

Weekly Curb Review.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—There was continued adjustment in the trading on the Broad Street curb this week in the work of eliminating war order stocks and affiliated groups from active trading and from prominence in the market situation. Many of these stocks were without an active nearby market, and when sales were made they could only be effected at sharp declines.

Curtis Aeroplane furnished an instance of the general situation, falling from 42 to 36½, and in the past two days were neglected. Submarine, which sold at 19 early in the week, sagged off to 16⅝ and Maxim Motors from 1¼ dropped to the new low record of ⅞.

Bethlehem Steel new preferred which was traded in when issued, sold at the beginning of the week at 101⅝, and yesterday dropped to 100, the price at which it is offered for subscription by stockholders.

A feature of the week's trading was the development of strength in United Motor, which ranged from 19½ to 24⅝. National Motors sold down to the new low record of 7; Chevrolet dropped from 85 to 75, followed by a rally to 80.

The Independent Oil stocks were fairly active, but many of them were heavy and sustained substantial losses. Most interest was attached to the trading in Midwest Refining, which rose from 143 to 163, the highest at which it sold since it was ex-rights. Sinclair Gulf dropped from 20 to 15. Cosden sold at 9⅝ to 9 and Merritt ranged from 36 to 33¾.

Mining stocks were generally quiet, but a few were in active demand, with Magma advancing from 50 to 57, but later lost this gain. Calumet and Jerome was another strong feature.

Telegraphic advices received late in the week confirmed reports of opening up of new ore bodies, and on these advices the stock advanced from 2 to 2½.

Late in the week the Lavell Gold Mining Co. stock attracted attention because of evidence of high ore values. The stock has not yet been traded in, but is expected to be listed after a public subscription offering.

Russian bonds were heavy, with the 6½s ranging from 80 to 78, and the 5½s selling at 70 and 68. Canadian Government 5s ranged from 96⅛ to 95⅜.

COTTON IS IRREGULAR DESPITE GULF STORM

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—The cotton market was irregular early today, with the trade showing nervousness while waiting for a better line on the effects of the tropical storm. Early advices suggested that there had been high winds along the east gulf coast with heavy rains extending into the interior, but whether there had been any material damage to crops was uncertain.

A cable from the Liverpool Cotton Association stated that the new contract beginning Monday was called an emergency contract and had the approval of the British Government.

Apprehensions that Monday morning would bring many reports of storm damage to the crops, caused enough covering to send December up to 23.79c and Jan. to 23.65c during the middle of the morning, or about 8 to 12 points net higher. Reactions followed under renewed liquidation or realizing for over the week end, however, with the close barely steady at a net loss of 4 to 11 points.

Cotton futures closed steady. Oct., [illegible]; Dec., 23.64c; Jan., 23.46c; March, [illegible]; May, 23.81c. Spot quiet; middling, [illegible].

FINANCIAL.

DIVIDEND NOTICE

WHITMAN BULL TRACTOR CO.

Will be paid on October 1st to stockholders of record Sept. 25, 1917, at the rate of 8% per annum.

G. V. HALLIDAY & COMPANY

Moon Motor Car Co.

7% Cumulative Preferred Stock

A quarterly dividend of $1.75 per share will be paid on October 1st to preferred stockholders of record of Sept. 26th.

Aside from the regular business of the Company they have orders booked for approximately $3,000,000 worth of cars of the new $1000 model, which will be ready for delivery Oct. 1st, 1917.

During the past week the Company received an order from the United States Government for gun mounts aggregating $1,000,000. This order carries a handsome profit, and will not only increase the security behind the Preferred Stock, but will show exceedingly large earnings for the Common Stock.

The majority of this stock having been subscribed for, and prior to listing on the St. Louis and Chicago Stock Exchanges, we offer 2 shares of the Common Stock as bonus with each share of the Preferred Stock at $100 per share.

Missouri Plate Glass Co.

7% Cumulative Preferred Stock

Tax Free in Missouri

Permit to Sell This Issue Granted by Bank Commissioner State of Missouri

Preferred Stock $2,000,000.00 — Common Stock $3,500,000.00

ASSETS—

The Company owns and operates (at Valley Park, Missouri) the second largest Independent Plate Glass Plant in the United States; also two hundred comfortable homes for workmen; the city water works; the modern Valley Park Hotel and for our purposes an inexhaustible supply of high-grade silica sand—the most important ingredient in the manufacture of plate glass.

EARNINGS—

At full operation of present equipment, estimated at five times preferred dividend requirements. Introduction of new capital will increase present possible output, provide new equipment and bring plant to greatest capacity.

CONTRACTS ACCEPTED—

Require entire output of the plant for more than seven months at present rate of production; and the company has declined more orders than could be filled within two years—losing all this money in profits until needed capital can be raised.

PREFERRED STOCK REDEEMABLE AT $11.00 PER SHARE—

Offered at Par, $10 Per Share, With Bonus of 20% in Common Stock

Heavy underwriting commitments and reservations already received. Less than $500,000.00 yet to be sold in Missouri. Write today for further details, or send remittance by mail. Investors invited to visit the plant in company with our salesmen.

WYOMING SECOND STANDARD OIL CO.

INCOME NOW ABOUT $200 PER DAY

This company brought in a 30-barrel well Sept. 8 and a 60-barrel well Sept. [illegible] both on its 320-acre lease near Chanute, Kansas, the production of which added to that being pumped from its other four wells on this tract, and the gas flowing into the pipe line from its gas well in Nowata county, Oklahoma, means early dividends for the stockholders. The Company has contracted with one of the big Mid-Continent drilling firms for the sinking of forty more wells, which should come in at the rate of two every month for some time to come. To cover the cost of this new development work a small block of treasury stock is being offered at the bargain price of 10 cents per share. We expect it to be worth $1.00 or better long before this drilling program is completed. More gas wells are to be sunk in Nowata county and near Coffeyville, Kansas, and active operations are already under way preparatory to the drilling of two deep wells on two sections controlled by this company south of the Naval Petroleum Reserve in the Salt Creek field of Wyoming. The indications are that this company will be completely financed within thirty days and the stock withdrawn from sale. Wire your reservation at our expense; send money later.

Drillers and Refinery Men Are Now Buying BIG BEAR Oil Stock

Over $20,000.00 worth of Big Bear Oil Co. stock has been purchased by Casper, Wyoming, people. Our two rigs are only 10 miles from Casper, so these men know how fast we are drilling and how near we are to a big production. The Big Bear Oil Co., though only five months old, is drilling two oil wells in the Big Muddy field. This rapid financing is due to the fact that it is a co-operative company, no officer receiving any salary or commission. Your money goes for actual drilling. Officers are efficient, reliable men. Because of the rapid sale of this stock, we offer it now at 12½ cents per share, reserving the right to refuse your subscription and return your money if your subscription comes in after [illegible] shares are sold at this price. Stocks [illegible] selling for $40, at the start sold for [illegible] cents a share. Capitalization is only [illegible] 000: stock full paid and non-assessable. Sold on monthly payment plan if desired. Drilling in the famous Big Muddy field where all wells drilled to Wall Creek sand are over 500 barrels daily capacity. One 500-barrel well should make this stock [illegible] in the dollars. If you want some stock at the 12½-cent price, write at once. Get literature, bank references and map. G. Krape Inv. GOOD WEATHER CAUSES SELLING IN CORN PIT

Ideal weather for late development and curing of the corn crop lowered futures rather sharply on the Merchants' Exchange last week, after a buying wave had raised the market to the highest level reached in nearly two months. Yesterday, however, shorts were run to cover on low temperatures in the Northwest, and predictions of light frost over Sunday, and a gain of 1 cent resulted.

Price fluctuations are materially influenced at present, by the scheduled meeting of grain men in Chicago on Oct. 11, to discuss the raising or removel of the present maximum of $1.28 on futures, now in force here and in Chicago.

Dealers in December corn are at present in a peculiar position. The cash price is above $2, and stocks of corn at primary points are entirely inadequate for delivery at the end of the option, should the farmer decide to hold his corn off the market as he is his wheat and oats.

The trade generally is very bearish on corn, owing to the outlook for a record-breaking crop, which now is practically assured, and are selling the December option short on this account.

It is doubtful, however, if the interests in control of the Chicago market will permit enough corn to accumulate at that center for delivery on contract, especially if the movement is light. And if it is, the same ending of the option may be seen as was witnessed in Chicago September oats yesterday, when the price advanced nearly 3 cents to the highest level in months, while the other options were borely steady, largely as a result of shorts selling the market, on the theory that the crop is a record-breaker, as it is, but still the movement to market has been one of the smallest in years.

Very often the movement of new corn is small in December, and if it is this year, with the cash market above $2, and futures around $1.18, it will be interesting to see where the short sellers get their corn to make deliveries. For if they cannot do so, they will be forced to buy their way out in the pit, and that would mean that the option would go out at the maximum price, if cash corn is above that level, which is highly probable with the present market quoted above $2.

CATTLE MARKET IS IRREGULAR TO LOWER ON WEEK

Reported for the Post-Dispatch by the National Livestock Commission Co., National Stockyards, Ill.

COMPARATIVE RECEIPTS.

	Last Week.	Week Before.	Last Year.
Cattle	42,000	41,800	35,800
Hogs	21,000	22,700	48,200
Sheep	11,400	11,900	11,800

Cattle receipts were excessive last week, showing a slight increase over the previous week, and as a result the market showed another sharp break on everything except strictly choice beef steers and yearling butcher cattle, which held their own with last week's good time, while all other classes declined fully 50c per cwt.

Choice to prime beef steers are quoted at $16 to $18; good to choice, $12.50 to $15.50; medium to good, $10 to $12; common to medium, $8 to $10; common off-colored light killing steers, $7 to $8; good to choice stockers and feeders, $8 to $9; medium to good, $7 to $8; common to medium, $6.25 to $7; good to choice stock sows, $6.50 to $6.75; good to choice stock heifers, $7 to $7.50; choice to prime fat yearling butcher cattle, $14 to $16; good to choice, $11 to $14; medium to good, $8.50 to $11; common to medium, $7 to $8.50; choice to fancy heavy beef cows, $9 to $11; good to choice, $8 to $9; medium to good, $7 to $8; cutters, $6 to $7; canners, $5.25 to $5.50; good fat beef bulls, $8.50 to $10; heavy sausage bulls, $7 to $8, and light sausage bulls, $6 to $7.

Trade in hogs showed a fair price advance over that of the week before, on all good hogs of weight. These closed the week at a top of $19.60, being about 65c per cwt higher than the close of the previous week.

At the close of the marke yesterday choice hogs 180 lbs up were quotable at $19 to $19.60; mixed hogs 160 lbs up, $18 to $18.75; 120 to 150 lb pigs, $17.75 to $18.25; 90 to 115 lb pigs, $17 to $17.75; best rough hogs, $18.25, with half-fat roughs at $14 to $15.

Prices showed a downward tendencsy on lambs, though the market for fat sheep remained on a steady basis.

As compared with the close of the previous week, lambs declined around 50c per cwt, yesterdays' market showing a top of $17 for lambs, with the bulk of the good lambs selling from $16 to $16.75; medium, $15.50 to $16; fat sheep, $11; choppers, $7.50 to $8; canners, $5; choice breeding ewes, $16 to $16.50.

GRAND JURY TELLS WHY IT INDICTED 2 OPTOMETRISTS

Reveals Alleged Legislative Graft Plot, Says Abel and Frohoff Swore Falsely About It.

Perjury indictments returned yesterday against Oliver Abel and Herman Frohoff, opticians, by the June grand jury contain details of the legislative graft investigation which were not made public at the time the indictments were voted and Abel and Frohoff were arrested, three months ago.

They are accused of swearing falsely before the grand jury in the investigation of an alleged conspiracy by members of the Missouri Optometrists' Association to bribe members of the last Legislature to pass a bill licensing optometrists in Missouri.

The indictments contain the statement that they resulted from the testimony given by Abel and Frohoff in an investigation of complaints against Harry H. Watts of Kansas City, president of the Optometrists' Association; William F. Donovan of Springfield, secretary; Otto Bachmann, H. Frank Brown, Ernest Eggert, Frank Guibalt, Charles P. Reber, Reinhold Schenkmeyer, William A. Vawter and Charles Werner.

Grand Jury Told of $2500 Fund.

It is alleged the grand jury was informed that the man named, representing the Association, conspired to bribe members of the Legislature, and that they undertook to raise a fund of $2500 for the purpose, assessing each member $7.50 In this way a fund of $2115 was raised, and, it is alleged, was deposited in the Tower Grove Bank by Eggert, treasurer of the association.

It is alleged that Joseph J. Crites of Rolla, Mo., an attorney, was retained to promote the passage of the bill and that he received a fee of $500, with a promise that he would receive an additional $2000 if the bill passed.

The money, according to the charge in the indictments, was placed in the safes of A. H. Hatch, an optician in Jefferson City, and was to be paid to Crites if the bill passed.

One feature of the investigation disclosed is that near the close of the Legislature, Crites asked for $1000 more than was agreed upon. Although not stated in the indictment, it is known that there was testimony that Crites summoned Watts and Donovan from the Central Hotel in Jefferson City to his rooms in the Madison Hotel, and that when they walked down the hall leading to his rooms they saw an influential legislator, from a rural county, leaving Crites' rooms. When they entered, according to the testimony, Crites told them it would take another $1000 to get the bill through.

Other evidence, which the indictment does not disclose, is that a tin box containing the money was removed from Hatch's safe by a member of the Association, and taken to his room in the Central Hotel, where he and a man in the employ of the association counted the money, most of which was in packages of $500.

When the count was completed the man employed by the association cocked his head to one side in a listening attitude and urged the optician to go to the door, saying he heard somebody there. When the optician returned, having found no one at the door, the money was back in the tin box. According to the testimony the next time the money was counted one of the $500 packages was gone.

Crites is under indictment at Springfield on a charge of having accepted employment in connection with the optometry bill on a contingent fee, which is in violation of law. His case will be tried in Springfield in November. The St. Louis Grand Jury also investigated Crites' connection with the Police salary increase bill to promote the passage of which he was employed by the Police Relief Association.

Attorneys who practice in the criminal courts express the opinion that the indictments against Abel and Frohoff will be thrown out of court. They say that there can be no perjury unless that Grand Jury, before which the testimony was given, had jurisdiction to return indictments in the matter under investigation, and point out that the jurisdiction of the optometry invsetigation was in Springfield and Jefferson City, and that consequently witnesses who testified before the St. Louis Grand Jury could not be convicted of perjury.

ITALIAN KING VISITS VERDUN

PARIS, Sept. 29.—King Victor Emmanuel of Italy has completed a three days' visit to the French battle front with President Poincare. The party visited the reconquered portion of Alsace and the battlefields of Verdun, Rheims, the Champagne sector, Noyon, Chauney and Ham. The Italian King's visit was made in return to that of President Poincare, who last month inspected the Italian front.

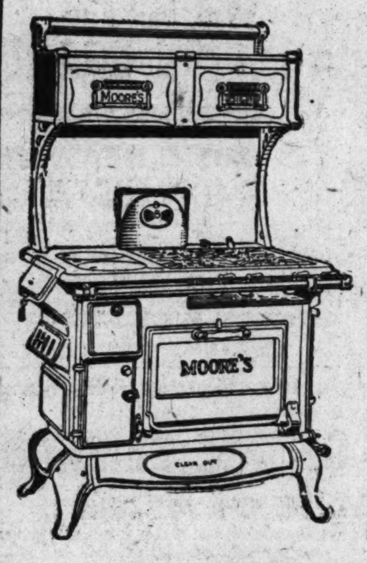
Help the Government Conserve Its Fuel—and Save Money for Yourself!

The cost of coal at this time, together with the request of our Government for economy in its use, compels everyone to ask: How can I get along with less coal? How can I get more out of the coal I am using? The answer to these questions is—USE MOORE'S AIR-TIGHT HEATER or a MOORE'S RANGE—constructed with the celebrated Moore's Anti-Carbon Fire Box with slotted fire back.

The United States Government statistics show:
"A bushel of soft coal contains 38 per cent volatile carbon or gas, 44 per cent fixed carbon or coke, making a total of 82 per cent heating power.
In ordinary Ranges it has never been possible to burn the gas of soft coal and the greater part of its heating power has been lost.
Moore's Fire-box with which Moore's Combination Ranges are equipped is constructed specially to burn all The Gas, The Smoke and The Soot of soft coal, making it as valuable for heat as hard coal.

"Moores Anti-Carbon Fire Box with Slotted Fire Back or Pot, as in all Moore's Stoves, burns that 38% of soot, gas and smoke ordinarily wasted and makes heat out of it. The solid matter will then do more than the original fuel in the common fire box. This means a saving of more than 1/3 of the fuel, and what you save in fuel expense will pay the original cost of the Stove or Range in a few years.

Moore's Combination Ranges for Gas and Coal



The best and most economical Combination Range to be had. Burns gas, coal, wood or slack.

Equipped With the Celebrated Moore's Slotted Anti-Carbon Fire Back

Also has all modern improvements, nothing to get out of order, no burner plates to remove when changing from gas to coal.

A RANGE THAT WORKS ITSELF.

The Original

WIFE AND CHILDREN.

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of our dear mother, Louisa Oberrieder, who departed this life one year ago, Oct. 2, 1916. Gone but not forgotten. Sadly missed by

THE BEREAVED FAMILY.

In Memoriam.

In memory of Ottillie Fischer, died Sept. 29, 1914:

Some time, some day, our eyes shall meet,
The place we love so well,
And all that is left for memory,
Is her grave on a distant hill.

Sadly missed by
MOTHER, SISTER AND BROTHER-IN-LAW.

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of my dear daughter and sister, Mrs. Lillian Weaver (nee Forman), who departed this life four years ago, Sept. 29, 1913:

There are griefs that cannot find comfort
And wounds that cannot be healed.
There are sorrows so deep in the human heart
That they cannot be half revealed.

Sadly missed by
MOTHER AND BROTHERS.

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of our dear wife and mother, Mrs. Ethel K. Strother, who died one year ago, Sept. 27, 1916,

Some time, some day
Our eyes shall see the face we loved so well,
Some time our hands shall press in hers and never say farewell.
Her merry laugh we hear no more,
The voice we loved is still,
And all that is left for memory is her grave on a distant hill.

Sadly missed by husband and son,
WALTER H. STROTHER.

In Memoriam.

In loving remembrance of our dear mother, Anna B. Gassmann, who departed this life Sept. 30, 1916.

The month of September again is here,
The saddest month in all the year,
The saddest month in the year,
Because it took from us our dear mother.
How we miss you, mother, dear;
You've been gone from us one year,
But we still have the memory
Of your sweet and smiling face,
And will never find another
Who can never take your place.

Sadly missed by,
SONS, DAUGHTERS AND GRANDCHILDREN.
SAMUEL H. STROTHER. (c)

In Memoriam.

In loving remembrance of our dear mother, Nettie Cox, who departed her life Sept. 25, 1916:

The month of September is again here,
The saddest month in all the year,
Because it took from us our mother.
How we miss you, mother, dear,
You've been gone from us one year,
But we still have the memories of your sweet and smiling face,
And will never find another
Who can ever take your place.

Sadly missed by
CHILDREN, HUSBAND, RELATIVES AND MANY DEAR FRIENDS.

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of our dear mother, Evelyn Stabenow, who departed this life two years ago, Sept. 26, 1915.

The Lord said you have finished,
Come up higher, Mother dear.
You have won a crown in heaven
For the pain you suffered here.
Those who saw you in your casket,
Pure and white and O. so fair,
Thought you were the like of heaven
As you lay so sweetly there.
Just two years ago you left us,
How we miss you, Mother dear,
And remember all your kindness
As we drop a silent tear.
Rest in peace darling mother.

Sadly missed by her daughters,
MRS. E. GODEJOHANN, MRS. E. DENIS.

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of our daughter and only sister, Margaret Fitzgerald, who departed this life one year ago, Sept. 28, 1916. May the name of Margaret Fitzgerald and memories of her beautiful life be engraved upon the hearts of those who loved her.

Forget you, no, we never will;
It was a bitter pain, a shock severe,
to part with you we loved so dear.
Day by day we sadly miss you;
Friends may think the wound is healed,
But they little know the sadness
that's within our hearts concealed.

Sadly missed by father, mother and only sister.
FITZGERALD FAMILY.

There was a requiem mass at 6 a. m., offered Friday, Sept. 28, 1917, at St. Leo's Church, for the repose of the soul of Margaret Fitzgerald. (c)

In memory of our loving mother, Eva Margarette Kranz (nee Schuster), who departed this life two years ago.

How we miss you, mother dear;
You've been gone from us two years,
But we still have the memory of your sweet and smiling face
And we will never find another who can ever take your place.

Sadly missed by
SON AND DAUGHTER.

In Memoriam.

In memory of Leo Joseph Lynch:

October is here.
To us the sadest day of the year.
In loving remembrance of my dear son and brother:
Sad and sudden was the call
Of our dear son and brother, loved by all.
We little thought that on that day
Our dear son and brother would be called away.
Friends may think the wound is healed,
But little know the grief within our hearts concealed.
He shall never be forgotten,
Never from our memory fade.
Loving hearts will always linger
Around the grave where he is laid.

Sadly missed by
MOTHER AND SISTER.

Requiem High Mass.

PRICES are advancing "higher" and "higher" at every "clothing store" all over the country, but the prices remain the same at the "Drummers' Sample Clothes Shop," where your "bank roll" will "double duty" itself. These fine garments are made by the manufacturers for "display" or "modeling" purposes for their traveling salesmen. Of course they are made much better than the regular goods. After they show them off we buy them at a big discount. You save the difference. We give you the benefit of our immense buying capacity, eliminating all unnecessary expense, such as "high rents," credit accounts. This policy enables us to save you $5 to $10; 1917-18 advance styles are here; 100 new "belt-around" greens, browns, stripes, all sizes, $10 to $15; sample pants, $1.95 to $3.95; 50 "tailor-made" cost up to $35; our price, $16.50 to $19.50.

WHERE there's a "will" there is always a "way." We have found for "you" the "way" to shoot the "right" kind of "ammunition" that don't shoot your "dough away" and be "dressed up" to look prosperous at all "times" at little or no "expense." We have saved thousands of dollars for the clothing-buying public. We are making it possible for you to wear two and three suits a season at the price of the customary one by purchasing our uncalled-for garments from our cleaning department; garments are tailor-made and from the best manufacturers; 100 suits all sizes and colors; some silk-lined; English and plain models, $5 to $10; vest 10c; pants $1.25 to $2.50; coats $1.50 to $3.50. SIMPSON'S "Travels in Russia" is not a war book, but one based on travels in 1910 and 1912, when nothing worse than the old regime and the Asiatic cholera prevailed. The farmborn, newspaper man, author, formerly of the Illinois State Journal and the New York Musical Courier, is one of the few Anglo-Saxon writers who had the industry to speak and read the difficult but beautiful language of the Russians before traveling among them. Thus he was enabled immediately to go far into less beaten paths of the interior. There were the beautiful Crimea, the Black Sea, Sevastopol, the old Tartar capital, Bachtchiserai; Odessa, Kiev and the Dnieper River; the Volga River, Samara, Kasan and the famous fair at Nijni Novgorod; the Kama River, Perm and the birthplace of Tschaikowsky at Votkinsky Zavod; Moscow, Petrograd, Warsaw, Cracow, Bruenn in Moravia, also Austria and Hungary, the Danube from Vienna to Buda Pesth; finally Finland, with Helsingfors and a wonderful visit with Jaan Sibelius at Jarven peae.

Though the book strongly reflects the life of a musician, it is also for laymen, and since issuing in December, 1916, many beautiful letters to the author attest nonmusicians' great enjoyment of the casual humor, the fine tone and the great help toward finding some of the true flavor of Russian everyday life. The book is most closely written, comprises but 136 pages, with more than 50 half tones and 16 musical etchings. It is destined to a classic place as an aid to club workers, and for the intense entertainment of all who love a book brought together with industry and literary conscience.

LOUISIANA

FAMOUS PECAN GROVE PLANTATION.
HEART OF LOUISIANA—MISSISSIPPI DELTA.
$30,000.00.
1700 acres finest alluvial soil in the world; 800 acres open land. Boll weevil, yes, or the price would be $170,000, but no finer corn or alfalfa land in the world, and even with the boll weevil they are making half bale of cotton to the acre this year; all high land; fronts Tensas River, a deep bank, navigable stream, for 1½ miles; natural growth of white clover; 100,000 acres free hog and cattle range; acorns on this virgin timber land make this the finest hog-raising proposition in the South; properly handled, this land will grow as much corn per acre as your $200 Missouri land; don't come down expecting to see a highly developed, thickly settled country. The boll weevil drove the big planter out 10 or 12 years ago and the majority of the land has been laying out since that time; improvements ample, but not in good repair; will make exceptionally good terms to responsible parties.

See me at once for this bargain.

YOUR LAST CHANCE

I believe unipmroved land in the Little River drainage district, now selling from $40 to $75, will not be obtainable below $125 before the close of 1918. I and my correspondents have listed over 12,000 acres of cutover, unimproved land, which we will sell at $45 to $60. Some of this land is as fine as there is in the entire district, and is today well worth double what we are selling it for; terms, one-fourth to one-half cash, balance to suit. Box A-13, Post-Dispatch. (c99)

Poultrymen in England Specializing on Eggs

An English poultry authority, Prof. Edward Brown, has been lecturing in this country. Poultry keepers in England have, of course, been having the same kind of troubles we are having in this country, but the troubles have been longer continued over there. The prices of food for poultry have advanced 100 per cent. This has wiped out profits for some poultry raisers. But others, by careful planning, have done well, some even better than ever before, due to high prices for eggs especially. English labor is well employed at good wages, so that although the high prices pinch, they are paid cheerfully.

In England they are specializing on eggs as never before, because it is not now profitable to fatten fowls for the market. A greater use is made of roots and green stuff. While many poultry raisers in England are not keeping so many fowls as in the past, a great many laborers are keeping a few fowls in the back yard who never kept fowls before. Many English farmers have profited by the war, because the cost of raising and keeping fowls on farms has not increased so rapidly as in the towns.

Prof. Brown expresses the opinion that poultry products will continue high in price for several years after the war, due to the world-wide shortage in breeding and market stock and in all food products.

COWPEAS SUGGESTED AS FEED FOR CHICKENS

Arkansas Raiser Tells of Satisfactory Mixtures Made Without Use of Wheat.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Sept. 29.—The virtue of cowpeas as a satisfactory and economical feed for chickens is extolled by Hillory Jennings, Little Rock poultry expert, in an article written for the Arkansas Profitable Farming Bureau of the Little Rock Board of Commerce. Jennings suggests cowpeas as a substitute for wheat, the price of which makes it practically prohibitive as chicken feed.

"The speculators who have been juggling the wheat and flour prices and the other fellows who have been buying up the poultry and other livestock which the farmers and other breeders have been compelled to sell, are getting theirs," he writes. "The poultry markets already are showing a tendency of a crowded condition because of the large number of hens being sold by poultry raisers, and when the hen gets into the moult there will be a still greater sale on account of nonproduction, because hens that do not lay cannot be retained at the present high price of all chicken feeds. The food control bill will in a large measure relieve the situation, but it is up to the man with a flock of chickens to feed his flock so that they will show a profit.

Wheat Found to Be Unnecessary.

"Wheat, at the present price, is prohibitive as a poultry food, and for years people supposed that unless their hens had wheat they could not expect eggs. Several of our State agricultural colleges and hundreds of practical poultrymen have been experimenting with other feeds and have discovered that wheat is not a necessity, and that in some cases it is injurious, as a poultry feed. Many records made with a wheatless ration are much larger than those of the same hens made with the wheat.

"We have been experimenting with cowpeas and find that they are superior to wheat as an egg-producing feed. We also find that the health of our moulting hens is better, and the mortality less without wheat than with it. In feeding 100 pounds of live weight of hens weighing from three to five pounds, it requires three pounds of cracked corn and two pounds of cowpeas. In this combination you get .2354 more protein than you would if the same amount of wheat were used instead of cowpeas. In the cowpea mixture you get .0134 more food value than as though wheat were fed. There is no difference in the two combinations as to fat. At the market prices today there is no difference in the cost of wheat and cowpeas.

"By adding oats to the corn-cowpea mixture we have a much better scratch grain than the regular commercial scratch grain as an egg producer. Besides what grain is fed is sweet and wholesome.

How to Make Cowpea Mixture.

"We find that 100 pounds of cracked corn, 66 pounds of cowpea meal and 32 pounds of oats will feed 20 five-pound hens for 40 days, and at the present market prices you will save $1.13 over the regular commercial scratch grains that contain wheat. In the past year the best of the commercial scratches have contained nothing but broken grains of wheat and the screenings, which has reduced its food value considerably, but did not cheapen it to the consumer.

"If the hens are reduced in flesh by moulting, this cowpea mixture can be made to assist them through the moult and to regain their lost weight by adding about five pounds of sunflower seed to each 100 pounds of mixture. The sunflower seed contains more fat than any other known grain, and is appreciated by the hens as much, if not more, than any other grain.

"In feeding the above to a flock of 25 yearling hens we increased the egg production 20 per cent in 18 days and 25 per cent in 30 days, and have been able to hold this increase, although the hens are in full moult. Many of the hens have nearly all their new feathers, some are just starting nicely, and others have lost nearly all their coats. The red combs and singing while scratching their meals out of the litter indicate that they are healthy and happy."

Mt. Olive Poultry Show.

The Mt. Olive Poultry Association of Mt. Olive, Ill., will hold its fifth annual show Dec. 6 to 9 inclusive. J. C. Johnson will be judge of the exhibits. William H. Danklef is secretary of the association.

TO LICENSE SHIPPERS HERE

Collector of Customs Here Gets Notice of Authority.

Authority has been given the Collector of Customs in St. Louis to issue licenses to St. Louis shippers instead of having to refer their applications to the collector of customs at the port from which the goods are to be sent out of this country. This applies to shipments of all commodities on the controlled list valued at $100 or less.

A branch office of the Bureau of Export Licenses will be established in St. Louis shortly. The authority given this office probably will not exceed that already in the Branch Office of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, which at present issues a great number of licenses without having to refer them to Washington.

Germans Hanged 150 Slavs, Report Says.

LONDON, Sept. 29.—According to a Central News dispatch from Petrograd, 150 Russians belonging to various Socialist-Left and other political organizations have been hanged by the Germans since their occupation of Riga.

Poultry Problems Solved

Insufficient Particulars.

I have some brown Leghorn hens which look healthy, but when killed and opened I find a bag of water in their intestines. I feed them carefully. Are they fit to eat?—Anxious.

This is either an incorrect description of the condition of these birds, or they have a brand-new ailment. In all our experiences and observations we have seen or heard of nothing that corresponds with the condition described. We would prefer to have a more detailed description of this ailment and the symptoms, before making any recommendations. It is not probable, however, that this condition has affected the meat as food.

Minorcas or Leghorns?

Could you please tell me which make the best layers, black Minorcas or white Leghorns? Has the difference in combs of Minorcas anything to do with their laying? Are they nonsitters? I have been living in a neighborhood where one could not keep fowls until two weeks ago, but intend now to buy a few chickens of this breed. Your page in the Sunday paper is my first pick.—C. E., St. Louis.

Under average conditions a flock of white Leghorns will lay more eggs in a given time than a flock of the same number of Minorcas. But if the eggs of the two were weighed, the difference would not be nearly so great. It might even favor the Minorcas, since they lay a very large egg as compared with Leghorns. One point in favor of Minorcas for town or suburbs is that they are quiet and ordinarily confined in a six-foot inclosure without trouble. They are classed as nonsitters. Years ago the standard Minorca had a very large comb and many breeders declared a large comb to be the mark of a good layer. This statement is still heard occasionally, but should not be taken seriously, as the size of comb has no bearing on laying quality. Combs have gradually been bred down to a smaller size in late years, a sensible move all around.

Judges Are Named for Poultry Show

The St. Louis Poultry Breeders' Association will hold their annual show in the Coliseum, Dec. 31 to Jan. 5 inclusive.

The management of the St. Louis show is making a special endeavor this year to get out a premium list which will be very attractive to the breeders, and we expect to have this premium list ready for distribution about the middle of November. We invite the breeders of the country to make an entry at St. Louis this year as we feel that St. Louis is geographically located for the blending of all sections of these United States, because of its being the central convention city situated in the very heart of the United States. We believe that we can entertain you and make your entry in St. Louis a pleasure as well as a profitable undertaking.

Newton Cosh, Vineland, N. J.; Barred Plymouth Rocks, Columbia Rocks, Dark and White Cornish;

George Burgott, Lawtons, N. Y.; white Plymouth Rocks, white Wyandottes, white Leghorns, brown Leghorns.

T. J. Rountree, Nora, Ill.; Rhode Island Reds (R. C. and S. C.), Rhode Island Whites, Partridge Plymouth Rocks, Silver Wyandottes, Golden Wyandottes.

Carl J. Carter, Columbus, Ind., will judge all the Orpingtons.

George W. Northup, Granville, N. Y.; Black Minorcas, Buff Plymouth Rocks, Light Brahams, Buff Wyandottes.

This letter was sent out early so that it could be gotten into the papers for the monthly issue of October.

The management has received every information that the International Black Minorca Club has accepted St. Louis as their annual meet. Also, will the Rhode Island White Club of America hold their annual meet here this winter. The St. Louis Convention and Publicity Bureau lent financial support in getting this meet in St. Louis.

The next meeting of the association will be Tuesday, Oct. 2, at the Marquette Hotel at 8 p. m.

Provost Marshal Hands Down Ruling Including Foreigners Declaring Citizenship Since June 5.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—A method of relieving hardships in cases where men who should have been exempted have been ordered to report for military service or have entered camps has been prescribed by Provost Marshal-General Crowder.

If a local or district board believes a man has been ordered wrongly to report for duty it may reopen the case on its own initiative and revoke the former action.

If the man already has entered the service he may be discharged only by order of the Army Adjutant-General, who will act on recommendations of local or district boards.

Another ruling provides that thousands of aliens who registered for the draft June 5 and who since that date have declared their intentions of becoming citizens are now subject to draft.

ASKS FOR PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS

Drafted Duluth Man Would Make Final Appeal for Exemption.

DULUTH, Minn., Sept. 29.—A large English-speaking man today appeared before the clerk of the First County Division draft board asking for information.

"I put in a claim for exemption to this board and it was turned down," he said loudly. "I appealed to the Federal board and I was turned down again. What can I do now?"

"Appeal to President Wilson," the clerk told him.

"What's his address?" the appellant asked.

PRESIDENT FILLS THREE PLACES ON COMMERCE BODY

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—President Wilson today filled the three vacancies on the Interstae Commerce Commission, when he sent to the Senate the names of Robert W. Woolley of Virginia for the term ending Dec. 31, 1920; Clyde B. Aitchison of Portland, Ore., for the term ending Dec. 31, 1921, and George W. Anderson of Massachusetts, for the term ending Dec. 31, 1922.

Aitchison is a Republican. For more than a year he has been in Washington as solicitor for the Valuation Committee of the National Association of State Railroad Commissioners. He served several terms as member and chairman of the Public Service Commission of Oregon.

Anderson now is United States Attorney at Boston, and was chosen to conduct the first Government inquiry into the food situation.

Woolley was director of the Publicity Bureau during the last campaign of the Democratic National Committee. Some objection to his confirmation is expected on the ground that he is not fully equipped in ability and experience for a place on the commission.

In a letter to Senator Overman of North Carolina, who, together with his colleague, Senator Simmons, was behind the candidacy of Ed L. Travis of that State for the commission, the President said: "I felt it my duty to look at these particular appointments from every point of view. That is the reason I have taken so long about it. I altered my judgment half a dozen times before coming to a final decision. That decision I have based upon all sorts of considerations, all of them, I hope, national, the development of the railroad systems of the country from the point of view of the public as well as the point of view of administration regulations. I particularly wanted fresh eyes as well as trained ones. It was right that the point of view of different sections of the country also should be represented. If I have made a mistake, I never made one on more mature and conscientious consideration."

CHURCH COLLECTIONS TODAY FOR KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS FUND

Special Delivery Letters Also Mailed in Effort to Raise $100,000 for War Work.

Special delivery letters, special collections in the parish churches, today, and a final mass meeting at the Planters Hotel Tuesday noon, are being used by the Knights of Columbus in the concluding period of their 7-day campaign to raise $100,000 as St. Louis' quota of the $3,000,000 War Encampment Fund to provide spiritual and recreational facilities for the American soldiers in camp and cantonments here and across the Atlantic.

The letters, sent out last night, contain a request that each Knight make it his individual business to raise a donation of at least $10 from among his acquaintances.

At the Planters Tuesday complete reports of the result of the campaign will be read and the committee in charge formally discharged. At yesterday's noon-day meeting of the Women's Executive Committee, two checks for $500 each, one from Mrs. Julia Maffitt Walsh, the other from Edward J. Walsh, were reported.

RETURNS CUMMINS INDICTMENT

Grand Jury Places Three Charges Against Former Policeman.

The indictment of Policeman Ray Cummins, formerly secretary of the Police Relief Association, on charges of burglary and larceny and receiving stolen property, voted more than a week ago, was returned by the grand jury yesterday.

Cummins was indicted on testimony obtained as a result of statements by George Frank, a burglar convict, that Cummins knew his occupation and participated in the loot obtained by him. It is specifically charged that Cummins abetted in the burglary of the home of Jesse Bennett, 5705 Clemens avenue, and the home of David Abrams, 6016 Etzel avenues, in December, 1915.

GEN. OBREGON WILL VISIT HERE

Former Carranza War Minister to Attend Luncheon and Reception.

Gen. Alvara Obregon, who was Minister of War in the Carranza Cabinet when the American expeditionary force was in Mexico, will arrive in St. Louis the latter part of this week, probably Thursday or Friday, and will be the guest of the Chamber of Commerce for a day. A luncheon and reception will be given for him.

The visit of the Mexican General is of particular interest to St. Louis in view of a trade extension tour which St. Louis business men expect to make next month. The General is in California and will stop on his way to New York.

350 IGNORE THE DRAFT CALL

The names of 350 registered men in the First District of East St. Louis, who failed to appear for examination when called, were certified to the Federal authorities yesterday by the chairman of the Exemption Board of the district.

This district embraces the territory where the race riots occurred last July. Most of the registrants failing to appear for examination are negroes. The district already has called more than 700 men in the effort to fill its quota of 200.

Unique Test Devised for the Liberty Engine

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—The Bureau of Standards is erecting a little greenish-gray concrete building on the edge of its grounds where one of the final chapters in America's preparations for aerial warfare will be written. The bureau declines to discuss what part it will play in the final design of the new "Liberty air engine" which the Government is expected to mount on all American airplanes for use in the European war, but it has become known that before the final design of this engine is approved it must undergo a few final tests in that little building.

There will be determined, under conditions almost identical with conditions found at various altitudes, just how an airplane engine performs when it gets so high that the air gets perceptibly thinner. It will be tested in an atmosphere down to freezing.

Airmen Fly at Great Heights.

Ever since the European war began, aviators of the warring nations have been flying to astonishing heights in the clear air of France. Altitudes of 10,000 feet are quite commonplace, and 20,000 foot flights no longer excite wonder. Therefore, engine designers have been experimenting for the last three years with an engine that won't "smother" when it gets into thin air.

So far the allies have been unable, for various reasons, to make absolutely accurate tests. An engineer can go aloft in a plane, but he can't load in a ton or two of apparatus also and test out sparking efficiency, compression density, horse-power delivery and all the other things that he should do.

Confronted with the necessity of making such tests, the Bureau of Standard experts figured out a method.

First, they argued they must know just what an airplane does at an altitude, say, of 20,000 feet. An engine that will perform perfectly at 10,000 feet has a tricky habit of "stumbling" and missing ignition when it gets another 10,000 feet higher.

Second, they wanted some sort of a mechanical arrangement which would permit them to test untried types of engines under conditions similar to conditions very high aloft.

So they set to work to build their concrete chamber. It is so constructed that is can be made a vacuum if necessary. The walls are 12 inches thick and tarred on the outside. They needed thick walls because at 20,000 feet altitude the air pressure is about seven pounds to the square inch—about half the pressure at sea level. That meant that when the scientists got to duplicating air pressure at 20,000 feet the walls had to support an outside pressure of air equal to eight pounds to the square inch.

Heating and Refrigerating Plant.

Then a complete heating and refrigerating plant was installed so that when the four or six big fans which are to whirl the air over the engine at 40 miles an hour start their gale it will be down to the temperature that one finds thousands of feet up.

Into this air chamber they expect to put the type that is to be tested, mounted so that it can tilt forward, backward or sidewise, just as it would behave in the air.

As soon as everything is ready the doors are locked and made air tight and the engine is started. When it starts the air on the inside of the chamber is the same density as the outside. But when the engine begins to suck in air to make explosions, the inside atmosphere rapidly becomes exhausted. The chamber is provided with an intake valve which will admit the air that is needed.

The chamber is also provided with glass windows, through which the experts may watch instruments which register the air pressure and the temperature of the chamber. By data secured in actual flights the bureau experts know the exact density of the air on each various hundred foot levels. An ordinary aneroid barometer would give this data only approximately. When the engine starts and begins consuming air on the inside of the chamber the inside pressure begins to drop from 15 pounds to the square inch to 14 pounds, to 13 pounds, and so on, until it has reached a rarity that corresponds to a great height.

As soon as it reaches this rarity the intake valve is opened slightly, and only enough air is admitted to take the place of the inside air that the engine is consuming. This, of course keeps th epressure inside of the desired rarity and to all intents and purposes the engine is now flying at an altitude of 20,000 feet. As soon as the engine starts other parts of the chamber's machinery start too. For instance, the exhaust begins to work. It would be utterly impracticable to discharge the gases from the engine into the outside air through the ordinary exhaust pipe. With the air inside at seven pounds pressure and the outside air at seventeen pounds the force of the outside pressure would jam a great quantity of atmosphere back up the exhaust pipe, fill the chamber with fumes and smoke and reduce the inside pressure to normal.

Blower Attachment Designed.

To overcome this the experts designed a blower attachment which will suck the gases and fumes from the engine with a force sufficient to prevent the outside air from rushing in. Als othe fumes and gases will pass through pipes which spray these gases with cold water, thus keeping down the temperature in the chamber.

The actual horsepower performance of the engine can be determined without trouble. Every ounce of pull it generates is transmitted to a big electric generator on the outside and the amount of electricity generated by the engine's power makes it perfectly simple for the scientists to determine when the engine is faltering.

Through the glass doors of this concrete chamber, the scientists will observe the engine itself and the instruments attached, which will register every performance. If it won't work in an air-pressure of seven pounds to the inch, that engine will never do for high observation work.

The concrete chamber has another use, that of testing precompression devices. It has been found advisable to equip all airplanes that are expected to attain great height with a pre-compression attachment designed to gather and concentrate a quantity of air and at the moment of each discharge of the cylinders, inject it into the cylinders to supplement the deficient supply that the engine can take through its intake valves.

AUTHOR OF "OVER THE TOP" TO LECTURE BEFORE WOMEN

Sergt. Empey Will Address Society Headed by Mrs. Theodore Benoist.

The first lecture of the American University Society's season course will be given at the Wednesday Club Auditorium, Friday afternoon, by Sergt. Arthur Guy Empey, author of "Over the Top," a widely read book, which describes his experience in trench warfare. Empey is an American, who served 17 months in France as a machine gunner in the British army and was invalided home because of wounds.

Mrs. Theodore Benoist has been chosen as president of the St. Louis branch of the society, which has its headquarters in the Delmar Building, Delmar boulevard and King's highway. The vice presidents are Mrs. Philip North Moore, Mrs. Thomas H. West, Mrs. J. L. D. Morrison, Mrs. Breckenridge Long, Mrs. E. A. Faust, Miss Agnes Taussig, Mrs. W. K. Stanard and Mrs. Arthur Lambert. Mrs. Margaret V. Beaumont, who was in charge of the active work of organizing, is secretary. She did a similar work in Denver last year.

The local membership includes a large number of women prominent in society and in club and social service work. A study course is planned, extending through two seasons, to be supplemented with monthly lectures. The lectures are to be supported, and other expenses met, through the members' dues, $3 a month. The Wednesday Club Auditorium has been engaged for the season.

WILL ASK CUT IN COAL PRICES

McAllister Leaves for Washington to Confer With Garfield.

Attorney-General McAllister left at noon yesterday for Washington, where he will ask Coal Administrator Carfield to further reduce the prices of coal in the St. Louis district.

McAllister is convinced, from the recent investigation he made of the coal situation in Missouri, that the Illinois miners would receive a fair profit for their coal at $1.50 a ton at the mines. The Government made a price of $1.70 to $2.20 a ton at the mines.

NOLKER TO PAY FOR DEFENSE AGAINST HIS DIVORCE APPEAL

Judge Jones Orders Manufacturer to Provide Wife With $750 to Contest Case.

Robert E. Nolker, wealthy electrical manufacturer, yesterday filed notice of appeal to the St. Louis Court of Appeals from the decision of Circuit Judge Cave in his divorce suit against Pearl Elizabeth Hyman Nolker. A divorce was denied in June. In granting the appeal, Judge Jones, sitting for Judge Cave, ordered that Nolker pay Mrs. Nolker $750 with which to defend the appeal. She had asked for $5000.

FRANCE USING CHINESE LABOR

Many Transported, Says Illinois Woman Back From Hongkong.

That great numbers of Chinese are being transported to France to replace the labor power that has been lost through the war, became known yesterday through a statement of Miss Elizabeth Whitehead of Hillsboro, Ill.

Miss Whitehead returned from a visit with her brother-in-law and sister, Prof. and Mrs. W. S. Harris, at Manila, and on her way home went from Manila to Hongkong.

At that port the boat took on 2300 Chinese coolies, whom the British Government was transporting to work in the gardens of France. She was told that many thousands of the coolies had gone over on other boats bound for the same destination.

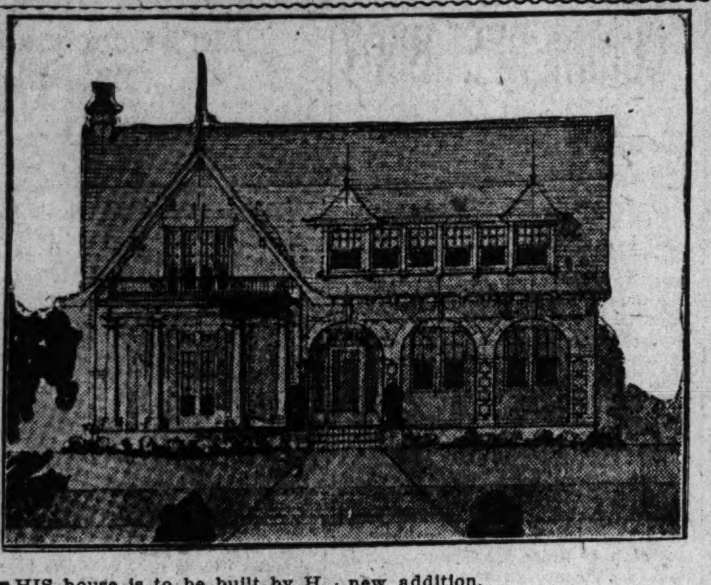
BOY, 10, DROWNED IN RIVER

Three Companions in Swimming Fail in Effort to Save Him.

August Repple, 10 years old, 2872 South Seventh street, was drowned in the Mississippi River at the foot of Potomac street at 3 p. m. yesterday. He was swimming with other boys and climbed into a skiff, which drifted from the shore. He jumped out of it and tried to swim ashore but sank.

His brother, John, 11 years old, and two other boys, George Strants of 1623 South Third street, and Horace Mann of 2883 South Seventh street, tried to save him.

$12,000 Home to Be Built on Site Facing Riverview Gardens



THIS house is to be built by H. A. St. Clair at 2354 Albion place, facing Riverview Gardens. The site presents a commanding view of the Mississippi River and is one of the most attractive in this new addition.

The building and site will cost $12,000.

The plans were drawn by J. H. Senne, architect.

NEEDS THREATEN TO ABSORB SUPPLY OF VACANT HOUSES

Decrease in Building as Result of Prices of Materials and Labor Reflected in Notable Volume of Inquiries From Investors, Agents Report.

NEW APARTMENTS FILLING RAPIDLY

Liberty Bonds at Advanced Interest Rate Available for Purchase of Realty—Mercantile Trust Co. Employes Given Share in Its Prosperity.

By Berry Moore.

The final week of September was notable for the renewed interest manifest in St. Louis realty by investors, especially the large-calibered ones who have been holding aloof.

The number of inquiries was reported to have been unprecedented, and the avidity to buy was so great that in many instances prospective purchasers deposited earnest money to agents, pending transmission of offers. The fact appears to be that persons having surplus money suddenly have come to realize the fact that prices of real estate in St. Louis are at ebb tide, and that now is the psychological time to launch their investments if they would ride home on the top wave of prices after the war.

The big uplift in prices of construction and labor has been such that even professional builders are withdrawing from the field, and with the steady influx of new residents and business interests, the demand for both these purposes promises soon to deplete the supply. The result is that "free rent" is a dream of the past, while rents, in not a few instances, have been advanced under two and three year leases. This is especially true as to apartment houses, which thereby have been placed on a new and high investment plane.

The demand from renters for new apartments on the north side of Forest Park west of Union boulevard has been so great that vacancies in this district are few and far between. There is not a vacancy in the long chains of buildings on the north and south sides of Berlin and De Baliviere avenues, recently erected by the Sam Koplar Real Estate and Building Co., of which Sam Hamburg Jr. is the dominant figure, and in the Wagner Apartments, just completed in that district by J. I. Epstein.

Westmoreland Units Absorbed.

Units in the eight-story fireproof Westmoreland Hotel Apartment being erected on the south side of Berlin, west of Belt avenue, are being pre-empted from the plans, the indications being that this building will be entirely leased before its completion, which will be not later than Nov. 1. In addition to previous reservations, leases were closed during the past week by the following parties for apartments in the Westmoreland: E. J. Lingenfelder, Arthur Brockman, Marie C. Raible, J. F. Brathey, Joel L. Morey, Frank W. Jones, Jacob S. Rothschild, J. M. Stroud, Blanche Upshaw, Ben Newman, F. R. Cochran, E. W. Mangson.

It is understood that several propositions were submitted during the week involving the purchase of apartment buildings in this district by private interests attracted by their earning power.

The downtown office buildings have not enjoyed such run of tenants for a decade, the majority of these structures being from 90 to 100 per cent filled. The Railway Exchange Building, according to Claud B. Ricketts, manager, is 91 per cent filled, and the rents of all offices vacant the first of the year will be increased from $2.50 to $5 a month, he announced yesterday. There is not a vacancy in the Third National Bank Building, and a comparatively few in the Wright Building, according to Guy H. Wright, manager of both. Vacancies in the Fullerton Building are isolated, and can only be found by the janitor.

The increase in the interest rate from 3½ to 4 per cent provided for in the new Liberty Bonds, according to Festus J. Wade, president of the Mercantile Trust Co. and of the Mercantile National Bank, will render them available for the purchase of real estate. Thus, pending investment in real estate, one can purchase a Liberty Bond, and receive the 4 per cent interest in the interim. Incidentally, the Mercantile Trust Co. is offering to sell Liberty Bonds on time payments under a contract by which the 4 per cent interest on the bonds offsets the deferred payments.

Capital's Trend Toward Realty.

The trend of capital manifestly, it is declared, is in the direction of real estate, and each succeeding week doubtless will show an increased number of transactions, characterized by operations of more than ordinary magnitude. Improvement will be steady from this time forward, the indications are, and with the new scale of rentals, real estate is at once the safest and most attractive form of investment.

Everything is auspicious for a revival in the realty market on a broad scale. Partially due to the demands of the war, profits and wages are at the highest figures in the history of the city, and sooner or later will flow into investment channels.

An indication of general prosperity, the directors of the Mercantile Trust Co., at the close of the summer have voted, in the form of a bonus, a month's salary to each of its employes, including officers. The company, is, according to president Wade, enjoying great prosperity, due in no small measure to the spirit of co-operation among its employes.

An extra dividend of 2 per cent was paid to the stockholders of the Mercantile Trust Co. last Christmas, and a month's salary to each of its employes, including the highest salaried officials. At the end of the first six months of the company's fiscal year, in June, another dividend of 2 per cent was paid on the capital stock. This places the stock on virtually a 22 per cent basis, the regular dividend being 18 per cent per annum.

The Mercantile Trust Co. is enlarging its building at the northeast corner of Eighth and Locust streets by the erection of an addition at the southeast corner of Eighth and St. Charles streets. A feature of the new and larger building will be an arcade extending from Locust to St. Charles. The addition is being erected primarily to provide for the savings department of the company, the growth of which has been unprecedented.

ANNUAL AUTUMN FUR SALE WILL OPEN OCT. 8

Consignment of Fine Pelts From all Parts of the World to be Auctioned.

Seal skins from the Lobos Islands, off the coast of Peru, are to be sold for the Government of Uruguay at the autumn fur auction of Funsten Bros. & Co., which will open Oct. 8 at the Fur Exchange, Second and Elm streets. The annual sale of seal skins for the account of the United States Government will take place at the same time, the offering consisting of 3239 dressed, dyed and machined skins.

The Uruguayan Government, which is using the St. Louis market for the first time for the disposal of its catch, will send a representative to St. Louis to look out for its interests and to study the market conditions here. St. Louis, as has been told, is now the world's foremost fur market.

In addition to the Government consignments, there will be large quantities of fine furs from all parts of the world offered at this sale. From Russia and Japan there will be sables and all varieties of fox; Australia will furnish wallaby, opposum and fox; from South America there will be nutria, chinchilla and fox, and China will furnish a number of varieties, including Chinese mink.

The sale will continue five days and will be much larger than any sale ever conducted here in the autumn. It is expected to almost equal the $4,000,000 sale of last spring, which was the largest ever held in America.

RESIDENCES, APARTMENTS AND FLATS IN WEST END LEASED

Two Ten-Room Houses on Clemens Avenue Among Transactions of One Company.

The Martin Trepp Real Estate Co. reports the closing of several leases on West End residence, apartment and flat properties, including 5942 Clemens avenue, a 10-room residence, with garage, to William Simon, assistant manager of the American Metal Co. It was leased for the Sam Weil Realty Co.

Five-room flat at 5658 Etzel avenue to I. Maizner and the six-room flat at 5660 Etzel avenue to A. Higman.

The company was appointed agent by A. M. and Ralph Black to lease and manage two West End residences at 5029 Vernon avenue, and 5148 Cabanne avenue.

FOUR OUT OF EIGHT SUITES IN NETHERBY HALL LEASED

The Netherby Hall apartments, 4540 Lindell boulevard, which have just been completed, are attracting wide attention. Four of the eight suites of this building have been leased, the indications being that all of them soon will have been taken.

Four of the suites contain 10 rooms each and four have 11 rooms each, together with three baths.

The apartments which are among the most sumptuous and high-class in the city, are owned by Charles Ulman and are under the management of Edward L. Bakewell.

COAL MAN BUYS A COLONIAL HOUSE ON WEST PINE BL.

William S. Scott Lets Contracts for Extensive Alterations and Additions.

William Samuel Scott, president of the Missouri-Illinois Coal Co., purchased, through Thomas G. Watts Jr., a handsome colonial house at the southeast corner of Euclid avenue and West Pine boulevard. It contains 13 rooms and four baths and occupies a site having a frontage of 100 feet on West Pine by a depth of 213 feet on Euclid avenue.

Contracts have been let for alterations and additions that will make this house one of the handsomest in this block. These will include a breakfast room and a solarium.

He states that he will operate his entire business from the new location, which will not interfere with his St. Louis real estate, insurance and loan interests.

UNIVERSITY CLUB TO OCCUPY NEW HOME IN SPRING

Arms of Washington U. Among Those of Six Big Schools on Windows.

The University Club of St. Louis will, barring difficulties which cannot be forecast, come into possession of its new home at Grand and Washington avenues, before the end of next spring, according to Eames & Young, the architects and supervising constructors.

The building is already erected to about the tenth floor, and is expected to be under cover before the first of the year, after which rapid progress will be made, despite any hard Weather the winter may bring.

Among other appropriate decorative features which are to distinguish the club's new home are six windows in the main entrance vestibule. These are to have lead glass with a spot of color sufficiently large to contain the coat of arms of six of the higher institutions of learning in the country, including Washington University of St. Louis, Yale, Harvard, Princeton, Cornell and Cambridge.

RIVERVIEW GARDENS LOT SALES FOR WEEK EXCEED $15,000

More Than Half the Tract of 255 Acres Reported to Have Been Sold.

Sales aggregating $15,150 during the week in Riverview Gardens subdivision were reported by Sikking & Beckwith, agents for the property. This brings the total this summer to more than $125,000, declared to be the record for St. Louis subdivision properties for several years.

Diamond Hill, the prettiest part of the gardens, was opened last Sunday, and the agents report one of the busiest weeks of the season. This opening gave a new supply of desirable property which promises to bring a volume of sales equivalent to if not greater than the initial rush in June.

"More than half of the area of the Riverview Gardens tract, which comprises 255 acres, has been sold," said Beckwith, "and, in view of the fact that Diamond Hill is the most attractive of the whole, we expect to clean up the whole tract before snow flies. From every point in the new tract a beautiful view of the river is had and the whole of Diamond Hill is restricted, which will make it one of the prettiest residence districts in St. Louis. Since we began the laying of the water mains, houses have begun to spring up all over the property. All of the new buyers expect to build before next spring. Extra efforts have been made to hurry the grading, street making and other improvements, but we do not seem able to keep up with the demands of customers, many of whom want to get their new homes ready for occupancy before winter."

Riverview Gardens is on the high lands overlooking the Mississippi River in the extreme north part of the city. It faces Riverview Drive and the park property of the city along the river.

NEW HOMES FOR TWO CONCERNS

Leases Taken on Tenth and Seventh Street Buildings.

A long lease has been closed for the two-story building at 812-14 N. Tenth street to the Knickerbocker Bag Co., manufacturer and jobber of burlap bags. The company came to St. Louis from New York about three years ago. The new home will give it about four times the floor space which it now has. The property is owned by Thomas Dunn. The Martin-Breitt Co., represented the bag company and the Mercantile Trust Co. represented Dunn.

The Martin-Breitt Co. also reports having leased the third floor of the Sterling building at the northwest corner of Seventh street and Lucas avenue to the Diamond Hat Co. This fills the ast vacancy in the building. The property is owned by Patrick Burns.

SWINDLER'S PLANS ELABORATE

Man Held in Inquiry Into Check Frauds in 1911.

A man who said he was Carlton Lamb of 3003 North Union avenue was arrested at Seventh street and Washington avenue yesterday and held pending an investigation into worthless checks passed here in 1911. Lamb, who said he is 28 years old, had no registration card.

The swindler's method, according to the police, was to enter a store in his shirt sleeves and, pretending he was an employe in a neighboring establishment, tender a check for $10 or $15. A confederate, posing as his employer, telephones the victim vouching for the swindler.

Concerts at New Grand Central.

The New Grand Central will inaugurate a series of popular musical concerts, beginning Oct. 15, to be given on Monday and Tuesday evening of each week. They will begin at 7:45, and last one hour; and the moving picture program, which is usually shown twice in an evening, will have only one showing on the concert nights. The concerts will be under the direction of Charles Humfeld, musical director of the theater, who will increase his orchestra. The orchestra will be grouped on the stage.

MORE THAN HALF OF LOTS IN EUCLID HEIGHTS SOLD IN WEEK

North St. Louis Addition Overlooks Penrose Park and Two School Sites.

Euclid Heights lots were placed on sale last Saturday and Sunday by Strodtman & Strodtman, and there was a large crowd on the grounds most of the day, as was to have been expected on account of the big bargains. More than half of the addition has been sold and most of the purchasers are preparing to build.

Euclid Heights overlooks the new Penrose Park and King's highway, and is rolling and picturesque. It also overlooks the sites of the Blewett High School and the Samuel Cupples School, which will be surrounded by 24 acres adjacent to Penrose Park. It is within walking distance of all the new industries along the Terminal Belt, which will employ about 5000 men. There is already big demand for houses, either for rent or sale.

The lots face Kings' highway, Euclid, Theodore and Thekla avenues. The latter has asphalt streets, granitoid walks and curb with sewers, water and gas. They are restricted to a building line.

The lots can be bought on payments of $10 to $20 cash and $5 to $10 per month. The prices range from $8 to $18 per foot.

Salesmen will be on the ground today.

BRISK SALES REPORTED IN NORTHLAND PLACE SUBDIVISION

Seven Lots Purchased by Two Men Who Have Been Notably Successful Builders.

Franciscus & Kunz report quite a deal of activity in their new subdivision, Northland Place, located in the northwestern part of the city, between Euclid avenue and King's highway. The lots front on Spalding and Northland avenues, Maffitt place and Terry avenue, on all of which improvements have been made.

The agents report having sold last week seven lots on Maffitt place, which is restricted to high-class bungalows. They sold four of these lots to C. I. Swinhart, and three to Sam. Koplar. Swinhart has built four bungalows on Northland avenue and all have been sold.

They also report quite a number of people figuring on buying lots, and expect to get contracts signed within the next few days.

Guard Leaders at Camp Doniphan May Become Trained Observers From Air.

CAMP DONIPHAN, FORT SILL, Ok. Sept. 29.—Three captains and six lieutenants of the 138th Infantry, formerly the Fifth Missouri regiment, are exhibiting blistered hands as a result of their first lesson in trench digging and the construction of field fortifications. The officers of the Joffre Regiment were ordered to report at the engineering school today to attend a lecture on field fortifications. After the lecture the lecturing officer invited his "audience" to grab picks and shovels for a practical demonstration. The officers worked about two hours in the trenches and they were ready to call it a "day" when the demonstration ended. The model trench will be used for demonstrative purposes, and the officers who built it will in turn supervise the construction of similar fortifications by other officers of the regiment.

The strenuous training schedule laid out by Gen. Wright for the troops of the Thirty-fifth division will become operative Monday morning. The program calls for 16 weeks of intensive training. The drills and combat exercises alone will take up at least 42 hours each week. Wednesday and Saturday afternoons and Sundays are the only "open dates" on the schedule. Wednesday and Saturday afternoons will be given over to athletic sports and pastimes.

Military Science Special Course.

Commencing Monday morning school for special instruction in every department of military science will be opened. None of the officers or enlisted men detailed to attend these schools will be authorized to absent themselves from class at any time. When they have completed the course of instruction in their respective special branches the student officers and enlisted men will in turn be detailed to act as instructors for the organizations to which they belong.

Special classes for regimental and battalion commanders and regimental field and staff officers will embrace a comprehensive course of instruction in administrative work and the duties of these officers in the field. There will also be classes for first Sergeants, company clerks, company cooks, company supply Sergeants, company artificers, trumpeters, signal men, mess Sergeants, bombers, grenadiers, machine gunners, riflemen and company, troop or battery farriers.

Guard Officers May Fly.

Officers of the various National Guard regiments at Camp Doniphan have been invited to accompany some of the aviators of the aero squadron on their daily flights about the reservation. The officers accepting this invitation will very probably be given an opportunity to become trained observers.

The officers will also be afforded an opportunity to make an ascension in the new French type observation balloon used by the 144th Signal Squadron. The balloon is the first of its type built in this country. It was received at Fort Sill Thursday afternoon.

Lieut. Pierce of the Machine Gun Company, 138th Infantry, and Sergt. Conrad of the Signal Squadron tested out new parachutes this afternoon by dropping them from the balloon at an altitude of 1000 feet. Sand ballast bags were used for the test.

Noncommissioned officers in companies of the consolidated regiments are resting easier since the issuance of a general order yesterday requiring all company commanders to report to divisional headquarters the names of all surplus "noncoms" after the reorganization is effected. This is regarded as an indication that the junior Sergeants and Corporals are to be taken care of by assignment to some of the special organizations to be formed later.

ROOSEVELT FINDS PEOPLE OF NORTHWEST ARE PATRIOTS

He Referees Boxing Matches Between Sailors When on Way East From Town.

CHICAGO, Sept. 29.—Col. Theodore Roosevelt, who has just closed a patriotic speaking campaign, was in Chicago for several hours this afternoon enroute east.

"Minnesota and Wisconsin are as straight and loyal as any other states," he said. "In my whole career I have never seen anything like the crowds and enthusiasm in Minneapolis and St. Paul. The people of the Northwest are thoroughly straight and patriotic."

The Colonel spied a group of the Seventh Illinois Regiment about to leave for a southern training camp. He stopped and shaking hands with several of the men said: "Boys, I congratulate you most heartily. I only wish I were going with you. You know my four boys are in the service."

The Colonel refereed two boxing matches between jackies when he visited the Great Lakes Naval Training Station on Thursday, it became known today.

BARBER WHO DIED SUDDENLY WILLS $1000 TO POPE BENEDICT

Engelbert Metzger Bequeaths $700 for Clock in Church Tower and Leaves Children $1 Each.

The will of Engelbert Metzger, 84 years old, a barber, who was found dead Thursday on the floor in his shop at 2834 Chouteau avenue, was filed yesterday. One of the bequests was $1000 to Pope Benedict XV or his successor. Another was $700 for a clock in the tower of St. Henry's German Roman Catholic Church.

He also left $30 to the church for masses.

The Heroine of Servia's Ruinous Retreat

Mrs. St. Clair Stobart, commander of First Anglo Servian Field Hospital, was only leader able to extricate her unit, without loss of a member, from debacle of a nation—By pluck and will power, English woman drove her column across seas of mud, icy mountains and bridgeless rivers, along paths where dead and dying lay by hundreds, with German guns ever baying close in pursuit.

OF all the tragedies of the Great War, that of the Servian army's retreat from Belgrade to Scutari in the winter of 1915 remains incomparable, save perhaps for the reiterated catastrophes which have overwhelmed Poland. Napoleon's retirement from Moscow has been cited as a parallel; but that was a disaster of veteran soldiers, while the Servian retreat was literally a national debacle; wherein women and children as well as men were mingled in equal ruin.

It is fitting, then, that the Servian cataclysm should have had its heroine. She was Mrs. St. Clair Stobart, an English woman, who, though neither a physician nor a nurse, had the distinction of commanding the First Anglo-Servian Field Hospital, with a rank in the Servian army corresponding with that of Major. This was a tremendous honor in a country where Turkish ideas concerning the female sex have long been ascendant, and where the formula used by a man in introducing his wife is: "This is my wife, God forgive me," and in describing his children: "I have three sons and—God forgive me—three daughters."

Through indomitable pluck and energy, Mrs. Stobart won the unique praise of bringing her entire unit safely through that calamitous retreat, without the loss of a member, either through death or desertion. She led her command through oceans of mud, through icy torrents and across deadly mountains, along paths thickly strewn with the bodies of dead men, women and children, who had perished of starvation, cold and wounds. At the end she was officially commended by the Servian War Minister as the commander of "the only column which arrived intact, after a trek which, from first to last, totaled a distance of about eight hundred miles."

Before going to Servia, Mrs. Stobart had unusual experience as a Red Cross executive. She served four years in the Transvaal, returning to London in 1907. As one of the founders of the Women's Convoy Corps, she proved in Bulgaria during the first Balkan war (1912-13) that women may be of high use not only as nurses but as hospital physicians and administrators. After the outbreak of the present war she established a hospital at Brussels, and on its fall was condemned to be shot as a spy. She protested to the German commandant that she was engaged in hospital work, to which she says he retorted: "You are English, and whether you are right or wrong, this is a war of annihilation." Escaping execution by a miracle, she was in Antwerp during its bombardment, and later in charge of a French hospital at Cherbourg.

News of the typhus epidemic in Servia sounded in her ears an irresistible trumpet call, and April 1, 1915, found her on board a packet bound for Saloniki, in charge of a unit of seven women doctors and 18 women nurses, besides attendants raising the total number to 45. She established a hospital at Kragujevatz, in Servia, and soon afterwards organized six branch hospitals in the vicinity, where 20,000 men, women and children were treated not only for typhus, but for diphtheria, tuberculosis and other diseases. Mrs. Stobart was herself sick with typhoid, and narrowly escaped death.

In September came rumors of the triple invasion which was preparing against the little kingdom—from Germany, Austria and Bulgaria. Servia had pleaded in vain with England and France for permission to attack Bulgaria, but these Powers had delusions of being able to win Ferdinand of Bulgaria, "The Fox of the Balkans," to their side. Hence Servia was left alone to bear the brunt when Bulgaria declared herself on the side of the Central Powers.

Mrs. Stobart was asked to take her staff and accompany the army as a flying unit to the front, and to her amazement, the Chief of the Army Medical Department added:

"We shall be glad if you will take command of the column. We ask you—without supervision of Servian officers—to take entire charge of material and equipment, as well of the staff. This is, I believe, the first time in the history of Servia that such an appointment has been offered to a woman; but new times, new customs—and we know you can do it."

Her command consisted of two women doctors, four women nurses, a woman cook, two interpreters, a male secretary, two women orderlies, commissariat officers, 60 Servian soldiers, 30 ox teams and wagons, six automobiles and eventually a railroad train. The unit was attached to the Schumadia division, comprising 25,000 troops.

It is merely considerations of space which prevent a recital of the unit's activities on the trip north through Nish to the outskirts of Belgrade. The full account may be found in Mrs. Stobart's book, "The Flaming Sword" (Doran). But on Oct. 17—when the members of the unit were joking as to the restaurants they would patronize when they reached Vienna, there came the first order to move southwards—which meant retreat. This was the beginning of the unit's "Anabasis," in which the Xenophon was a woman.

From here on the story is one of a nation driven through the Valley of the Shadow of Death, pursued by the relentless German guns. Often the unit was only two hours in advance of the swift Teuton chase, and always the sound of the German cannon was in their ears.

As the unit journeyed ever and ever southwards—reports of Servian victories and Russian diversions in Galicia proving canards—the wounded were hour by hour brought in for treatment, in the ox carts which formed the country's ambulances. In the darkness and cold the doctors and nurses dressed wounds on the roadside by lantern light, around bonfires of hay and straw; and in the morning the dead were buried before the hospital resumed its flight.

"An unending stream of refugees passed along the road," says Mrs. Stobart, "and whole families of women and children, babies in arms, infants that could just toddle, boys and young girls, all sheltered at night near us in the woods, constructing as best they could rough arbors of branches, for protection from rain and wind. We had no time for practical sympathy with these forlorn people, who in all probability would never see their homes or their men-folk again."

One night the entire unit was in imminent danger of being overtaken by the Germans. A large number of wounded were in hand, and three of the six motor cars were lagging behind. No wagons were available, so Mrs. Stobart struggled a mile across marshy fields, tumbling in the dark into half a dozen ditches, to ask aid from an army Major whom she knew. He could give her no help, and she hastened back to her column.

"There was only one thing to be done," she says, "if the whole hospital was not to be taken by the enemy. The staff, who usually rode in the motors, must walk; the worst wounded must go in the motors, those who could crawl must crawl, and as for the others——

"The road was abominable, with mud and holes, and narrow and broken bridges. We were con-

"Baby;" an Incident of the War

IT was a big-limbed Irish soldier who told the story, sitting in a cafe in Poperinghe. "We called him 'Baby' the minute we first clapped eyes on him," said Gahey. "He was such a youngster, with a face just like what you might see in the pictures of angels. He came to us in the early part of the year, when we were in rest billets down near Cassel. We couldn't help lookin' at him when he came to us just fresh out from England.

"My mate, Spudhole, caught me by the arms as I was sitting on the floor of the barn where our platoon was billeted. 'Come out, Gahey,' he says to me. 'Just have a peep outside and see what's been sent out to carry on the war.' I goes to the door with Spudhole and saw Baby.

" 'Ain't 'e a nib?' says Spudhole.

"And indeed he was a nib, a light-limbed fellow, with red cheeks and blue eyes. He looked at us as we stood at the door of the barn and his face went a trifle redder, I thought. It seemed, however, as if he knew that we came out to look at him. I felt ashamed in a sort of way, so I went back to the barn again. Spudhole followed me in.

" 'Saw him,' says Spudhole.

" 'Does his mother know he's here?' I asks.

" 'I heard our Sergeant-Major say that he has brought his scooter with him,' says Spudhole. 'He's in charge of our platoon, too,' he went on. 'If the Kaiser hears about him he'll want peace at any price.'

"So far, so good,' Gahey continued. "We went up to the trenches that night, and a party of us had to go out and have a look at the German wire. Baby took charge of the party. I happened to be one of the crush also. We went and had a look at the wire and I was next hand man to the Baby. 'He'll be all nerves,' I says to myself when we started. But I made a mistake. When we were examining the wires he turned to me a couple of times and said, 'Very interesting, this,' and 'Very interesting, that,' just as if he had spent all his life at the job. At last he looks at me and he says, 'The Germans do this work much better than the Turks.'

" 'Have been out there a little,' he answers.

"Well, I took kindly to the boy from then on. And he became a great friend o' mine. Was more like a mate to me than an officer. When he had a job he would now and then tell me his plan for gettin' it done. Then he would ask me: 'What do you think of this, Gahey?' meanin', o' course, what was my opinion o' his own plans for doin' the things set afore him.

"One day when we were billeted in a village I met him in the middle of the street and he stopped to speak to me. While we were standin' there some o' our fellows came along and as they were passin' I heard one o' them, a man named Rogers, say in a whisper, but just loud enough to hear, though he didn't think it, 'Him and the Baby's as thick as thieves.'

"The officer heard the remark and he says to me, 'They're talking about us two, Gahey. Do they call you "Baby," Gahey?' he asked, and the red came into his cheeks as he spoke.

" 'That's me nickname, sir,' I answered without a quiver.

" 'Ye don't always tell the truth, Gahey,' says the officer, and a smile came into his eyes.

" 'I'll be tellin' the truth now, sir, if I say that the man who made that remark when passin' by a minute ago will have a thick ear before he goes to bed tonight,' I says.

" 'You're not to do anything of the kind,' says the officer. 'I know,' says he, 'that my nickname is Baby. If you tell me a lie, my lookin' glass tells me truth. I do look young. But ye're not to squabble with Rogers,' he says.

"I didn't squabble with Rogers that night. I just put him flat on the floor and sat on top of him and gave him a short lecture on discipline. Respect to a superior officer was the topic o' my discourse."

Concrete Ships Now a Success

WITHIN six months, unless signs fail, a new submarine foil in the shape of the first of a fleet of concrete ships will be discharged into the sea from American ways. There has been much talk of such vessels lately. Now it seems certain that this new material will be employed on a large scale instead of wood or steel, which have been the nearly exclusive ship stuff of the past. The advantages of these artificial stone ships have already been dwelt on. They are less costly than either wooden or steel vessels, are said to enjoy longer life and to be less ready victims to the torpedo; and, most important, they can be built more rapidly than any others from resources of material otherwise undrained by the war.

F. Huntington Clark, a New York engineer, who was officially connected with the Shipping Board in the Goethals-Denman regime, has furnished some details of concrete ship structure that ought to be interesting to all Americans. Mr. Clark has already made several designs for the Government and is on the way to launch the first of his vessels.

It is generally known that the chief obstacle to the successful use of concrete in ship structure is the fact that the concrete is weak in tension and thus subject to cracking. Where this happens sea water seeps into the interior of the concrete mass and disintegration follows. To understand the reason for this fault and its remedy a certain amount of explanation is necessary.

Concrete ships are built of reinforced concrete and steel. The frame of the ship must be steel and the reinforcing is steel, in order to resist the tension. In older designs of concrete ships the concrete was molded around the steel, and here the fault developed. The concrete shrinks in hardening and thus compresses the steel which it embodies. The steel, which gives flexibility only when under tension, is thus cramped and under strong compression. It naturally exerts a pressure, trying to return to its normal bulk, and thus puts the concrete under tension. Thus hair-line cracks develop, the sea water seeps in and trouble follows. When the sea water gets to the inclosed steel the oxidization which results exerts a very strong pressure against the surrounding concrete and thus cracks and breaks it off. More than that, it has been discovered that while salt water has almost no effect on the outer surface of finished concrete, it eats the inner body of this material very rapidly.

Therefore, the problem is to keep the concrete free of tension and strains, in order that there shall be no cracks.

The concrete ships which have been built abroad in the past were not successful in overcoming the indicated fault. The new designs of the American builders are expected, on the other hand, to entirely eliminate it. The new ships will be built on the principle of the skyscraper. The frame of the ship will be of steel. Then the shell will be put around the frame and will be entirely independent. It will be designed merely to keep out the water and add nothing to the strength of the ship; just as the shell of the skyscraper is simply a protection against the weather and in no way supports the building.

The ships will be built as follows:

First, the steel frame will be erected out of ordinary structural steel, in such sizes and weights as can be readily had from almost any mill. When this is erected and riveted together, a mold will be thrown about it to conform to the intended lines of the ship. Then the concrete will be sprayed on this mold by means of what is known as a concrete gun or atomizer, a device which blows the mixed sand and cement against the mold by compressed air, tamping it with great force and begetting a concrete of extreme hardness and strength.

Ships of two sizes are now being projected, displacing 1500 and 2500 tons, much greater size not being deemed practicable.

According to Engineer Clark these vessels can be put into the water 60 days after the keel laying. The power plants will then have to be installed. The ships themselves, however, can be turned out at the rate of six a year to each set of ways.

About Old Glory and Other Flags

HERE are some facts about the American flag which everyone should know. They are taken from a little pamphlet entitled "The United States Flag; Its History, Symbolism and Regulations for Display," compiled by Philip R. Dillon from the official regulations of the War and Navy Departments and from the most authoritative historical sources, and published by the American Penman:

The Salute or Pledge to the Flag.

I pledge allegiance to my flag
And to the republic for which it stands,
One nation—indivisible—
With liberty and justice for all.

Ancestry of the American Flag.

The present American flag is descended from the English gunner known as St. George's cross, a rectangular red cross upon a white field; it was a very old flag, adopted at tre time of the First Crusade, about the year 1096 A. D. The cross of St. Andrew, the Scitch ensign, a diagonal white cross upon a blue eld, was also adopted in those early days.

In 1707, when complete union of England, Scotland and Wales was established, Great Britain adopted the "Meteor Flag," a red ensign with the two crosses in the canton—the canton being top quarter next the staff. It quickly became the custom to call the crosses "the jack" and "the union jack."

On Jan. 2, 1776, Washington raised at Cambridge, Mass., the first flag emblematic of the union of the colonies. It had seven red and white stripes, and in the canton were the crosses of St. George and St. Andrew on a blue field. It continued the official army flag of the Revolution until Congress adopted the Stars and Stripes on June 4, 1777.

Finally, on March 4, 1818, Congress enacted the law which fixed the form of the flag for all time.

War Department regulations:

The garrison flag has 38 feet fly and 20 feet hoist.

The post flag has 19 feet fly and 10 feet hoist.

The storm flag has 9 feet 6 inches fly and 5 feet hoist.

Navy Department regulations:

The fly shall be 1.9 of the hoist.

The hoist of the union shall be 7-13 of the hoist of the flag.

The fly of the union shall be .76 of the hoist of the flag.

When the Flag Is Flown.

At all army posts in time of peace the flag is raised at "reveille" and lowered at "retreat." Theoretically, it flies from sunrise to sunset, but, actually, in summer reveille is sounded after sunrise and in winter it may be sounded before sunrise.

In the navy the flag is raised at 8 a. m. and lowered at sundown.

The flag is not lowered at sundown when battle is raging, for to lower it at such times would manifestly be a signal of surrender.

No law compels civilians to lower the flag at sundown; but good taste should impel every citizen to follow, so far as practicable, the tradition of the army and navy in the sundown ceremonial.

The Sacredness of the Flag.

It is a tradition in both army and navy that the flag, when lowered, must not touch the earth in camp or garrison, nor the roof of barracks or armory, nor the deck of a ship. The assistants to the Sergeant or Quartermaster receive the folds in their arms as the flag comes down, and thus tenderly fold it and carry it to its resting place for the night.

The flag should not be used to cover the top of a table, and no object should rest upon it. The Bible has long been excepted from this rule.

It may be used to cover a casket of the dead. In this use, the union shall be at the head.

Old custom in the army and navy ordains that it shall never be washed. Theoretically, it is always pure and clean. When a flag is torn or frayed out by the wind it is never again hoisted until it has been repaired. Flags rent and torn in battle are not repaired, but are kept in their proud lacerations as precious relics.

To throw an old flag into the rag-bag or use it for any menial purpose is a crying insult. When the ensign has become so worn by wind and weather that it cannot be repaired, or has suffered some irreparable accident, assemble with dignity around the remains, and with fitting ceremony consign them to the flames.

Curious Account of the Nazarene

FOR generations and generations there has been in the family of Joseph S. Davis, United States Marshal for the Southern District of Georgia, residing in Savannah, a rare and unique document. It is a copy of what purports to be a personal description of Jesus Christ, and is supposed to have been written by an eyewitness of his public appearances.

The document belongs to Mrs. Davis and is treasured almost above every other thing she possesses. The original description was written in Latin and handed down from generation to generation. In 1831 Mrs. Davis' grandmother, Mrs. Susan H. Douglas, translated the description from a copy which was brought to this country by her ancestors and had been in the family for many years at that time.

Following is the description as translated from the Latin:

"There lives at this time in Judea a man of singular character, whose name is Jesus Christ. The Philippians esteem him a prophet, but his followers adore him as the immediate offspring of the immortal God. He is endowed with such unparalleled virtue as to call back the dead from their graves and to heal every kind of disease with word or touch. His person is tall and elegantly shaped, his aspect amiable and reverend. His hair flows into those beauteous shades which no united colors can match, falling into graceful curves below his ears, agreeably couching in his shoulders, and parting on the crown of his head like the headdress of the Nazarites. His forehead is smooth and large, his cheeks without spot and of a lovely red; his nose and mouth are formed with exquisite symmetry and his beard is thick and suitable to the hair of his head and reaching below his chin and parted in the middle like a fork. His eyes are bright, clear and serene. He rebukes with majesty and counsels with mildness and invites with the most tender and persuasive language. His kind address, whether in word or (two words missing), elegant, grave and strictly characteristic of so exalted a being.

"No man has seen him laugh, but the whole world beholds him weep frequently, and so persuasive are his tears that the multitude cannot withhold their tears from joining in sympathy with him. He is very modest, temperate and wise; in short, whatever this person may turn out in the end, he seems at present a man of excellent beauty and divine perfection, even greatly surpassing the children of men."

World's Finest War Museum Planned

The war has become so vast a business that the museum, if it is to form a complete record of the activities of the British empire, will certainly rank as one of the largest exhibitions in London. It is understood, says the London Daily Express, that Sir Martin Conway, the Director-General, has drawn up the outline of a scheme which has been approved by the Organizing Committee and has been submitted to the War Cabinet for consideration.

It is understood that the proposed scheme for the National War Museum embodies a War Memorial, in the shape of a Hall of Honor and a Memorial Gallery, round which the rest of the memorial museum would be grouped. The Hall of Honor, it is suggested, might have painted portraits on its walls, while floor space might be devoted to sculpture. In the Memorial Gallery the name of every man who has fallen in battle or died of wounds might be inscribed on bronze plates, framed with the arms, badges and honors of the regiment or ship.

The museum, it is considered, should provide a record of the whole war by sea and land in all parts of the world. There would be a section for aviation, another for models of ships, another for models of trenches, batteries and all the other contrivances that the fighting men use.

There would be guns of every kind of caliber, from a giant howitzer and naval gun down to a revolver. There might be a submarine tank, with a real submarine. There would be a department for trophies of all kinds taken from the enemy. The work of women, boy scouts and of all the uniformed workers in the land would be exhibited. There would be tanks.

It is suggested that the museum should also become the home of research for future war historians—that it should include the war records and a war library of books, pamphlets, maps, newspapers, etc.

There would necessarily be a large department for war photographs, including portraits of all officers and men who have fallen and those who have won distinctions, and another section for war paintings. A section of war toys of all nations is already in course of formation.

A Physiologist's Wife

"This is very painful, O'Brien," said the Professor, with a deprecatory motion of his hand. "I cannot see, however, how it affects your relation to my sister."

"I have eased my conscience," said O'Brien, rising from his chair; "I have told you all there is to tell. I should not like the story to reach you through any lips but my own."

"You are right, O'Brien. Your action has been most honorable and considerate. But you are not to blame in the matter, save that perhaps you showed a little precipitancy in choosing a life partner without due care and inquiry."

O'Brien drew his hand across his eyes. "Poor girl!" he cried. "God help me, I love her still! But I must go."

"You will lunch with us?"

"No, Professor; I have my packing still to do. I have already bade Miss Grey adieu. In two months I shall see you again."

"You will probably find me a married man."

"Married!"

"Yes, I have been thinking of it."

"My dear Professor, let me congratulate you with all my heart. I had no idea. Who is the lady?"

"Mrs. O'James is her name—a widow of the same nationality as yourself. But to return to matters of importance. I should be very happy to see the proofs of your paper upon the vermiform appendix. I may be able to furnish you with material for a footnote or two."

"Your assistance will be invaluable to me," said O'Brien with enthusiasm, and the two men parted in the hall. The Professor walked back into the dining room, where his sister was already seated at the luncheon table.

"I shall be married at the Registrar's," he remarked. "I should strongly recommend you to do the same."

Prof. Ainslie Grey was as good as his word. A fortnight's cessation of his classes gave him an opportunity which was too good to let pass. Mrs. O'James was an orphan, without relations and almost without friends in the country. There was no obstacle in the way of a speedy wedding. They were married, accordingly, in the quietest manner possible, and went off to Cambridge together, where the Professor and his charming wife were present at several academical observances, and varied the routine of their honeymoon by incursions into biological laboratories and medical libraries. Scientific friends were loud in their congratulations, not only upon Mrs. Grey's beauty, but upon the unusual quickness and intelligence she displayed in discussing physiological questions. The Professor was himself astonished at the accuracy of her information. "You have a remarkable range of knowledge for a woman, Jeannette," he remarked upon more than one occasion. He was even prepared to admit that her cerebrum might be of the normal weight.

One foggy, drizzling morning they returned to Birchespool, for the next day would reopen the session, and Prof. Ainslie Grey prided himself upon having never once in his life failed to appear in his lecture room at the very stroke of the hour. Miss Ada Grey welcomed them with a constrained cordiality, and handed over the keys of office to the new mistress. Mrs. Grey pressed her warmly to remain, but she explained that she had already accepted an invitation which would engage her for some months. The same evening she departed for the South of England.

A couple of days later the maid carried a card just after breakfast into the library where the Professor sat revising his morning lecture. It anounced the arrival of Dr. James McMurdo O'Brien. Their meeting was effusively genial on the part of the younger man, and coldly precise on that of his former teacher.

"You see there have been changes," said the Professor.

"So I heard. Miss Grey told me in her letters and I read the notice in the British Medical Journal. So it's really married you are. How quickly and quietly you have managed it all!"

"I am constitutionally averse to anything in the nature of show or ceremony. My wife is a sensible woman—I may even go to the length of saying that, for a woman, she is abnormally sensible. She quite agreed with me in the course which I have adopted."

"And your research on Vallisneria?"

"This matrimonial incident has interrupted it, but I have resumed my classes, and we shall soon be quite in harness again."

"I must see Miss Grey before I leave England. We have corresponded, and I think that all will be well. She must come out with me. I don't think I could go without her."

The Professor shook his head. "Your nature is not so weak as you pretend," he said. "Sexual questions of this sort are, after all, quite subordinate to the great duties of life."

O'Brien smiled. "You would have me take out my Celtic soul and put in a Saxon one," he said. "Either my brain is too small or my heart is too big. But when may I call and pay my respects to Mrs. Grey? Will she be at home this afternoon?"

"She is at home now. Come into the morning room. She will be glad to make your acquaintance."

They walked across the linoleum-paved hall. The Professor opened the door of the room and walked in, followed by his friend. Mrs. Grey was sitting in a basket chair by the window, light and fairy-like in a loose-flowing pink morning gown. Seeing a visitor, she rose and swept toward them. The Professor heard a dull thud behind him. O'Brien had fallen back into a chair, with his hand pressed tight to his side. "Jinny!" he gasped, "Jinny!"

Mrs. Grey stopped dead in her advance, and stared at him with a face from which every expression had been struck out save one of utter astonishment and horror. Then, with a sharp intaking of the breath, she reeled, and would have fallen, had not the Professor thrown his long nervous arm around her.

"Try this sofa," said he. She sank back among the cushions with the same white, cold, dead look upon her face. The Professor stood with his back to the empty fireplace and glanced from the one to the other.

"So, O'Brien," he said at last, "you have already made the acquaintance of my wife?"

"Your wife!" cried his friend hoarsely. "She is no wife of yours. God help me, she is my wife!"

The Professor stood rigidly upon the hearth rug. His long, thin fingers were intertwined, and his head had sunk a little forward. His two companions had eyes only for each other.

"Jinny!" cried he.

"James!"

"How could you leave me so, Jinny? How could you have the heart to do it? I thought you were dead. I mourned for your death—aye, and you made me mourn for you living. You have withered my life."

She made no answer, but lay back among the cushions with her eyes still fixed upon him.

"Why do you not speak?"

"Because you are right, James. I have treated you cruelly—shamefully. But it is not as bad as you think."

"You fled with De Horta."

"No, I did not. At the last moment my better nature prevailed. He went alone. But I was ashamed to come back after what I had written to you. I could not face you. I took passage alone to England under a new name, and here I have lived ever since. It seemed to me that I was beginning life again. I knew that you thought I was drowned. Who could have dreamed that fate would throw us together again! When the Professor asked me"—— She stopped and gave a gasp for breath.

"You are faint," said the Professor. "Keep the head low; it aids the cerebral circulation." He flattened down the cushion. "I am sorry to leave you, O'Brien, but I have my class duties to look to. Possibly I may find you here when I return." With a grim and rigid face he strode out of the room. Not one of the three hundred students who listened to his lecture saw any change in his manner and appearance, or could have guessed that the austere gentleman in front of them had found out at last how hard it is to rise above one's humanity. The lecture over, he performed his routine duties in the laboratory and then drove back to his own house. He did not enter by the front door, but passed through the garden to the folding glass casement which led out of the morning room.

The Professor heard the cooing, caressing laugh which he knew so well.

"I shall go with you, James," she said.

"And the Professor?"

"The poor Professor! But he will not mind much, James, he has no heart."

"We must tell him your resolution."

"There is no need," said Professor Ainslie Grey, stepping in through the open casement. "I have overheard the latter part of your conversation. I hesitated to interrupt you before you came to a conclusion."

O'Brien stretched out his hand and took that of the woman. They stood together with the sunshine on their faces. The Professor stood on the casement with his hands behind his back, and his long, black shadow fell between them.

"You have come to a wise decision," said he. "Go back to Australia together, and let what has passed be blotted out of your lives."

"But you—you"—— stammered O'Brien.

The Professor waved his hand. "Never trouble about me," he said.

O'Brien hesitated with a hanging head. "I hardly dare offer you my hand," he said.

"On the contrary, I think that of the three of us you come best out of the affair. You have nothing to be ashamed of."

"Your sister"——

"I shall see that the matter is put to her in its true light. Good-by. Let me have a copy of your recent research. Good-by, Jeanette!"

III.

The Professor was as punctual as ever at his classes, and as zealous in directing the laboratory work of those who studied under him. His own private researches were pushed on with feverish energy. In vain his friends assured him that such a life must undermine his health. He only lengthened his hours of work.

Gradually under this discipline a change came over his appearance. His features, always inclined to gauntness, became even sharper and more pronounced. There were deep lines about his temples and across his brow. His cheek was sunken and his complexion bloodless. His knees gave under him when he walked, and once when passing out of his lecture room he fell and had to be assisted to his carriage.

This was just before the end of the session; and soon after the holidays commenced the professors who still remained in Birchespool were shocked to hear that their brother of the Chair of Physiology had sunk so low that no hopes could be entertained of his recovery. Two eminent physicians had consulted over his case without being able to give a name to the affection from which he suffered. A steadily decreasing vitality appeared to be the only symptom—a bodily weakness which left the mind unclouded. He was much interested himself in his own case, and made notes of his subjective sensations as an aid to diagnosis. Of his approaching end he spoke in his usual unemotional and somewhat pedantic fashion. "It is the assertion," he said, "of the liberty of the individual cell as opposed to the cell commune. It is the dissolution of a co-operative society. The process is one of great interest."

And so one gray morning his co-operative society dissolved. His two physicians felt some embarrassment when called upon to fill in his certificate.

"Very," said the other.

"If he were not such an unemotional man, I should have said that he had died from some sudden nervous shock—from what the vulgar call a broken heart."

"I don't think poor Grey was that sort of a man at all."

"Let us call it cardiac, anyhow," said the older physician. So they did so. (Copyrighted.)

Three New Marvels of Healing

tar and were swollen to the size of small muffs. Ten days later, she declared, the hands were reduced to normal size, the skin was as white as her own, and there was not a scar. The doctors had promised the violinist that he would have the use of his hands again for playing; and the promise was kept.

The British War Department has devised a mixture said to be even more effective than ambrine. The formula is as follows: Betanaphthol resublimed, 1-4 per cent; eucalyptis oil, 2 per cent; olive oil, 5 per cent; paraffin molle, 25 per cent, and paraffin durum, 67 3-4 per cent.

After the burn is washed in sterile water and dried with an electric apparatus like that used by hairdressers, the paraffin mixture, at a temperature of 50 Centigrade, is coated over the burn either with a spray or a broad camel's hair brush. A thin layer of cotton wool is next applied, then another coating of paraffin, and the whole is bandaged. The burns are usually dressed daily, and the paraffin treatment is continued until the burn is sufficiently healed to dress it with boric or talc powder. The wax coating completely excludes air and moisture, with the result that the protected tissues rapidly renew themselves and scarification is prevented.

The third and most interesting section of this story concerns the young American engineer whose common sense told him that the old method of local anesthesia by means of injecting cocaine would be worthless in wounds of the area inflicted in this war, and whose opinion vented itself in the characteristically American words:

Today, after repulses from high authorities which would have filled anyone less self-confident and persistent with despair, Gordon Edwards' nikalgin, according to a correspondent of Collier's Weekly in Paris, is being used in all the French military hospitals—it is supplied to them free of charge through the beneficence of Miss Anne Morgan—and in many of the British and Italian hospitals.

The ingredients of nikalgin—a name made of two Greek words, signifying "victory over pain"—are a secret. The withholding of a formula is not considered as iniquitous in a layman as in a physician, but Edwards' lack of medical training filled his path with obstacles. However, he has not attempted to make a commercial fortune out of his discovery. In fact, he is said to be poorer today than he was when he forsook electrical engineering in order to search for a perfect anesthetic for dentistry, back in 1913.

It is said that the outbreak of the war showed him in a flash of inspiration how he might modify the injection solution he had just achieved so as to make it applicable to external wound. He tried out his solution triumphantly on a leg ulcer case at the Vanderbilt Clinic in New York, and in November, 1914, was in England.

The British War Office, according to the writer in Collier's, did not receive him with open arms. In truth, he was told that, however meritorious his discovery, there was no time in which to try it out. He was told to come back when the war was over. It is easy to imagine the askance looks with which professional surgeons would view a layman in the thirties who came forward with the announcement that he had the power to revolutionize local anesthesia. It is scarcely surprising that he was called a "patent medicine faker" and "that mad American engineer."

He went to France, where the surgeons turned him out of Abbeville and Boulogne. But in December, 1914, he obtained permission to give a demonstration at the Hospital Buffon. He drenched with his solution the wound of a soldier whose hip and thigh had been scooped out by an exploding shell. To the amazement of the French surgeons, they were able to probe the raw flesh without the patient's even being aware of it.

But not even then could Edwards interest any of the allied war offices in his invention. It was not until the beginning of 1916, when the American was in such straits that he scarcely knew where his next dollar would come from, that Miss Morgan, with her fortune and energy, went to his assistance. She obtained an invitation from Gen. Nivelle, then commanding the Second Army, for Edwards to visit the Verdun front. In the meantime, Edwards had devised a spray with a pressure jet which would throw a stream of liquid with force enough to penetrate through bandage and infection to the raw flesh.

At the Verdun Hospital Edwards asked the physicians to bring forward their worst case of an external wound. They produced a victim of liquid fire, whose body, from the head down to the waist, had been enveloped in the flaming deluge. On the chest, covered with gauze, was a burn stretching from neck to navel. The physicians told Edwards the poor wreck must die. Unless the breast could be dressed he would succumb to blood poisoning. But any attempt to peel off the gauze, stuck to flesh, would cause the man to die of pain.

Edwards put his spray into operation and drenched the breast and its bandages. Then a surgeon, perspiring, began to strip away the gauze. He peeled off an inch, and then, unable to stand the suspense longer, tore it all away with one gesture. The patient, who had been staring at the ceiling, did not even move his eyes. He did not know that the bandage had been removed. He was brought back to life. For if his wound could be dressed without killing him with pain, he was saved.

Another soldier had an infected wound a foot long through his thigh, through the tunnel of which the surgeons had to pass gauze wet with a disinfectant. On this day the patient declared that he would die rather than submit again to the torture of having the wound dressed. Edwards used his spray, and the soldier would not believe it when told that the dressing was completed. He had felt nothing.

Through these and similar cases, Edward's fame was made in France. A famous French surgeon told him that they must have enough nikalgin "to keep the entire French army flooded." The English War Office came into line and nikalgin was used on the Somme front. Edwards went to Italy last May and introduced his method there. It has been adopted to some extent in Russia and Japan.

Thus, when the American armies go into action, they will escape many of the horrors of the first three years of war. According to experts they will have at their disposal the formula and technique of a wonderful new method of disinfecting deep wounds; of an even more wonderful one of repairing the most terrible burns, and, finally, a system of local anesthesia which utterly disarms agonies too frightful for human nerves to endure.

THREE NEW MARVELS OF HEALING

Science's Reply to Liquid Fire, Gas and High Explosives

Unprecedented depth, area and pain of wounds in modern war stimulate discoveries said to mark epoch in medical art—Dakin solution, with technique devised by Dr. Alexis Carrel, lessens amputations 50 per cent—Dr. de Sandfort's paraffin treatment for burns and frostbite works wonders in restoring tissues—Romance of new system of local anesthesia, invented by Gordon Edwards, young American electrical engineer.

IN the year 1536 the famous barber-surgeon, Ambroise Pare, accompanied the French armies to the siege of Turin. When the city fell, he entered with the troops and went into a stable to lodge his horse. There he found three soldiers of the enemy propped against the wall, their features "all changed" by gunpowder burns and their clothes still smoldering from the fire.

"As I was looking at them with pity," Pare records, "there came an old soldier, who asked me if there were any way to cure them. I said no. And then he went up to them and cut their throats, gently, and without ill-will toward them. Seeing this great cruelty, I told him he was a villain; he answered he prayed God, when he should be in such a plight, he might find someone to do the same for him, that he should not linger in misery."

The gunpowder burns of the sixteenth century were no doubt child's play compared with the unparalleled savageries introduced into warfare by German kultur through its sprays of flaming tar and petroleum, and through the hideous gangrene infections induced by its poisonous gases; but modern science, instead of confessing defeat by putting the victims to death, has taken up the challenge and is devising new methods of healing, so that more and more unfortunates may be snatched from the arms of the Teuton Moloch.

The excessive depth, area and agony of the wounds produced by high-explosive shells and liquid fire sprays and bombs, the terrible prevalence of frostbite during winter campaigns in the trenches, and the swift and deadly infections caused by gas, made obsolete the pre-war methods at the disposal of surgeons and physicians. The answer of science is the contrivance of three momentous inventions.

The first—the development of th famous Dakin antiseptic solution an the technique of its use—is the join creation of an American and a Britis physician, Dr. Alexis Carrel of th Rockefeller Institute, and Dr. Henry H. Dakin of the Lister Institute. The second—the paraffin method of treating burns and frostbites, in which the best known preparation employed is called ambrine—is the invention of a French physician, Dr. Barthe de Sandfort of the Hospital St. Nicholas, at Issy-les-Moulineaux, near Paris. The third—a system of local anesthesia employing a preparation known as nikalgin—has only recently been announced in the lay press. It was developed by an American electical engineer, Gordon Edwards of San Francisco. The last case gains a certain romance from the fact that Edwards is not a physician, and was compelled to combat the almost insurmountable prejudice of the profession against the layman.

At the outset of the war, surgeons found themselves confronted with a pressing problem in the great depth of the wounds caused by shrapnel fragments and the fire of high-power guns. Far into the cavities were usually carried foreign substances which speedily set up infection. The majority of deaths were due not primarily to the injuries, but to blood poisoning.

The problem called for a disinfectant of greater strength than any previously in use, and for a system by which the deepest wound might be constantly irrigated. At the military hospital near Compeigne, where the buildings were more than once under fire from German shells, Dr. Carrel, himself a famous scientific investigator and Nobel prize winner, and Dr. Dakin undertook to find a solution. After eight months of experimental study in the laboratory and of six months of practical tests in the French hospitals, the scientists announced that they had succeeded. They had experimented with more than 200 different drugs in various combinations.

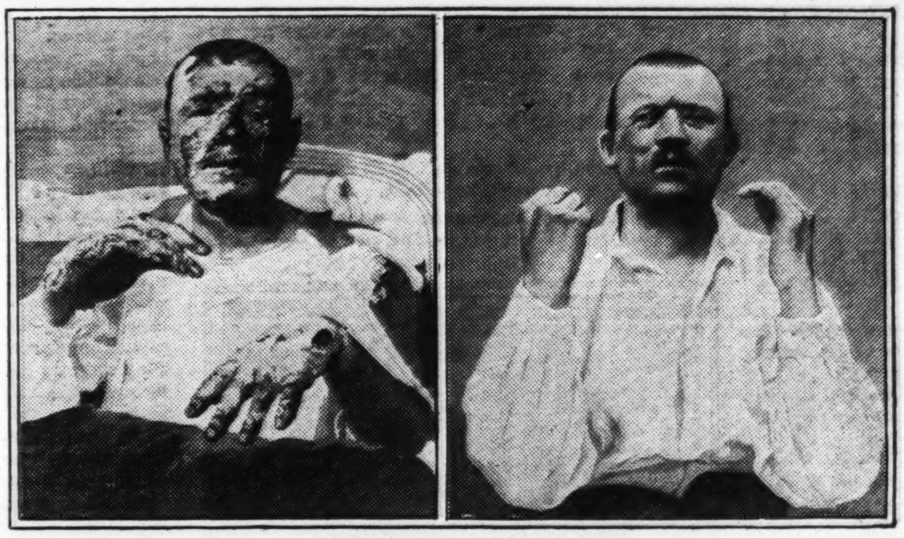
The Dakin solution, the ingredients of which were made public by the inventors, is based on hypochlorite of lime, the most powerful disinfectant known. It had been previously unavailable because of the rapidity with which it decomposes, and also its destructive effect on the tissues, owing to its extreme corrosiveness. The first defect was overcome by the addition of boric acid, which gave stability; and the second by an intermixture of carbonate of lime, which neutralizes causticity.

The technique for administering the disinfectant was devised by Dr. Carrel. It consists of the complete irrigation of the wounds by means of a rubber tube with many branches and perforated with numerous small holes. Thus a constant sterilizing flow is kept up through the wounded tissues, and every pocket and corner is thoroughly cleansed.

"Our experiments have proved," said Dr. Carrel, "that in a sterilized cavity thus protected, nature's healing process goes on with a rapidity hitherto unknown. The duration of the treatment is abridged about two-thirds, and the number of amputations diminished 50 per cent. In certain cases complete healing has occurred in one-tenth of the time required under ordinary treatment."

The reduction of operations gains its importance from the fact that one of the dangers of deep-lying wounds, often involving broken bones, was that of infected fractures, frequently necessitating amputations.

Dr. Carrel's renown as a conscientious investigator and also the frankness with which he and his colleague promptly made public the secrets of their discovery, led with little delay to the adoption of the Dakin solution in most of the allied hospitals. The Rockefeller Institute, at a cost of $200,000, built a hospital in New York for the instruction of American surgeons in the treatment, and Dr. Carrel was summoned to return to this country in order to take charge of the hospital. Admirers of Dr. Carrel maintain that the researches of himself and Dr. Dakin have already been the means of saving thousands of lives.



An amazing proof of the efficacy of the ambrine treatment for soldiers badly burned with flaming gases. At the left, a soldier who, ordinarily, would have been badly disfigured for life even if he had recovered. At right, the same man, with burned flesh tissue completely healed and scarcely a scar showing.

Dr. Alexis Carrel of New York, whose improvement on the Dakin method of draining deep wounds has saved the lives and limbs of thousands of soldiers.

Much greater difficulty in obtaining the adoption of his treatment was met by Dr. de Sandfort, largely because it was considered by many of the medical profession that his exploitation of ambrine was unethical. He obtained patents and issued his solution as a proprietary compound; and although revealing that it was composed of paraffin wax and essence of amber, refused to make public the proportions in which those ingredients, and others, were combined. Therefore, his claims for the paraffin treatment of burns and frostbites were bitterly opposed by the medical fraternity, not only in France, but in this country, where the Journal of the American Medical Association denounced him as a "charlatan" and ambrine as a "nostrum."

But after struggling for recognition almost since the beginning of the war, Dr. de Sandfort last winter finally came into his own, when President Poincare of France decorated him with the cross of a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor, in reward for the feats, which read almost like miracles, accomplished by his treatment in restoring faces and limbs which had been burned almost beyond human semblance. Prominent American surgeons, who went to France to study his work at first hand, indorsed it and adopted it in this country; Dr. Carrel lent it the sponsorship of his influential name; the British Admiralty has made the treatment compulsory, and it has been widely adopted in the British army. An interesting fact, asserted by American visitors at Dr. de Sandfort's hospital, is that he possesses too little scientific training to be able to determine why or how the burns get well, and that he stumbled on the discovery by accident.

"Observations of Dr. de Sandfort's treatment and experiments with ambrine in military hospitals indicates that burns healed with rapidity, constitutional symptoms rapidly abated, and pain was reduced to a minimum. Scarring appeared to be obviated, or, at any rate, was not apparent. The need for grafting large burns appeared to be avoided. The burns healed so rapidly with healthy granulations that there appeared nothing to be gained by grafting. The patients were singularly free from sepsis. Mild burns healed with singular rapidity, and severe cases recovered which would have been unlikely to recover under the ordinary methods of treatment. * * * The experience of those who had witnessed the results of burns after liquid fire was that ambrine treatment would save many lives and accelerate the recovery of all burns."

This is the cautious official language. Beside it place the testimony of a layman, an American woman, whose observations have been confirmed by experts. She wrote from the St. Nicholas Hospital:

"I saw the most wonderful cures wrought on suffering men that I have ever seen in my life. Indeed, the thing is such a miracle that it is hard to write collectedly about it, and I know in any case you will accuse me of exaggeration until you see the photographs I am sending. They don't lie! * * *

"We came to the burning tar cases. One doctor told me that it was considered the most terrible form of suffering. When I caught sight of the first of them, I could not believe my senses. I could not believe that any man in such a state could be living. My indignation was the one feeling uppermost, and I exclaimed to the nearest surgeon: 'Why did you not free him from suffering?' (Meaning, 'Why did you not kill him?')

"And do you know, will you believe, that very man—that apparent wreck, every feature of whose face was then indistinguishable, eyes closed, lips and parts of his face burned almost to the bone, teeth all exposed, like a grinning mask, whose hands were too dreadful for me to describe—talked with Mrs. T. the other day, only 10 days after? That the features of his face are not only plainly distinguishable, but that the deep wounds are filled up, the flesh fast healing over with new white skin; that there remains on his forehead but one place not yet fully recovered, and that there will not be, within another week, even a scar?"

This observer told of another man, who had been a violinist, whose hands had been seared with burning

The Real Kaiser

William attaches with the aid of buttons and pulleys, like any poor Lieutenant, who looks upon men sporting an English-made dress shirt as veritable plungers. Of socks, never above a dozen pairs are in use, half-yellow, half-brown, and, like the underwear, of lisle; but the Hohenzollern house laws seem to impose no restriction as to handkerchiefs, which evidently come grosswise, all, like the shirts, drawers and socks, inscribed with "W" and the royal crown.

His majesty's washstand is of truly royal dimensions and elaborateness. To it the bath furnishes a formidable contrast, being an ordinary zinc tub, painted. But the most astonishing thing about it is its situation. Germany's Kaiser, twice a King, as many times a Grand Duke, 18 times a Duke, three times a Margrave, once a Burgrave, twice a Prince, nine times a Count and 15 times a Seigneur, besides being a Bishop, bathes behind a curtain in a stuffy corridor, the connecting link between his dressing room and the conjugal bedchamber.

The love of risque stories is a Hohenzollern failing; contemporary writers agree that Frederick the Great shunned woman's society because it obliged him to bridle his tongue and observe the ordinary decencies of life; the "romantic Frederick William IV was a trafficker in classical and modern pornographic literature, and the present Kaiser's grossness of speech is notorious. * * * Three-quarters of the time when the public imagines William to be wrestling with problems of the day he sits on a billiard table with the chief members of his military and civil households standing round him, telling stories and listening to tales affecting personages of the court here and abroad. And while this lascivious tattle is carried on, her majesty sits, perchance, in the cup room, magnificently gowned, knitting shapeless little woollen caps for orphan asylums and talking religion and cheap charity schemes to her Grand Master or to the much-beloved Von der Knesebeck. What contrasts! I often thought to myself. The head of the nation, whose unceasing industry is the talk of the continent, vainly trying to kill time with buffoonery; the sovereign lady, "mother of the poor," working penny caps in a gown the cost of which would keep for 10 years the poor boy or girl for whom the knitting thing is intended.

It is a saying at court: "Give the Kaiser an up-to-date rendering of the 'Merry Jests of King Louis XI' and you will receive a standing invitation to accompany him on his northland trips; tell him something more indelicate than the 'Tattle of the Nuns of Poissy' and he will book you for an ambassadorship."

While not particularly loving toward his wife, the Emperor honors her with excessive jealousy, and is beside himself with rage if a man servant, ever so innocently, looks at her majesty when she is dressed in a decollete costume. As Napoleon bounced M. Leroy, the Worth of his times, for complimenting Marie Louise on her fine shoulders, so William deals unmercifully with officials and servants who venture to look at his wife.

The Kaiser has many nicknames—Reise Kaiser (Drummer Emperor), Gondola Billy, Wilhelm der Ploetzliche (William the Sudden) being the most common, but the people of the palace call him Der Enzige (The Only), with apologies to Frederick the Great, who also enjoyed that title, though for very different reasons.

From August, 1888, to May, 1890, leaving out hunting trips and others of a private character, William went to Stockholm and Copenhagen, Frankfurt, Stuttgart, Munich, Vienna, Rome, Hapsburg, Leipsig, Breslau, Stettin, Bueckburg, Olderburg, Wilhelmshafen, Schwedt, Weimar, Brunswick, Dresden, Osborne, Sandown Bay, Aldershot, Carlsruhe, Strassburg, Metz, Muenster, Minden, Hanover, Schwerin, Athens, Dessau, Darmstadt, Worms, Bremen, Frankfort-on-the-Main, Altenburg, Koenigsburg, altogether stopping and holding court in 37 cities and towns in Germany and abroad, many of which were visited three or four times and all within a short space of a year and 10 months. To find excuses for such almost perpetual absence from the seat of government and quiet public opinion on the score of incessant junketings, all sorts of excuses are invented by William and his suite. But the real motive is a morbid restlessness of which the Kaiser is possessed, and that scourges him, a crowned Ahasuerus, from town to city, over seas and mountains.

Traveling is such a mania with the Reise-Kaiser, that, when business of state or the fact that there is nobody or nothing to visit forbids his going abroad, he occasionally spends a night in his railway carriage, stalled at Wildpark Station, only five minutes from the Neues Palais at Potsdam, on the plea that on the following morning he must be in Berlin at an unearthly hour. In the early part of the summer of 1895 he indulged in this queer pastime with increasing regularity until one night in June, when about to drive to the station from some festivity held at the Marble Palace, the Kaiserin took courage to threaten an invasion of his bachelor quarters, which, she insisted, must possess some special attraction. William desisted from following his inclination then and for several months. Her majesty's interference was well timed, for a number of the royal servants, underpaid and nourishing a sneaking spirit of insurrection, had conspired to inform some member of the opposition (with a view to interpellating the Minister of Railways in the Reichstag) of the fact that his majesty was in the habit of using a public depot for his sleeping apartment. Of course, the legislative body had no business inquiring into the sovereign's manner of spending his nights, but the public was interested in the accompanying circumstance that when his majesty chose to repose at Wildpark, traffic was seriously disturbed in order that the mighty one's sleep might not be interfered with. * * * If disgruntled servants had told this tale to Liebknecht or Bebel, the inevitable discussion might have seriously marred his majesty's enjoyment of the Wilhelm Canal opening festivities then about to take place.

tinually, all through the night, obliged to lift the wounded out of the ambulances and carry them over the dangers, while the motors—those wonderful Ford cars—performed acrobatic feats inconceivable to orthodox chauffeurs at home."

And when day came "I saw once more the nightmare picture of drab-dressed, mud-stained soldiers, splashing with their sandaled feet in the sloppy mud; sometimes stumbling, then rising, smothered with mud, without a word; weren't there worse troubles than that? 'Hleba?' (Bread?) I asked. 'None for three days,' was the answer.

"Commanders of other columns often urged me to sleep during the night treks of the wagons, but I preferred to be at the head of the column by night as well as by day, so that the men should feel I was not asking them to endure what I would not endure myself." Mrs. Stobart recalls having gone as long as 81 hours without sleep or rest. She was riding horseback, and sometimes caught herself dozing in the saddle.

Glimpses of the horrors of this appalling hegira of a whole nation occur in Mrs. Stobart's diary of the retreat. Wagons filled with little children; the oxen, weary and hungry, led by women, also weary, hungry and footsore. I saw one woman, dragging by a rope two tired oxen drawing a wagon, in which were eight small children. I saw a tiny boy leading two tiny calves drawing a cart containing a tiny baby. I saw a woman carrying her two babies, one on her back and one in front; and the baby on her back was knocked off by the horns of a passing ox.

"Among the refugees were thousands of Austrian prisoners. They were mostly Austrian Serbs, and their one dread was that they might fall into the hands of their former rulers. Half a dozen of these prisoners straggled into our camp at Kupci, and their eager gratitude when we gave them some food was horrible to witness.

"The multitude, as it fled, uttered no sound. Grief, when it wails, is pitiful enough, but grief borne in silence betrays a tenser tragedy. Had the misery in those breaking hearts been uttered in a single cry, that cry, caught and re-echoed through the mountains, must have broken the drum of the ear of God. * * * The thought dominant in my mind was the irreligion of the world. Crimes—the most gigantic crimes—were triumphant everywhere in Europe, and the exponents of religion were silent."

The column came to a swollen river, in which a Servian General narrowly missed drowning. "There was no bridge," related the author, "the water came over the steps of the pony carriage in which he drove, and the carriage nearly overturned many times. I was ready to rescue him, but expected every minute to be submerged myself. When I had forded safely through, leading a way for others, I found that the Sergeant had let another column break in; so once more I was obliged to plunge into the water and splash up and down, while I showed the drivers the treacherous places to avoid. * * * The General soon got ahead of us, and we never saw him again." Then come more sidelights on the retreat:

"I was often obliged to dismount and walk in the thick mud, to keep my feet from freezing. * * * Deep holes and mud up to the axles. * * * 'As I had been without sleep for 70 hours, sometimes I couldn't prevent myself from dozing in the middle of a sentence. * * * We reached Dreznik at 4 p. m. on Nov. 25, but though I had been 81 hours without sleep or rest, I was quite fresh and untired, and the only inconvenience I felt was from occasional fits of sleepiness when nothing important had to be done. * * * At Petch the local Prefect asked me to drink a glass of new milk at his house. It was half cream, and the daughter of the house warmed it. I had not realized till I found myself gulping like a greedy puppy, that we had lately not been overfed."

Finally the miserable cavalcade came to the border of Montenegro, the land of the Black Mountains. Roads ceased, except for the tracks trampled out in the snow by the thousands of refugees who had passed before, and these traversed passes a mile high, across snow, ice and boulders, unbroken forests, seas of mud and rivers without bridges. Once, at the top of an incline, Mrs. Stobart's horse slipped and both rolled to the bottom.

"We picked ourselves up, shook ourselves. * * * There was no one to say, 'Poor dear, are you hurt?' Men who were passing, passed; a broken leg, or even a broken neck, of what consequence would such trifles be in the general havoc? * * *

"No hay was procurable for the animals, and all we could give them to eat was dead beach leaves, which we unburied from the snow. We slept around the fire and prevented ourselves from slipping down the mountain sides by logs of wood placed at our feet. * * * Along the track men by the hundreds lay dead—dead from cold and hunger, their eyes staring at the irresponsive sky, and no one could stop to bury them. Worse still, men lay dying from cold and hunger, and no one could stay to tend them. * * * It is believed that no less than 10,000 human being lie sepulchered in those mountains."

One day in Albania the column heard loud and continuous firing near at hand. "We were soon told in explanation that a party of Arnauts, or Albanians, had entrapped, for loot, some convoys which were close behind us, in a narrow gorge, and they were now murdering the members of the convoy. I have since heard that the wife and eight children of the Commissariat Major, including two boys who had walked with me one night, were all murdered that day, with many others, by these Arnauts."

For a few days the unit was accompanied by a young German officer, a prisoner, upon whom the sole restraint was that he must report himself at the military station every night. "During the day he was as free as we were," Mrs. Stobart says, "and came and took his meals with us several times." His views of the war were typically Prussian: "The war was brought on by England; France had been the first to violate Belgian territory; the war would be finished in a month; there was no chance at all for the allies; the Germans had practically won the war already, and our hospital party would certainly be taken prisoner in a few days." These boasts make sardonic reading nearly two years later.

As the rout proceeded, the motor cars were lost one after another; the starving oxen, when unable to drag another step onward, were slaughtered and devoured; all the medical stores and instruments of the unit had to be abandoned, and the carts were cut down from four wheels to two. But the greatest difficulty was in obtaining provisions in that devastated country.

Mrs. Stobard tells over and over again how she herself went into villages where her men had been denied food for themselves and their animals, and by dint of never taking the word "No" succeeded in obtaining provisions; how she invariably led the way into danger, thus shaming the men into following her; and how more than once her indomitable energy prevented them from giving up the struggle and sitting down to await capture by the Bulgars. But there were some amusing incidents, such as the visit of a Mohammedan Albanian to the camp.

"I was much worried by his trousers," she related, "for instead of fastening nicely and safely around the waist, like Christian trousers, these fastened below the hip. Until I learned from experience that my fears were groundless, the trousers of the Albanian gentleman gave me much anxiety. I was possessed by a shy curiosity, which was never gratified, to know how they kept up; but an accident never occurred in my presence."

On another occasion, when the only available lodging place was a schoolhouse, "a charming incident occurred, typical of Servian chivalry. The floor was filthy, but I was about to go to bed upon it, like the rest of the unit, when Maj. A. very politely came up to me and invited me to share the tiny platform on which his mattress was laid; the floor there was less dirty than elsewhere, as it was raised and away from the traffic. I accepted, and, raised regally above the others, the Major and I slept side by side; but it all seemed so natural that we didn't even smile. I should like to meet that Major again. We could laugh at it now."

Again, in a Montenegrin village, Mrs. Stobart and numerous other men and women were herded into one room for the night. Among them was a priest. "At 10 o'clock he looked at his watch, and then, with calm deliberation, removed his trousers. For a moment I was in trepidation. What was coming next? I looked round to see if the girls were asleep. Their eyes were shut. I couldn't take mine off the priest. He sat down again on the chair, folded his trousers, placed them on his lap, went to sleep, sitting bolt upright, and snored vigorously all night long. The trousers removal had been a danger signal, to keep off talkative people, or people who might want his chair."

On Dec. 20 the unit at last reached Scutari. Mrs. Stobart took an Italian boat and reached Brindisi on Christmas day; she enjoyed her first "good, sit-down, hot meal" in nine months the next evening in Rome, and arrived in London, by way of Paris, on Dec. 29.

Rheumatism

A Home Cure Given by One Who Had It

In the spring of 1893 I was attacked by Muscular and Inflammatory Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who have it know, for over three years. I tried remedy after remedy, and doctor after doctor, but such relief as I received was only temporary. Finally I found a remedy that cured me completely, and it has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted and even bedridden with Rheumatism, and it effected a cure in every case.

I want every sufferer from any form of rheumatic trouble to try this marvelous healing power. Don't send a cent; simply mail your name and address and I will send it free to try. After you have used it and it has proven itself to be that long-looked-for means of curing your Rheumatism you may send the price of it, one dollar, but, understand, I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it. Isn't that fair? Why suffer any longer when positive relief is thus offered you free? Don't delay. Write today.

If Too Fat Get More Fresh Air

Eat All You Need, Including Candy. Reduce Your Weight. Here's the Secret.

Lack of fresh air, it is said, weakens the oxygen-carrying power of the blood, the liver becomes sluggish, fat accumulates and the action of many of the vital organs is hindered thereby. The heart action becomes weak, work is an effort and the beauty of the figure is destroyed.

Fat put on by indoor life is unhealthy, and if nature is not assisted in throwing it off a serious case of obesity may result.

When you feel that you are getting too stout take the matter in hand at once, Don't wait until your figure has become a joke and your health ruined through carrying around a burden of unsightly and unhealthy fat.

Spend some time daily in the open air; breathe deeply, and get from any druggist a small box of oil of korein capsules; take one after each meal and one before retiring at night. Also follow the simple directions that come with the box.

A testing supply of oil of korein capsules, with interesting book, will be mailed free (in plain envelope) if you write to Korein Company, 118 East 28th St., 502D New York, N. Y.

Weigh yourself every few days and keep up the treatment until you are down to normal. Oil of korein is absolutely harmless, is pleasant to take, and helps the digestion.

To those who realize that overstoutness imperils health in numerous ways, in addition to constant mental and physical discomfort, this suggestion to try a simple, harmless, reliable means of probable speedy relief should be most welcome.—ADV.

Fried Chicken and the Stubborn Anti-Suffragist

When only the gizzard is left on the platter, the Oldest Inhabitant seizes the opportunity to shove home her final arguments, and although the Man from the City was unconvinced because he had "made up his mind and never changed it," it was the opinion of the woman crusader who heard of the discussion that he had been bested all the way through.

By Alice Curtice Moyer-Wing.

THERE were hoofbeats behind us—rapid ones—and as they slowed down to the gait at which I was holding La Belle, over a spot of particularly rugged road, a pleasant enough voice accosted me.

"I am traveling this road a couple of miles myself," it said.

One could see at a glance that he was a man of the city and that he had an air of one who commands. "Perhaps an employer of many people," I thought. "Perhaps"——

But here he continued: "I heard your speech last Sunday. By the way, isn't this a fine Indian summer morning?"

"Glorious," I agreed. "I was just thinking of the days when I used to associate Indian Summer with Apaches and would shy at thickets of underbrush lest a horde of them come out and scalp me."

"And it was just about this time of the year when a fellow was started to school with a tin lunch pail hanging to him. The pail was considerably lightened, I remember, by the time he reached the schoolhouse. Gee! He just had to have something to console him on the road, feeling himself a sad martyr to the cause of education."

"Oh, were you reared in the country, too?" I asked with interest.

"Just a little. And it was so long ago that I remember only a very few of the sensations. Indian Summer and the district school are among them.

"But, as I was saying, I heard your speech last Sunday and have just been waiting for a chance to, personally, record my objections. First of all, I want to say that I voted against suffrage in your last campaign in this State, and I instructed all my men to do so. And when"——

"You instructed your men!" I interrupted hotly. "You instructed your men! And 'your men' probably thought they were living in free America! They are men who, no doubt, would fight desperately at the idea of being ruled by Kings, but were afraid to have an opinion of their own with you as their employer."

"But about my objections," he continued with experienced exasperation. "One of them is the fact that women will not vote when they have the opportunity. And another (without giving me a chance to protest) is because all women do not want to vote. Another is, that women will be insulted at the polls. And another is this: It will make the women mannish to vote. I hate to see women trying to imitate men. I must leave you at this turning. Don't get all fussed up, now, over my not giving you a chance to combat these objections. You couldn't convince me, no matter what you said. My mind is made up and I never change it. I am boss in my own house, and I mean to remain boss. No woman suffrage for me. Good-by."

"By the way," he called, looking over his shoulder, "you are not the first person who has heard these objections of mine. I'm doing all I can against you."

"Then why didn't you come out in the open and declare yourself last Sunday, when I asked for a discussion of the question publicly, if you are so eager to have your views known?" I asked.

"That isn't my way of fighting, if you want to know," he replied.

"And they say that it is women who will die for the last word, La Belle," I said wrathfully. I drew up and looked after him as he galloped away. "If only he would let me reply," I said. "You could overtake him, La Belle, with both eyes closed, if we were to suddenly remember that that is also our road—but it's no use. He wouldn't listen. I have seen people like him before. People who make statements—just statements—and then refuse to prove them. Let's forget him."

But all day he was in my mind. His insolent, exasperating manner had "riled" me, as my Ozark friends would say, more than I liked to admit. I kept thinking of the replies I should have liked to make and kept hoping that somebody would have a chance to combat him.

We spent the night at the home of the oldest inhabitant of the neighborhood. This oldest inhabitant had lived in this section of the Ozark country long before its settlers had seen a railroad; when "road agents" were hair-raising realities and travelers were taking their lives in their hands to make a journey.

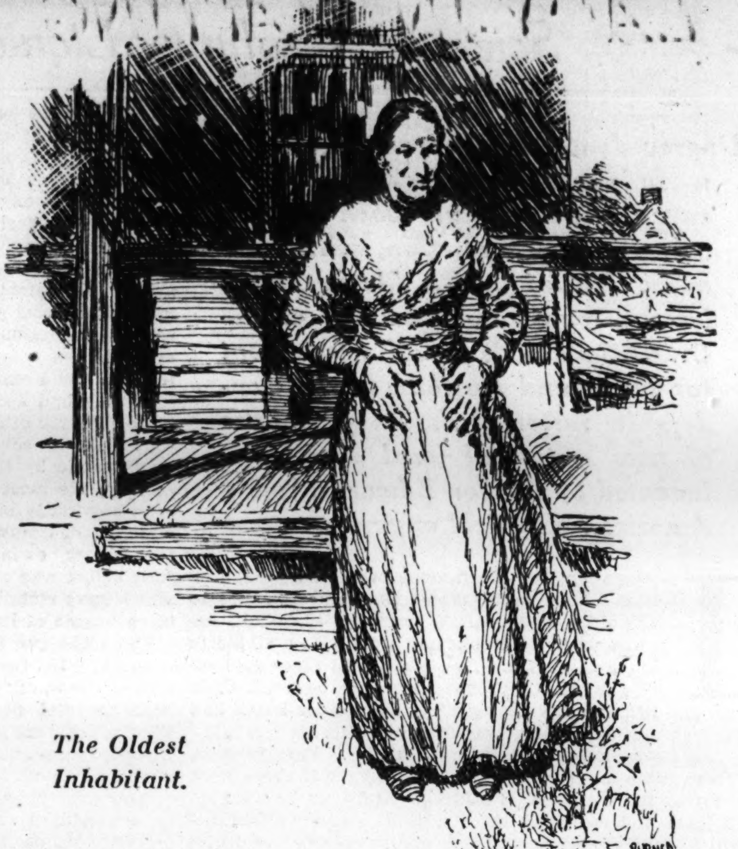
She kept up a lively chatter about these old, perilous, primitive days as she laid the table for supper. "Some people wonders that I can git about so well," she said. "I reckon it's because I've never had time to give up and stop. I'd a heap ruther wear out than rust out, I tell 'em, so I've jist kept a-goin'."

There wasn't a word said about woman suffrage till we drew up our chairs before the fireplace for a talk.

"The children won't git home till sorter late," she explained, "maybe 9 o'clock. It's a long way to town. Takes 'em all day and part of the night to make the trip."

She threw on another pine knot. "The nights is shore gittin' chilly awful early. I look fer a early frost and a long, cold winter. I never seen the corn shucks as thick as they air this year. All the signs pint to a hard winter."

There was silence for a moment. My hostess poked the fire, brushed some ashes from the hearth and said thoughtfully: "They's a heap of people that thinks that aged folks lives in the past and don't want to see new things come about. But it all depends upon the person. Some of the biggest howlers fer them good old days that people love to take on about is youngish people. They don't know why they howl, but they jist do. When things go wrong, it's plumb the fashion to blame the times fer it, and to hanker fer the days that's gone—and a heap of people would ruther be dead than out of fashion. Why, I can remember hearin' my great-grandfather beratin' the times he was livin' in and pinin' fer the days that was gone. People has always done it. But I'm shore glad that I ain't that a-way myself.



The Oldest Inhabitant.

"But what I'm aimin' to tell you is that that feller frum the city had dinner here today. I don't reckon you've run across him. He's the one that's jist a-ridin' around fer his health (a-lookin' at timber land and a-talkin' his head off). I heard all about him and I shore laid a trap fer him. I wasn't goin' to let him git away with all the argyment on his side like he has been a-doin' around here. They's a heap of us in this settlement that believes like you do, and this feller, he just cain't stand it. Seems like he ain't happy unless he puts a little drap of pizen here and a little drap there, tryin' to undo it all. He happened in about 11 o'clock and as it was a right smart piece to the next house he was willin' enough to stay fer dinner.

" 'Grandma,' he says, helpin' hisself to the third piece of chicken, 'I don't reckon you take any stock in this here worman sufferage that is goin' the rounds in these parts.'

" 'Why not?' I asks.

" 'Well,' he says, 'wouldn't you ruther have the times like they was when you was young? Don't you long fer the old days?'

" 'Young feller,' I says, 'I ain't makin' the days and I ain't responsible fer the time passin' ner fer things changin'. It's jist the nature of things that they must be changin' all the time. I don't want the old days back agin. They wouldn't fit. And besides, they wasn't nigh so good in a heap of ways as the ones we've got now. They was jist different. That's all. Jist different. And if a person goes along with things as they come and don't try to draw theirselves up in a shell, they ain't goin' to lay awake nights wishin' the world would move back a peg.'

" 'But,' he says, tryin' to sigh. 'It shore makes me sad to see women tryin' to imitate men.'

" 'In Chiny,' I says, 'a woman is accused of tryin' to imitate men if she jist wants the use of her natural feet. In Turkey they air accused of it if they go without a veil. And I can remember when women right in this State, was accused of tryin' to be like men if they wanted to go to college.'

"One could see at a glance that he was a man of the city."

" 'But,' he says, 'women won't vote if they git a chance,' he says. 'And if they won't use it, they ortn't to have it,' he says.

"I jist happened to remember a few things I had read in the papers and I says to him: 'What air you a-goin' to do with the men that won't vote? Will you take the vote away frum 'em?'

" 'They ain't many that don't,' he says.

" 'In your own city,' I says, 'they is about 150,000 men that can vote if they want to, and they's about 40,000 that don't. And not so very long ago they was a special election that ort to have brung out all the voters they was, but they was only about 70,000 that took the trouble to go to the polls.'

"He drawed in his horns a mite at bein' answered back, it bein' his habit not to give anybody a chance to argy with him.

" 'But you see, grandma,' he says, 'all the women don't want to vote, and I ain't the kind to force somethin' upon 'em that they don't want.'

"He looked out to where his hoss was pickin' clover, and I could see that he was hankerin' to be gittin' along, but I knowed he wasn't goin' to leave that pile of fried chicken jist yit. I was calculatin' on that when I fried it. That was the trap I set fer him—that plate of fried chicken. So I says right back: 'All the people ain't never wanted the same thing at the same time since the world commenced, and as long as it stands they never will. But as to whether the majority of the women wants the vote, the best proof is the way they take keer of it after they git it,' I says. 'It jist happens that I have childern livin' in states where women has voted a right smart while, and the fact that they vote as ginerally as the men and sometimes a little more so, is proof to a person with jist half a eye that they do want the vote, and wanted it all along, even when some of them thought they didn't. A hundred and fifty years ago,' I says, 'the big majority of people didn't keer nothin' about the American Revolution. It was jist a handful that was interested in independence. But see how they tuck to it when they once got it. And I can remember the time when a argyment that some people used agin doin' away with slavery was the fact that so many of the slaves objected to their own freedom. If the world was guided by the keerlessness of the great mass of people, it shore would slip back a cog or two ever few minutes,' I says.

" 'But women would be insulted at the polls,' he says. 'I shore don't want my women folks goin' to vote and bein' insulted at the polls,' he says.

"The back and gizzard and one leg was still on the dish and I knowed he wasn't going to leave 'em, so I says, sort of thinkin': 'Let's look into that matter a mite. That has been one of the biggest boogers they ever skeered up agin it, but my folks out in Coloraydo and Wyomin' ain't never been insulted fer votin' and they never knowed a woman that was, and it wouldn't be any different, I reckon, in this country. The men we see at the votin' places would be the same men we see at church and neighborhood gatherin's. Jist our neighbors and friends. But to hear some people talk, you would think that our neighbors and friends and husbands and brothers and sons is all of 'em changed at votin' times into some sort of ravenous beasts that jist go about seekin' whom they may devour. If you men jist knew how you was insultin' your own selves by sayin' sich as that, and how plumb foolish it makes you, you'd shore quit it.'

" 'I'm boss in my own house,' he says, all swellin' up, 'and I don't want my women folks votin'.

"The gizzard was still on the platter, so I lit into him agin:

" 'When I hear a man braggin' like that,' I says, 'I know right straight that he is either skeered to death of his wife or that he is jealous 'cause she is smarter than he is.'

" 'Well,' he says, gittin' insultin', 'they may be a few Rubes that'll vote fer it, but you won't never git it frum the men of the city.'

" 'You must be awful mad,' I says, 'to make sich a remark, but I reckon you're talkin' about country people. They're jist too independent to suit you. Their jobs don't depend upon the way they vote,' I says. 'All bosses look alike to them. The pigs and calves go right on growin' in spite of 'em, and when election day comes they go to the polls as free American citizens and vote like men havin' opinions of their own and not afeerd to live up to 'em. And the big things of life is always brung about by the people that ain't afeerd.'

" 'I ain't in the habit,' he says, 'of lettin' anybody answer back or argue with me,' he says. 'But it don't make no difference what you say. My mind is made up and I never change it.'

" 'Some people ain't got no mind to change,' I says right back, 'and, of course, in a sad case like that, they ain't expected to change it.' "

A familiar whinney out at the barn broke into the satisfied silence that fell upon us. I went to the door. "La Belle," I said, "don't stay awake any longer thinking about it. He's been downed in the argument."

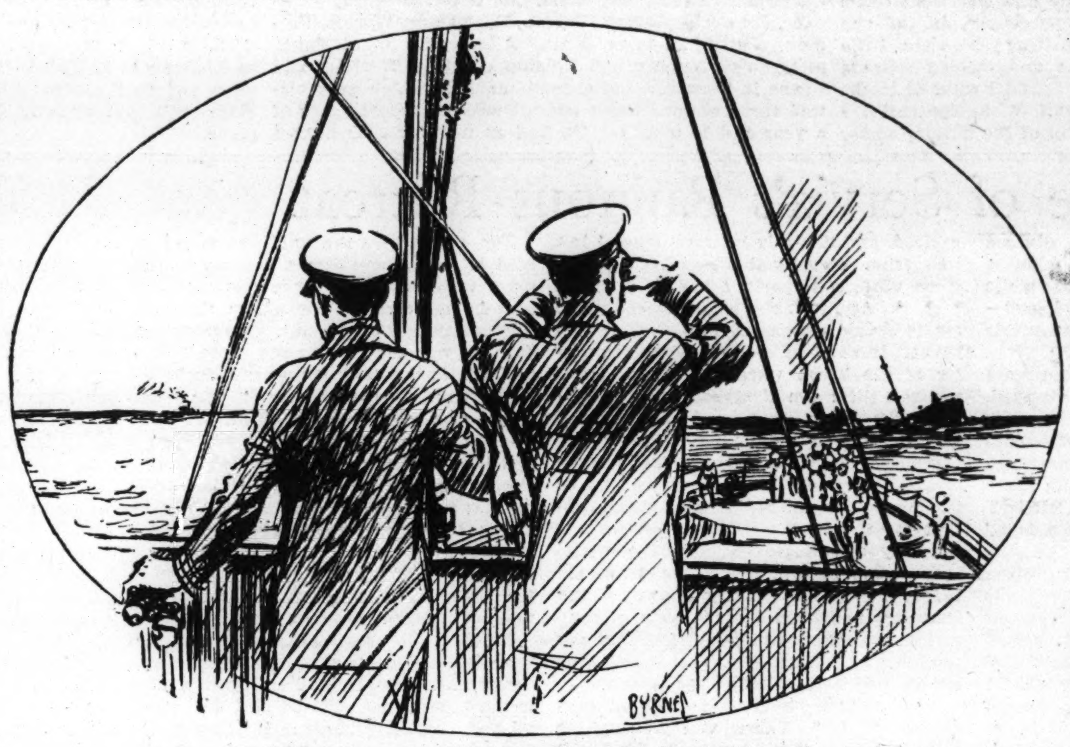
The Englishmen on the "Krefeld" heard our firing and decided that we were in action. In their agitation, they began to cause trouble. The next day the Captain had this case investigated. It appeared, however, to have been entirely harmless.

From the Argentine newspapers which we found on board the last two steamers we discovered that Admiral Craddock had taken the "Good Hope" with him to the southward and had therefore shifted his flag. The "Good Hope," "Monmouth" and "Glasgow" had remained in Montevideo for several days and celebrated, just as they would have done during peace. Craddock and his Flag Lieutenant, Cumming, were pictured as heroes in all the newspapers. But there is no use in grumbling over the unfriendly action of the neutral Uruguayians.

8 OCTOBER. The first rays of the rising sun had barely begun to paint the Eastern heavens red when another steamer was sighted. She set her flag at once, but soon hauled it down again when she recognized us. But we did not have to see her flag to recognize the colors of her smokepipe—blue funnel, with black top and a broad white band—as belonging to one of the English steamers of the firm of Lamport & Holt of Liverpool. We were close aboard her by 7 o'clock. On her stern was the proud name "Cervantes."

The signal of the prize officer told us the following: "4500 tons of cargo, fodder, sugar, hides and wool. The steamer came from South America and is heading for Liverpool. The crew consists of 43 men, practically all of whom are English, including four passengers from Punta Arenas and Rio Grande do Sul." These four were something new and were thankfully received as a welcome diversion.

After these 47 were received by their compatriots and fellow sufferers in captivity on the "Krefeld"—the transshipment was accomplished very quickly this time, because they had all previously packed their clothes—the prize officer went ahead with the blowing up. He had devised a new scheme (the memory of "Bowes Castle" still rankled!); the bombs were secured outboard below the water line. We all anxiously awaited the result, and this time we were not disappointed. The explosion tore a great hole in her. The steamer sank very rapidly. About noon she painfully rose up out of the water for the last time, and then shot, stern first, down into the depths.



"The steamer 'Lynrowan' sank about 3 p. m."

There were now about 300 involuntary guests aboard the steamer "Krefeld." The Captain decided it was time to send these unnecessary eaters away. He therefore called Capt. Visth aboard for a conference. A natural harbor, not too near, had to be chosen for their landing. The Captain decided on Tenerifa as being the best suited for the purpose.

In order to get an idea of the "chaos of races" on the "Krefeld," attention is invited to the following summary. On the 11 steamers captured since 1 September (excluding "Bowes Castle") there were:

Englishmen, 205 (of whom two were women); 8 Finns, 7 Russians, 1 Belgian, 2 Frenchmen; total of 223 citizens of enemy countries.

Chinese, 107; 22 Spaniards, 10 Hollanders, 13 Swedes, 4 Americans, 2 Italians, 3 Chileans, 4 Norwegians, 1 Dane, 3 Swiss, 2 Mexicans, 1 Ecuadorian, 1 Cuban, 1 Greek, 1 Arab (Mohammedan); total of 175 citizens of neutral countries.

All told, there were, therefore, 20 different nationalities!

But before the steamer was released another addition arrived. About 11 p. m. the lights of a steamer hove in sight and we brought her to with a blank shot about midnight. In answer to our question she signaled back " 'Pruth' of London."

She had 2300 tons of barley and 3800 tons of saltpeter from Chile and was proceeding to St. Vincent under charter.

We intended to sink the steamer the next day. After sending a watch crew aboard her she remained stopped close to us.

9 OCTOBER. Early in the morning the crew of the "Pruth" was transferred and then the vessel was sunk. She sank about 10 o'clock.

Shortly after noon we stopped the Spanish mail steamer "Cadiz." Her decks swarmed with passngers, and, of course, they all ran to the side towards us in order to stare at us, thereby giving the large steamer a heavy list.

Those passengers capable of judging such things must have wondered concerning the appearance of our ship. The results of the constant coaling could not be erased entirely. There was only one thing as immaculately white as it was during peace times, and that was our flag.

They could not help being astonished over the appearance of our cutter's crew. They thought we were approaching starvation. But that was not the way our men looked. The excellent, sufficient and ever-fresh supplies of our prizes agreed with them remarkably well. The sun had burned them a reddish brown. They looked like Indians. We could have used them as medical advertisements. The cutter's crew were not exceptions to the general rule. The all-around physical condition of the men was very good. Had it not been it would have been impossible for them to have stood the strenuous work of coaling and hoisting cargo out of steamers in this glowing heat. Naturally, the firemen suffered most from the effects of the heat. Therefore they did not appear to be so robust and full of strength and health as did the seamen. But even among them there were none seriously ill.

The steamer "Cadiz" was released very soon and then showed her gratitude by a vigorous blowing of the steam whistle, which we answered with pleasure. In addition we sent her a flag signal: "Pleasant trip."

10 OCTOBER. During the early morning hours we again stopped and released a neutral steamer. This time it was a Norwegian named "Bergenhaus."

The time had come again when we had to plan on filling up our coal bunkers. We headed for the rendezvous of the "Asuncion" and "Farn."

Our most successful week lay behind us. Our last coaling on 1 October had certainly paid for itself. Since 5 October we had captured a steamer each day.

TAKING LEAVE.

11 OCTOBER. About 3 o'clock the following afternoon, as the "KARLSRUHE" approached the place where the "Asuncion" waited, the lookout reported three steamers ahead. He was scolded for not being able to count up to three. He refused to change his opinion and soon we, on the bridge, could make out six mastheads that were soon followed over the horizon by three vessels. One was running away at high speed. The others remained quietly lying where they were. At the same time our radio operator reported that the "Asuncion" was yelling for help as she was being chased by an enemy ship. The running steamer, therefore, could not be other than the "Asuncion." We quieted her and soon thereafter she appeared over the horizon.

Meantime the "KARLSRUHE" had increased her speed and was rapidly approaching the other two steamers. One of them hoisted the German flag. That was the "Farn!" The other pulled and hauled on the English flag. We had to laugh!

Capt. Lubinus then told us the following story: Shortly before the "KARLSRUHE" came in sight a steamer appeared at the rendezvous flying the English flag. Thereupon Lubinus hoisted the English flag on the "Farn." The Englishman hoisted his signal number, " 'Condor' of London," and asked the "Farn" for her name and destination, which he quickly gave. Then there followed a long series of flag signals asking if the "Farn" had any war news, whether she knew anything of the English men-o'-war, etc.

When the conversation was getting irksome the "KARLSRUHE" appeared over the horizon. The Englishman and the "Asuncion" had taken us for a British cruiser. The latter then took to her heels, but the Britisher did not move. The "Farn" then did likewise, as she had recognized us.

We could not ask for a more delightful way of capturing a steamer!

The "Condor" was an ugly ship, with a poisonous-green smokepipe. But we looked at her with different eyes when we learned what she carried—merchandise, especially provisions, dynamite and 150 tons of lubricating oil. She came from New York and was bound for Chile. The Captain had been warned of us and had navigated very cautiously. He had made a great sweep to the eastward of the West Indies and carefully avoided all commercial lanes. He certainly did have rotten luck!

We were especially pleased with the lubricating oil, which we could use very nicely as fuel oil. And the provisions also came in very handy, because our own stock, as well as that of our auxiliary, was getting low. The dynamite bombs were a welcome addition to our explosive bombs, which we used for sinking steamers, only a few remaining on hand at that time.

The steamer was therefore captured and all the boats we had were used to unload her. That was not easy and it took a longer time than we had expected, because the oil barrels were on top of the other cargo and had to be hoisted out of the way first. Included in the cargo was a quantity of large window panes. Fortunately, we did not have to handle these carefully or there would have been no end to the work.

The crew of this steamer was also wished on the "Krefeld." Among them were five Germans, who were enlisted in our service.

12-13 OCTOBER. The unloading of the prize lasted the entire following day and the day after that.

After generously providing the "Krefeld" with all the provisions possible, she was finally scheduled to be released on 13 October. In the course of the afternoon an officer of the steamer came aboard as representative of the English Captains and their steamers' crews. He thanked our Captain in their name for all the favors and the consideration shown them, both when alongside the cruiser and when aboard the accompanying ship. The Captains would not fail to make reports to their Governments about this.

At 4 p. m. the "Krefeld" started for Santa Cruz de Tenerifa, where she should not arrive prior to 22 October. To celebrate the leave-taking she hoisted an especially large flag and then made a turn around H. M. S. "KARLSRUHE" and the other steamers. We had our band on deck and played the piece that is usually played when German seamen part from each other: "Musz i' denn, musz i' denn zum Staedtle hinaus." * * * (Translator's note: This is not pure German. Literally translated: "Must I then, must I then, go away from the village?") And then the steamer that had shared our joys and sorrows for a month and a half slowly disappeared from sight. She took our mail with her. After two months our relatives might now get some word from us for the first time.

About 10 p. m. we had finished transshipping the oil from the "Condor." We could not blow the ship up because of her dynamite cargo. So we had to content ourselves with opening her valves and breaking-in her side ports. This last precaution hastened the sinking very much. At each roll great quantities of water streamed through these ports into the hull of the ship until finally the ports reached the level of the water. And then the steamer ended the struggle in a very few minutes.

The "Rio Negro" was detailed to await the finish. The "KARLSRUHE" and the "Farn" had started off to coal.

14 OCTOBER. While on the way we lighted our oil-burning boiler, in order to test the mixture of lubricating oil and petroleum. The result was, on the whole, very pleasing.

15-16 OCTOBER. Not since the beginning of the war was the "KARLSRUHE" so well provided with fuel as she was on 16 October, when, having finished our coaling, we set off to waylay some more steamers. We had 180 tons of fuel oil and 1500 tons of coal on board, of which 1100 tons was the best Cardiff coal. This entire load of fuel came from our prizes. The supplies brought along by our steamers had hardly been touched.

17 OCTOBER. When we met the "Rio Negro" the next day her Captain reported that hardly 10 minutes after the "Condor" sank two extremely heavy explosions took place. The steamer must have been down to a considerable depth by that time. The concussion was so strong on the "Rio Negro," even though she was several miles away from the sunken steamer, that the compass cards jumped from their spindles.

Soon we met the "Asuncion." The steamer had discovered the surprising but pleasing news that the fortress of Antwerp had fallen. This must have been a heavy blow to England. All the newspapers had said that Antwerp could not possibly be taken, so now they could not minimize the importance of this victory. In spite of that, however, the English did try to do this, as we discovered later on.

18 OCTOBER. We had just reached our old place to the northward of the Island Fernando Noronha when the lookout reported a vessel in sight. We caught up with her in an hour. It was the English steamer "Glanton" of London.

"Three thousand seven hundred tons of coal from Cardiff for Montevideo for the firm Wilson & Sons, crew English," read the signal from the prize officer. "Steamer is captured; prepare to sink her," was the prompt reply of our Captain. We did not need the coal at this time and we had no men to spare to man the steamer.

The "Rio Negro" succeeded to the duties of the "Krefeld" and took the crew and all the provisions of the prize on board.

As the "Glanton" was rising from the sea for the last time and then disappearing to the never-to-be-seen-again regions, a second steamer was sighted and the chase began at once. But it was the Dutch steamer "Zaanland" from Amsterdam. We had no reasons for doubting her movements or appearance. The Captain permitted her to proceed without even stopping her. The same thing happened to an Italian that we saw late that evening.

19-22 OCTOBER. Although we had met three steamers on this day, the next three days passed without any success at all. The "Rio Negro" and "KARLSRUHE" drifted around, engines stopped, hunting the horizon until our eyes got tired.

On 22 October, in honor of the birthday of our Empress, we celebrated by having "Sunday routine." After a short religious service the Captain addressed the crew. He eulogized this imperial lady, mother of her country, and her devotion as leader of the Red Cross, setting a wonderful example to all German women. He reminded them also of the fact that she was a real German mother that had the same worries as other mothers had in that she had six sons and one son-in-law, all of whom were in the field. Three spirited and heartfelt "hurra's" thundered over the deep blue depths below the Equator in honor of our Empress and the imperial family.

On this day the result of our deeds would be spread from Tenerifa to our homes and to the entire world! Each one thought he had to remind the others of this fact.

We waited the whole day hoping for an Empress' birthday prize. When, about 10 p. m., we sighted the lights of a steamer we thought our hopes had been fulfilled at the last hour. But the vessel was found to be the Swedish steamer "Atlant" of Gothenburg that was heading to the southward. We had to let her proceed and did it without even stopping her.

23 OCTOBER. As a reward for our unsuccessful chase, the next day brought us the English steamer "Hurstdale" from Liverpool, with 4600 tons of corn, bound from Rosario to Bristol. She made little work for us. Just as she was half sunk and making her last efforts to resist her doom, another steamer was reported, but this time it was a Swede. She was the "Annie Johnson" of Gothenburg. We stopped her, but set her free immediately.

.: THE REAL KAISER, AS REVEALED BY A .: LADY-IN-WAITING TO THE GERMAN EMPRESS

Continually harassed by his withered arm and other shortcomings, he conceals his feelings by a clever affectation, she declares, in a book on the private lives of Wilhelm and his consort—The precautions he takes against illness are laughable; he delights in telling and hearing risque stories, and he is so obsessed by a mania for travel that he used to spend the night in a sleeping car, though he had no place to go.

THESE close-up impressions of the real Kaiser, taken from the diaries and letters of Ursula, Countess von Eppinghoven, long Lady-in-Waiting to the German Empress, and published by Henry Fischer in his book, "Private Lives of Kaiser Wilhelm II and his consort" (Fred de Fau & Co., New York), from which the following extracts are taken, are as unique and startling as they are timely. If the world had seen the Kaiser as this woman saw him, there might have been no Hohenzollernism and no war. But for a generation the world hesitated between taking Wilhelm as a genius, a nuisance or a joke. Furthermore, this is the man who now expects the world to discuss peace politely with him around a council table.

WILLIAM was born a la bourgeoise, and quite economically, a midwife receiving him and a court physician, assisted by the then highly-reputed Berlin specialist for women's diseases, the late Dr. Martin, looking gravely on, after the manner of his kind.

In this case, Fraulein Stahl acted as sage-femme; she is now a motherly woman and still continues her visits to the palace; so I often had occasion to talk with her about the great event of her life. "What about the deformed hand and arm?" I asked her once.

"That was discovered only the third or fourth day after," she replied. "At first we were all so busy putting life into the Prince, and keeping it in him, that no one thought of examining his limbs. * * * But at last it was noticed that the child could not move his left arm; an investigation showed that the elbow joint was dislocated. That is nothing serious in a healthy child. But in the case of Prince William, the surrounding soft parts were so injured and the muscles attached were in such condition, that no one dared attempt to set the bone then and there, as should be done in all cases."

Fraulein Stahl has often reiterated the above in the course of our long official acquaintance, and has always concluded her remarks with the statement: "The present condition of the Kaiser's arm is attributed to a mistake made by those officiating at the accouchment; but my own opinion has always been that the child's left forearm was not properly made up by nature, as indeed, his whole left side was weak, and is weak to this day.

"Besides, everyone in the palace knows that, though his walk is brisk, it is but his majesty's over-alert exertion that makes it so; if, at any time, the Kaiser ceased thinking of his shortcomings for only a moment, you would see his left leg drag. All his aches and pains, too, locate in his left ear and the whole left side of his head."

Whatever may have been the source of William II's disablement, the incubus is forever in his thoughts, and his apparent unmindfulness of the fact is a clever affectation. He wants others to forget that he is a cripple and therefore ignores his stigmata. "He who cannot dissimulate is unfit to reign," said Louis XI.

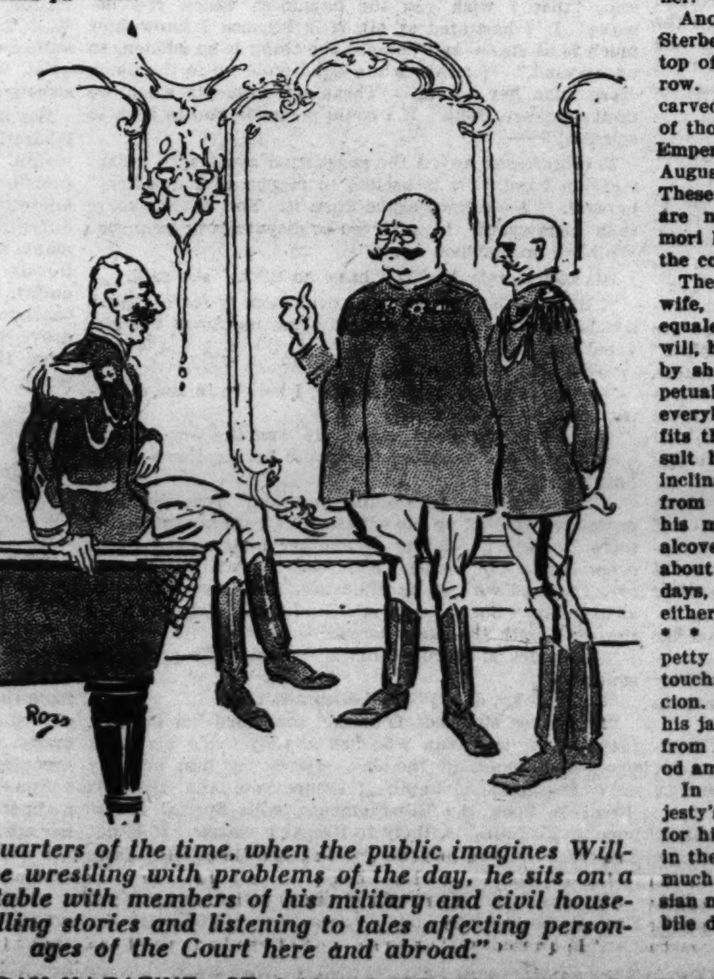
This fateful left arm of the Kaiser hugs closely to his body, allowing the hand, which is not deformed, but puny like a child's, to rest against his waist, or upon his hip if on horseback. Anyone following the German papers will probably remember that the official journals issue ballons d'essai from time to time to ascertain public sentiment in respect to the introduction of a belt for army officers, an article of accoutrement foreign to the Prussian uniform and out of harmony with its general style. As the Empress Eugenie re-established the crinoline in the sixties to hide her interesting condition, so William wants to change his military dress to find a convenient resting place for his left hand and arm, which, being about six inches shorter than the right, would attach to a belt unostentatiously. But the majority of officers feign to regard these oft-recurring proposals as maneuvers of mercenary army contractors, and treat them with fine scorn, so that William, unwilling to own his secret reason for the innovation sought for, must go without relief.

Those are gloomy days in the palace when the pros and cons of opinion on the subject are read by the Emperor, who, after carefully perusing the clippings, recognizes the repeated failure of his pet scheme. It puts him into the mood of smashing things, and his famous speech to the Brandenburgers on March 5, 1890, was made under just such circumstances.

Without exaggeration, it may be said that, next to the stricken man, the imperial valets, five of whom, with two wardrobemen and two kammardiener, are always on duty to dress, undress and reuniform their master, suffer most on account of his infirmity. "We would not mind the work in the least," I heard one of them say once, "would not care if the Emperor changed his uniform 10, instead of three or four, times a day. It's the fear of injuring his lame hand that makes us nervous and gradually wears away our usefulness. And besides, we must always be prepared to forestall the collapse of the all-highest master when he balances himself on his left leg, as is his wont sometimes, when he is in a hurry to put on a different pair of trousers."

I dare say very few people have a correct notion of the Emperor's height, for, as he is seldom seen without a helmet terminating in a point, the public is mystified, and even close observers are apt to be deceived. In the palace this question is never openly discussed, but I heard the Kaiserin tell the overinquisitive Prince Eitel Fritz once or twice that his father measured 5 feet 8 inches. That, I am sure, is a mistake; 5 feet 5 or 6 inches is the highest measure that even Adjutant Count Moltke, who has a very sure eye in such matters, gives him.

The numerous newspaper persons who talk glibly about the Kaiser's "cancerous" ear trouble have, I imagine, information on the point that is more or less inaccessible to those in daily attendance upon his majesty, for whether the dread malady, hereditary with the Hohenzollerns, has settled in that organ or not, is still an open question, even with William's own physician. Improbable it is not. * * * It was Louise of Strelitz who carried carcinoma into the Prussian camp. All Queen Louise's portraits are remarkable for a scarf the royal lady invariably wears under her chin. The scarf, it is said, was worn to conceal the marks of an operation necessitated by a swelling of the glands, but it is also true that in this very spot the cancer that killed her eventually developed. I have this information from descendants of old-time royal servants in the employ of the late Emperor William, Louise's last surviving son. The Queen died of the disease at Hoehnstiritz, her father's estate, in 1810.



"Three-quarters of the time, when the public imagines William to be wrestling with problems of the day, he sits on a billiard table with members of his military and civil households, telling stories and listening to tales affecting personages of the Court here and abroad."

With any knowledge of the Kaiser's peculiar predisposition to diseases of the throat, the care he exercises to guard against infection would seem quite proper, though excessively hard on others, had it not, in the course of years, become a mania. No one blamed his majesty for postponing the Wurtemburg maneuvers in the summer of 1893, when cholera was raging; but it is quite another thing when the Kaiser refuses to confer with state officials because some member of their families may be indisposed. * * * The Empress, who faithfully copies all her husband's fads, is as bad as he. * * * Members of the royal household not living in the palace can enjoy a holiday at any time by simply furnishing a doctor's certificate stating that somebody with whom they are domiciled in the city is ill. This applies to the Kaiser's Adjutant-Generals as well as to the Chamberlains, Equerries, Dames of the Palace, chasseurs, coachmen, cooks and scullions. More than once have I seen his majesty abruptly start away from a person with whom he happened to be conversing at a reception or a ball, leaving the unhappy lady or gentleman speechless and crushed, because of an innocent admission that a son or daughter, or perhaps an uncle, had the measles or a cold. At the very mention of the fact the war lord fled like a lion hearing a cock crow.

As every domestic arrangement in the palace is fashioned with a view to the preservation of the Kaiser's health, the doors and windows near the imperial bed are double screened by heavy portieres, summer and winter; for the faintest possibility of drafts is dreaded, and even the down quilts and blankets are so fashioned at the bottom and sides that their majesties must needs crawl into bed one leg at a time, there being only a breadth of about 20 inches left open. * * * The Hohenzollern household never enjoyed a reputation for more than superficial opulence, and the paucity of its linen has often been the subject of ill-natured comment at other courts. To be sure, Auguste Victoria has laid down a rule stipulating that the royal couch be furnished with clean linen every day in the year; but as there is only a limited stock to draw from it happens sometimes that only one clean sheet is available, and in that case the upper sheet of the two used on the previous night is taken for the under. Whenever that happens, her majesty is exceedingly anxious that the Kaiser should not find it out, for, as may well be imagined, such evidences of penury would jar on his notions of divine appointment. If one thinks himself little short of Deity, it is embarrassing to discover that one's linen chest affords only a single sheet at certain seasons.

Before the imperial couple retire, the household goes through a series of routine work. Above all, his majesty's nickel warming pan must be heated to the proper degree and placed at his, the right, side of the bed. That is done all the year round, except in July and August. Next, folding screens are so placed as to surround the bed on all sides. * * * For cases of emergency, a pair of long woolen stockings, white cloth knickerbockers, flannel-lined pea-jacket, soft hat and gloves must be placed ready on one corner of the lounge; that is at the foot of the bed, and a similar "accident toilet" is provided for her majesty.

Undressed is the Kaiser by two of his five valets in his chambre de toilette, from which he steps into the joint bedroom, attired in a single garment and bath slippers, the Empress going through her part of the performance in her own chamber. * * * While the imperial bedroom is remarkable for neither great splendor nor simplicity, it is not without psychological interest. There is the Emperor's table de nuit, for instance, whose upper drawer, at night always half open, contains a self-cocking revolver, fully loaded. "If Alexander of Bulgaria had slept with a six-shooter, he might have founded a dynasty and perhaps still be alive," is William's answer to his wife's pleas to discard the weapon, which alarms her.

Another gruesome object in the room is the so-called Sterbekommode, an old mahogany chest of drawers, the top of which is loaded with emblems of death and sorrow. In the center stands a large engraving, in a brown, carved frame, representing Our Saviour with the crown of thorns, while at the sides are placed portraits of the Emperor William I and Frederick III, of the late Empress Auguste and Ludwig of Bavaria, all clad in shrouds. These pictures were made especially for his majesty, and are not procurable anywhere. The morbid memento mori has to be set up in every imperial residence where the court stops for any length of time.

The Kaiser is a good husband, and is adored by his wife, though Auguste Victoria's love for him is only equaled by her fear. William forever enforcing his own will, his notions, his idiosyncrasies and downright crazes by sheer force of sublime egomania; the Kaiserin perpetually in a flutter to carry out his demands and make everybody else dance to the imperial piper's tune; that fits the case exactly. Only in one respect does he consult her majesty's wishes without regard to his own inclination; namely, by hardly ever absenting himself from the marriage bed when at home. * * * Even his majesty's terror of disease capitulates before the alcove. * * * In the course of a year he is at home about 100 days. Whether he is away for a couple of days, a week or a month, he never writes to the Kaiserin, either directly or in answer to letters received from her. * * * But at the same time, ignorance of any of the petty information she forwards him by every mail with touching regularity might cause vexation and suspicion. So the Emperor diversifies the return trips from his jaunts by carefully studying all the missives received from Auguste Victoria day by day—not an original method among husbands, I surmise.

In a small alcove opposite the windows of his majesty's dressing room stands a single brass bedstead for his afternoon naps. On the right of the alcove, built in the wall, a closet contains the Kaiser's body linen, not much of it. All the historical half dozen shirts a Prussian monarch or Prince is entitled to are there, but, mirabile dictu, the article is innocent of cuffs, a commodity

"You have come to a wise decision," he said.

"You will surely go in and see Mrs. Esdaile," she repeated, glancing up at him with eyes which had in them something between a challenge and a caress.

"I did not come to see Mrs. Esdaile," he answered, with no relaxation of his cold and grave manner; "I came to see you."

"I am sure I should be highly honored," she said, with just the slightest little touch of brogue in her accent. "What are the students to do without their Professor?"

"I have already completed my academical duties. Take my arm, and we shall walk in the sunshine. Surely we cannot wonder that Eastern people should have made a deity of the sun. It is the great beneficent force of nature—man's ally against cold, sterility, and all that is abhorrent to him. What were you reading?"

"Beale's 'Matter and Life.'"

The professor raised his thick eyebrows. "Beale!" he said, and then again in a kind of whisper, "Beale!"

"You differ from him?" she asked.

"It is not I who differ from him. I am only a monad—a thing of no moment. The whole tendency of the highest plane of modern thought differs from him. He defends the indefensible. He is an excellent observer, but a feeble reasoner. I should not recommend you to found your conclusions upon 'Beale.'"

"I must read 'Nature's Chronicle' to counteract his pernicious influence," said Mrs. O'James, with a soft, cooing laugh. "Nature's Chronicle" was one of the many books in which Prof. Ainslie Grey had enforced the negative doctrines of scientific agnosticism.

"It is a faulty work," he said; "I cannot recommend it. I would rather refer you to the standard writings of some of my older and more eloquent colleagues."

There was a pause in their talk as they paced up and down on the green, velvet-like lawn.

"Have you thought at all," he asked at last, "of the matter upon which I spoke to you last night?"

"I would not hurry you unduly," he continued. "I know that it is a matter which can scarcely be decided off-hand. In my own case it cost me some thought before I ventured to make the suggestion. I am not an emotional man, but I am conscious in your presence of the great evolutionary instinct which makes either sex the complement of the other."

"You believe in love, then?" she asked, with a twinkling, upward glance.

"I am forced to."

"And yet you can deny the soul?"

"How far these questions are psychic, and how far material, is still sub justice," said the professor, with an air of toleration. "Protoplasm may prove to be the physical basis of love, as well as of life."

"How inflexible you are!" she exclaimed; "you would draw love down to the level of physics."

"Or draw physics up to the level of love."

"Come, that is much better," she cried, with her sympathetic laugh. "That is really very pretty, and puts science in quite a delightful light." Her eyes sparkled, and she tossed her chin with the pretty, willful air of a woman who is mistress of the situation.

"I have reason to believe," said the Professor, "that my position here will prove to be only a stepping-stone to some wider scene of scientific activity. Yet, even here, my chair brings me in some 1500 pounds a year, which is supplemented by a few hundreds from my books. I should therefore be in a position to provide you with those comforts to which you are accustomed. So much for my pecuniary position. As to my constitution, it has always been sound. I have never suffered from any illness in my life save fleeting attacks of cephalagia, the result of too prolonged a stimulation of the centers of cerebration. My father and mother had no sign of any morbid diathesis, but I will not conceal from you that my grandfather was afflicted with podagra."

Mrs. O'James looked startled. "Is that very serious?" she asked.

"It is gout," said the professor.

"Oh, is that all? It sounded much worse than that."

"It is a grave taint, but I trust that I shall not be a victim to atavism. I have laid these facts before you because they are factors which cannot be overlooked in forming your decision. May I ask now whether you see your way to accepting my proposal?" He paused in his walk, and looked earnestly down at her.

A struggle was evidently going on in her mind. Her eyes were cast down, her little slipper tapped the lawn, and her fingers played nervously with her chatelain. Suddenly, with a sharp, quick gesture which had in it something of abandon and recklessness, she held out her hand to her companion.

"I accept," she said.

They were standing under the shadow of the hawthorn. He stooped gravely down, and kissed her glove-covered fingers.

"I trust that you may never have cause to regret your decision," he said.

"I trust that you never may," she cried, with a heaving breast. There were tears in her eyes, and her lips twitched with some strong emotion.

"Come into the sunshine again," said he. "It is the great restorative. Your nerves are shaken. Some little congestion of the medulla and pons. It is always instructive to reduce psychic or emotional conditions to their physical equivalents. You feel that your anchor is still firm in a bottom of ascertained fact."

"Romance is the offspring of imagination and of ignorance. Where science throws her calm, clear light, there is, happily, no room for romance."

"But is not love romance?" she asked.

"Not at all. Love has been taken away from the poets, and has been brought within the domain of true science. It may prove to be one of the great cosmic elementary forces. When the atom of hydrogen draws the atom of chlorine toward it to form the perfected molecule of hydrochloric acid, the force which it exerts may be intrinsically similar to that which draws me to you. Attraction and repulsion appear to be the primary forces. This is attraction."

"And here is repulsion," said Mrs. O'James, as a stout, florid lady came sweeping across the lawn in their direction. "So glad you have come out, Mrs. Esdaile! Here is Prof. Grey."

"How do you do, Professor?" said the lady, with some little pomposity of manner. "You were very wise to stay out here on so lovely a day. Is it not heavenly?"

"It is certainly very fine weather," the professor answered.

"Listen to the wind sighing in the trees!" cried Mrs. Esdaile, holding up one finger. "It is nature's lullaby. Could you not imagine it, Prof. Grey, to be the whisperings of angels?"

"The idea had not occurred to me, madam."

"Ah, Professor, I have always the same complaint against you. A want of rapport with the deeper meanings of nature. Shall I say a want of imagination? You do not feel an emotional thrill at the singing of that thrush?"

"I confess that I am not conscious of one, Mrs. Esdaile."

"Chlorophyll," murmured the Professor.

"Science is so hopelessly prosaic. It dissects and labels and loses sight of the great things in its attention to the little ones. You have a poor opinion of woman's intellect, Prof. Grey. I think that I have heard you say so!"

"It is a question avoirdupois," said the Professor, closing his eyes and shrugging his shoulders. "The female cerebrum averages two ounces less in weight than the male. No doubt there are exceptions. Nature is always elastic."

"But the heaviest thing is not always the strongest," said Mrs. O'James laughing. "Isn't there a law of compensation in science? May we not hope to make up in quality for what we lack in quantity?"

"I think not," remarked the Professor, gravely. "But there is your luncheon gong. No, thank you, Mrs. Esdaile, I cannot stay. My carriage is waiting. Good-by. Good-by, Mrs. O'James." He raised his hat and stalked slowly away among the laurel bushes.

"He has no taste," said Mrs. Esdaile—"no eye for beauty."

"On the contrary," Mrs. O'James answered, with a saucy little jerk of the chin. "He has just asked me to be his wife."

II.

As Prof. Ainslie Grey ascended the steps of his house, the hall door opened and a dapper gentleman stepped briskly out. He was somewhat sallow in the face, with beady black eyes and a short black beard with an aggressive bristle. Thought and work had left their traces upon his face, but he moved with the brisk activity of a man who had not yet bade good-by to his youth.

"I'm in luck's way," he cried. "I wanted to see you."

"Then come back into the library," said the Professor. "You must stay and have lunch with us."

The two men entered the hall, and the Professor led the way into his private sanctum. He motioned his companion into an armchair.

"I trust that you have been successful, O'Brien," said he. "I should be loath to exercise any undue pressure upon my sister Ada; but I have given her to understand that there is no one whom I should prefer for a brother-in-law to my most brilliant scholar, the author of 'Some Remarks Upon the Bile-Pigments, With Special Reference to Urobilin.'"

"You are very kind, Prof. Grey—you have always been very kind," said the doctor. "I approached Miss Grey upon the subject; she did not say No."

"She said Yes, then?"

"No; she proposed to leave the matter open until my return from Edinburg. I go today, as you know, and I hope to commence my research tomorrow."

"On the comparative anatomy of the vermiform appendix, by James McMurdo O'Brien," said the professor, sonorously. "It is a glorious subject—a subject which lies at the very root of evolutionary philosophy."

"Ah! she is the dearest girl," cried O'Brien, with a sudden little spurt of Celtic enthusiasm—"she is the soul of truth and of honor."

"The vermiform appendix"— began the Professor.

"She is an angel from heaven," interrupted the other. "I fear that it is my advocacy of scientific freedom in religious thought which stands in my way with her."

"You must not truckle upon that point. You must be true to your convictions; let there be no compromise there."

"My reason is true to agnosticism, and yet I am conscious of a voida vacuum. I had feelings at the old church at home, between the scent of the incense and the roll of the organ, such as I have never experienced in the laboratory or the lecture room."

"Sensuous—purely sensuous," said the Professor, rubbing his chin. "Vague hereditary tendencies, stirred into life by the stimulation of the nasal and auditory nerves."

"Maybe so, maybe so," the younger man answered thoughtfully. "But this was not what I wished to speak to you about. Before I enter your family, your sister and you have a claim to know all that I can tell you about my career. Of my worldly prospects I have already spoken to you. There is only one point which I have omitted to mention. I am a widower."

"I married shortly after my arrival in Australia. Miss Thurston was her name. I met her in society. It was a most unhappy match."

Some painful emotion possessed him. His quick, expressive features quivered, and his white hands tightened upon the arms of the chair. The Professor turned away towards the window. "You are the best judge," he remarked, "but I should not think that it was necessary to go into details."

"You have a right to know everything—you and Miss Grey. It is not a matter on which I can well speak to her direct. Poor Jinny was the best of women, but she was open to flattery, and she was liable to be misled by designing persons. She was untrue to me, Grey. It is a hard thing to say of the dead, but she was untrue to me. She fled to Auckland with a man whom she had known before her marriage. The brig which carried them foundered and not a soul was saved."

A Physiologist's Wife

By A. CONAN DOYLE

PROF. AINSLIE GREY had not come down at the usual hour. The presentation chiming clock, which stood between the terra cotta busts of Claude Bernard and John Hunter upon the dining room mantelpiece had rung out the half hour and the three-quarters. Now its golden hand was verging upon the nine, and yet there was no sign of the master of the house.

It was an unprecedented occurrence. During the 12 years that she had kept house for him his younger sister had never known him a second behind his time. She sat now in front of the high silver coffee pot, uncertain whether to order the gong to be resounded or to wait on in silence. Either course might be a mistake. Her brother was not a man who permitted mistakes.

Miss Ada Grey was rather above the middle height, thin, with peering, puckered eyes and the rounded shoulders which mark the bookish woman. Her face was long and spare, flecked with color above the cheek bones, with a reasonable, thoughtful forehead, and a dash of absolute obstinacy in her thin lips and prominent chin. Snow-white cuffs and collar, with a plain dark dress, cut with almost Quaker-like simplicity, bespoke the primness of her taste. An ebony cross hung over her flattened chest. She sat very upright in her chair, listening with raised eyebrows and swinging her eyeglasses backward and forward with a nervous gesture which was peculiar to her.

Suddenly she gave a sharp, satisfied jerk of the head and began to pour out the coffee. From outside there came the dull thudding sound of heavy feet upon thick carpet. The door swung open, and the professor entered with a quick, nervous step. He nodded to his sister and, seating himself at the other side of the table, began to open the small pile of letters which lay beside his plate.

Prof. Ainslie Grey was at that time 43 years of age—nearly 12 years older than his sister. His career had been a brilliant one. At Edinburgh, at Cambridge and at Vienna he had laid the foundation of his great reputation, both in physiology and in zoology. His pamphlet, "On the Mesoblastic Origin of Excitomotor Nerve Roots," had won him his fellowship of the Royal Society, and his researches "Upon the Nature of Bathybrius, With Some Remarks Upon Lithrococci," had been translated into at least three European languages. He had been referred to by one of the greatest living authorities as being the very type and embodiment of all that was best in modern science. No wonder, then, that when the commercial city of Birchespool decided to create a medical school, they were only too glad to confer the chair of physiology upon Mr. Ainslie Grey. They valued him the more from the conviction that their class was only one step in his upward journey, and that the first vacancy would remove him to some more illustrious seat of learning.

In person he was not unlike his sister. The same eyes, the same contour, the same intellectual forehead. His lips, however, were firmer, and his long, thin lower jaw was sharper and more decided. He ran his finger and thumb down it from time to time as he glanced over his letters.

"Those maids are very noisy," he remarked, as a clack of tongues sounded in the distance.

"It is Sarah," said his sister. "I shall speak about it." She had handed over his coffee cup, and was sipping at her own, glancing furtively through her narrowed lids at the austere face of her brother.

"The first great advance of the human race," said the professor, "was when, by the development of their left frontal convolutions, they attained the power of speech. Their second advance was when they learned to control that power. Woman has not yet attained the second stage." He half closed his eyes as he spoke and thrust his chin forward, but as he ceased, he had a trick of suddenly opening both eyes very wide and staring sternly at his interlocutor.

"No, Ada; in many respects you approach the superior or male type."

The professor bowed over his egg with the manner of one who utters a courtly compliment; but the lady pouted, and gave an impatient little shrug of her shoulders.

"You were late this morning, John," she remarked, after a pause.

"Yes, Ada; I slept badly. Some little cerebral congestion, no doubt due to overstimulation of the centers of thought. I have been a little disturbed in my mind."

His sister stared across at him in undisguised astonishment. The professor's mental processes had hitherto been as regular as his habits. Twelve years' continual intercourse had taught her that he lived in a serene and rarified atmosphere of scientific calm, high above the petty emotions which affect humbler minds.

"You are surprised, Ada," he remarked. "Well, I cannot wonder at it. I should have been surprised myself if I had been told that I was so sensitive to vascular influences. For, after all, all disturbances are vascular if you probe them deep enough. I am thinking of getting married."

"Not Mrs. O'James?" cried Ada Grey, laying down her egg spoon.

"My dear, you have the feminine quality of receptivity very remarkably developed. Mrs. O'James is the lady in question."

"But you know so little of her. The Esdailes themselves know so little. She is really only an acquaintance, although she is staying at the Lindens. Would it not be wise to speak to Mrs. Esdaile first, John?"

"I do not think, Ada, that Mrs. Esdaile is at all likely to say anything which would materially affect my course of action. I have given the matter due consideration. The scientific mind is slow at arriving at conclusions, but, having once formed them, it is not prone to change. Matrimony is the natural condition of the human race, and indeed of all races, save those lower forms of life which preceded the differentiation of sex. I have, as you know, been so engaged in academical and other work that I have not had time to devote to merely personal questions. It is different now, and I see no valid reason why I should forego this opportunity of seeking a suitable helpmate."

"And are you engaged?"

"Hardly that, Ada. I ventured yesterday to indicate to the lady that I was prepared to submit to the common lot of humanity. I shall wait upon her after my morning lecture, and learn how far my proposals meet with her acquiescence. But you frown, Ada."

His sister started, and made an effort to conceal her expressions of annoyance. She even stammered out some words of congratulation, but a vacant look had come into her brother's eyes, and he was evidently not listening to her. "Frown," he muttered thoughtfully—"frown." Rising from the table, he turned over the pages of a thick volume which lay upon a desk in the window. Then, with a quick, nervous gesture, he drew down his left shirt cuff and wrote hurriedly across it. The memorandum was "Frown—what origin? Vide Darwin, 'Expression of Emotions'—drawing forward of occipito-frontalis." His sister waited patiently, for she was accustomed to see him dive down every scientific by-path which led out of the main track of conversation.

"I am sure, John," she said, when he had resumed his seat, "that I wish you the happiness which you deserve. If I hesitated at all, it is because I know how much is at stake, and because the thing is so sudden, so unexpected." Her thin white hand stole up to the black cross upon her bosom. "These are moments when we need guidance, John. If I could persuade you to turn to spiritual"——

The professor waved the suggestion away with a deprecating hand. "It is useless to reopen that question," he said. "We cannot argue upon it. You assume more than I can grant. I am forced to dispute your premises. We have no common basis."

"You believe in nothing."

"On the contrary, my dear Ada, I believe in the differentiation of protoplasm."

She shook her head sadly. It was the one subject upon which she ventured to dispute her brother's infallibility.

"This is rather beside the question," remarked the professor, folding up his napkin. "If I am not mistaken, there is some possibility of another matrimonial event occurring in the family. Eh, Ada? What!" His small eyes glittered with sly facetiousness as he shot a twinkle at his sister. She sat very stiff, and traced patterns upon the cloth with the sugar tongs.

"Dr. James McMurdo O'Brien"—— said the professor, sonorously.

"Don't, John, don't!" cried Miss Ada Grey.

"Dr. James McMurdo O'Brien," continued her brother, inexorably, "is a man who has already made his mark upon the science of the day. He is my first and my most distinguished pupil. I assure you, Ada, that his 'Remarks upon the Bile-Pigments, with Special Reference to Urobilin,' is likely to live as a classic. It is not too much to say that he has revolutionized our views about urobilin."

"Dr. James McMurdo O'Brien has, as you know, the offer of the physiological chair at Melbourne. He has been in Australia five years, and has a brilliant future before him. Today he leaves for Edinburgh, and in two months' time he goes out to assume his new duties. You know his feeling toward you. It rests with you as to whether he goes out alone. Speaking for myself, I cannot imagine any higher mission for a woman of culture than to go through life in the company of a man who is capable of such a research as that which Dr. James McMurdo O'Brien has brought to a successful conclusion."

"He has not spoken to me," said the lady.

"Ah, there are signs which are more subtle than speech," said her brother, wagging his head. "But you are pale. Your vasomotor system is excited. Your arterios have contracted." He scribbled again upon his cuff. "Let me entreat you to compose yourself. I think I hear the carriage. I fancy that you may have a visitor this morning, Ada. You will excuse me now." With a quick glance at the clock he strode off into the hall, and within a few minutes he was rattling in his quiet, well-appointed brougham through the brick-lined streets of Birchespool.

His lecture over, Prof. Ainslie Grey paid a visit to his laboratory, where he adjusted several scientific instruments, made a note as to the progress of these separate infusions of bacteria, cut half a dozen sections with a microtome, and finally resolved the difficulties of seven different gentlemen who were pursuing researches in as many separate lines of inquiry. Having thus conscientiously and methodically completed the routine of his duties, he returned to his carriage and ordered the coachman to drive him to the Lindens. His face as he drove was cold and impassive, but he drew his fingers from time to time down his prominent chin with a jerky, twitchy movement.

The Lindens was an old-fashioned, ivy-clad house, which had once been in the country, but was now caught in the long red-brick feelers of the growing city. It still stood back from the road in the privacy of its own grounds. A winding path, lined with laurel bushes, led to the arched and porticoed entrance. To the right was a lawn. Under the shadow of a hawthorn a lady sat in a garden chair, with a book in her hands. At the click of the gate she started, and the professor, catching sight of her, strode across the lawn in her direction.

"What! won't you go in and see Mrs. Esdaile?" she asked, sweeping out from under the shadow of the hawthorn. She was a small woman, strongly feminine, from the rich coils of her light-colored hair to the dainty garden slipper which peeped from under her cream-tinted dress. One tiny, well-gloved hand was outstretched in greeting, while the other pressed a thick, green-covered volume against her side. Her decision and quick, tactful manner bespoke the mature woman of the world; but her upraised face had preserved a girlish and even infantile expression of innocence in its large, fearless gray eyes, and sensitive, humorous mouth. Mrs. O'James was a widow, and she was two-and-thirty years of age; but neither fact could have been deduced from her appearance.

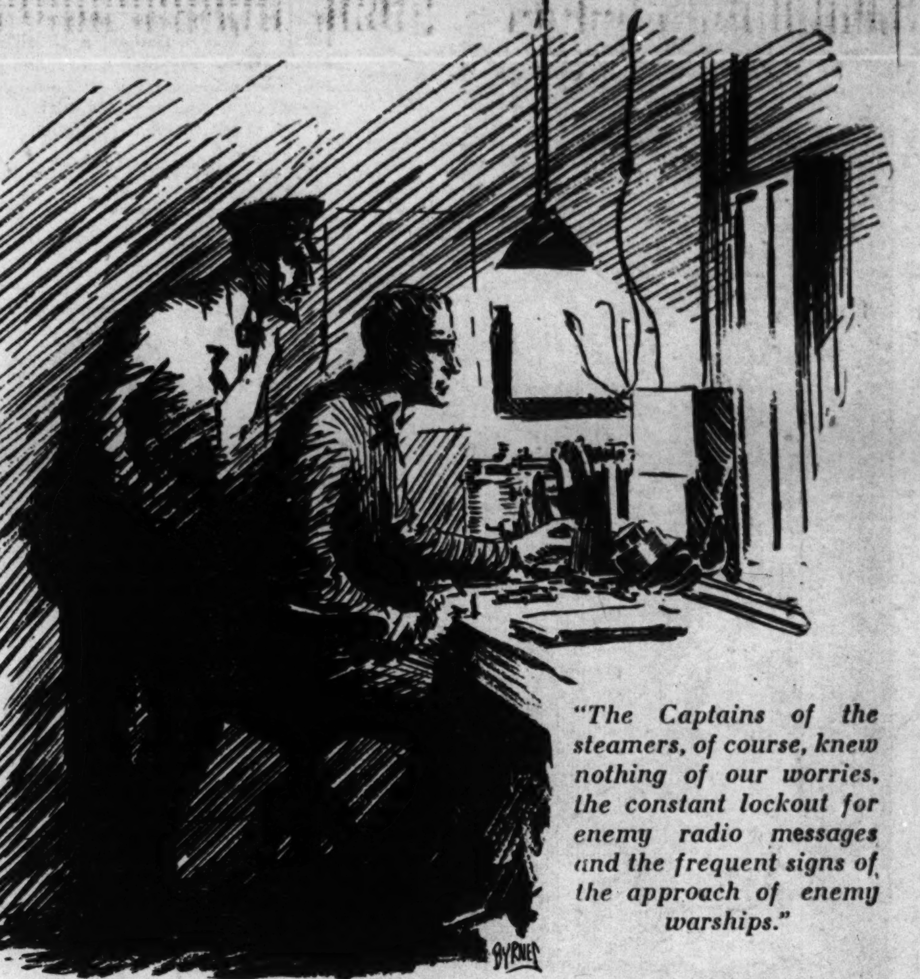
The Karlsruhe's Most Successful Week

A steamer a day for five days, was the record of the German commerce raider at the height of her career, and on one of her auxiliaries were 300 men of 20 different nationalities, sailors from the captured vessels—Frequently wireless messages warned the cruiser that British warships were near, but she always managed to keep out of their sight.



"The Captains of the steamers, of course, knew nothing of our worries, the constant lockout for enemy radio messages and the frequent signs of the approach of enemy warships."

As long as the quarter deck and the remainder of the main deck was covered with a deck load of coal, there remained only the poop to go to in order to get some fresh air, but even this was no good when the wind blew the coal dust around. As soon as the coal on the quarter deck was passed down to the bunkers, the after end of the main deck was thoroughly scrubbed down. Then we had a place "to promenade" and "to Muller" (evidently the Muller physical exercises), of which we were all in need. The Captain also enthusiastically joined us in these physical exercises.

After the evening meal the men would gather on the fo'csle, the officers on the bridge, and listen to the music. Our ship's band was gathered after much work before the ship left home. Their performances were better than those other ships' bands, barring the regularly organized Government bands.

Every Sunday the Captain held a short sermon on the quarter deck. The band then played on the after deck. Refreshments and cigarettes were also served to the men.

The steamers accompanying us were always invited to these concerts. On the "Krefeld" several hundred Englishmen, Frenchmen, Chinese, negroes, etc., etc., would crowd the rail on the side toward us, all listening to the strains of "Deutschland, Deutschland, Ueber Alles" and the "Watch on the Rhein," which were always sung as a finale. The repertoire of our band was very extensive. The latest opera hits were played as readily as the oldest Prussian ballads.

One day our men got up a real minstrel show on the fo'csle. There were plenty of comedians among them. Their efforts were rewarded by heavy salvos of laughter. One of the mates discovered that he possessed poetical talent and one day he showed this to an astonished but thankful audience.

And day after day the wonderful sun continued to shine down upon the endless, deep-blue surface as if there were nothing more peaceful than this poor earth. It is a pleasant feeling to wake up in the morning and know that the sun is shining!

The Captain would invite several of us to dine with him nearly every evening at dinner and, on Sunday, to lunch. Of course, the conversation soon got around to the political situation at home and from that it was not much of a jump to our relatives. Nobody knew anything definite about their own. The last letters were written at the end of June. This one had a father, that one a brother or brother-in-law in the field. But no one knew on which front they were serving. The Captain always drank a toast to the welfare of our loved ones at home.

OUR BEST WEEK.

28 SEPTEMBER. After completing her repairs, the "KARLSRUHE" proceeded to her coaling place. On the way we met the "Asuncion." She had emptied the "Strathroy" bunkers and then sank her. The "Strathroy" crew transferred to the "Krefeld."

29-30 SEPTEMBER. While coaling we received the joyful news that the fortress of Maubeuge had surrendered with 40,000 men, four Generals and 400 guns. We even received news of the "EMDEN" and were very pleased about her successful cruise.

1 OCTOBER. Loaded to the limit with coal, we started back to our region of operations on 1 October. The entire main deck and quarter deck were piled about 1 meter high with coal. The ship did not ride the high seas very well, vibrating as each large wave passed under her.

2 OCTOBER. The following day the "Asuncion" brought us a lot of important telegrams.

Our auxiliary cruiser "Kap Trafalgar" had been sunk. That was a sad message.

Our cruiser squadron was on its way to South America. The English cruisers "Good Hope," "Monmouth" and "Glasgow" had started to the southward. We were anxious to learn the result of the events that would soon take place off the west coast of Chile. In addition to those named above, three other English warships had rounded Cape Horn.

A great coal famine existed in Brazil. In the large cities only a limited amount of electric lighting was permitted. The trains had reduced their schedules. (We thoroughly understood the reason for this!) The Government had forbidden the export of coal. If, even in spite of this, the English ships left Brazilian harbors "loaded down with coal," then we knew how poorly the neutrality laws were being observed, which must not be ascribed entirely to the bad feelings of the Brazilians but mainly to the pressure which England exerted upon them.

3-5 OCTOBER. For two days we lay in wait without results. About noon of the third day the "Krefeld," that had been sent by the Captain several miles to the eastward, sent us the signal: "I have a steamer in sight."

The vessel was steaming to the eastward of the usual trade lane. Therefore she must not have a very clear conscience!

This time the chase lasted two hours. Therefore, our joy was all the greater when we received the report: The English steamer "Farn" has 7000 tons of the best Cardiff coal, bound for Montevideo from Barry. As the Chinese and German crew of the "Strathroy" had been relieved of their duties, this cargo saved their lives. She would take the place of the "Strathroy." Lt. of Reserves Lubinus would be her new Captain.

The Captain had planned to send this coal to our cruiser squadron later on, when their scene of operations was nearer and definitely known.

According to the story of the Captain of the "Krefeld" the English crews took a great part in the chase of the "Farn." As soon as they saw the smoke clouds of the steamer they reported the fact to the Captain and officers. During the chase they made bets as to the nationality of the steamer. Most of them wanted to bet on the English. When the flag was recognized they yelled in delight. The chase caused as much excitement, and apparently as much pleasure, for the Englishmen as it did for us.

The Captain of the Farn no doubt pulled a long face when he climbed the "Krefeld's" gangway and was met by the sound of his countrymen's voices.

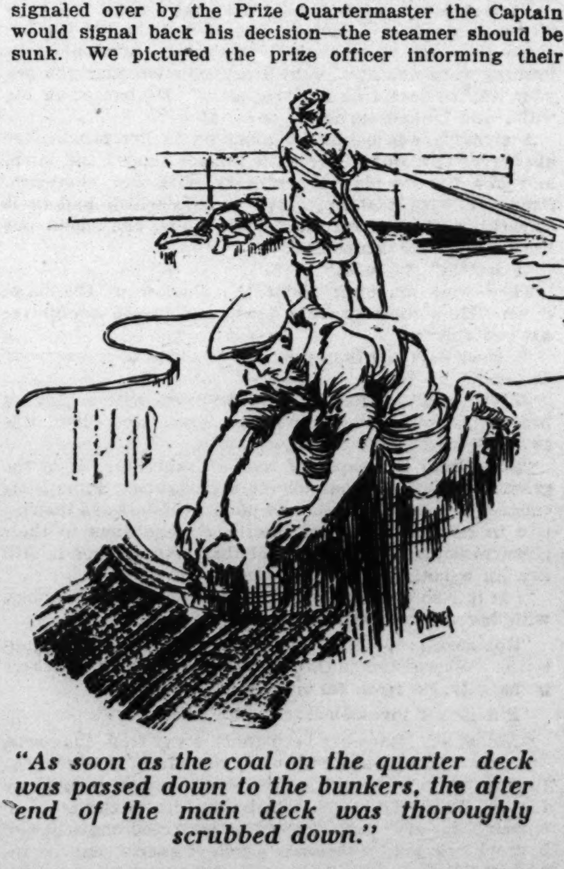
The Captains of the steamers living on the "Krefeld" must have had mixed feelings as they watched the undisturbed operations of the German cruiser. They, of course, knew nothing of our worries, the constant lookout for enemy radio messages and the frequent signs of the approach of enemy warships. I wonder what this Captain of the "Strathroy" thought, he who had witnessed the "KARLSRUHE'S" operations since 1 September.

At the beginning, when approached on the subject, the Englishmen aired their views in words somewhat as follows: "Just you wait! Before long our cruisers will be at your heels and then your little hour will come." Finally, however, they lost these hopes. And when anybody reminded them of their "navy" they would bite their lips and commence to swear.

On this very day an English warship, patrolling between Cape Verde and South America, came in our immediate vicinity. During the night his radio became so "howling" loud that the Captain decided to steam several miles to the eastward. We stopped about 30 miles to the eastward of the usual trade lane.

6 OCTOBER. This time the "Rio Negro" was lucky. About 4 p. m. we received a report from her concerning the English steamer "Niceto de Larrinaga." The prize crew went over. We, who remained aboard the "KARLSRUHE" pictured the usual procedure. Soon after the arrival of the prize officer the steamer crew would be gathered together. After the reports of the prize officer in regard to cargo, nationality, destination, etc., had been signaled over by the Prize Quartermaster the Captain would signal back his decision—the steamer should be sunk. We pictured the prize officer informing their Captain—a biting of the lips and then the usual nod ("All right, sir")—then a word to the gathered crew; all hurriedly disappear below decks. We knew that they were packing their clothes and trinkets and would soon appear once more. The boats would be stowed and made ready for lowering.

Soon the Captain himself would appear, chronometer and other nautical instruments under his arm. He had saved what was really valuable.



"As soon as the coal on the quarter deck was passed down to the bunkers, the after end of the main deck was thoroughly scrubbed down."

The "Niceto de Larrinaga" had a cargo of 8000 tons of oats and corn from Buenos Aires for London. Her crew and provisions went aboard the "Krefeld." She herself took the road of all her predecessors except those we were using as colliers.

The steamer had a radio outfit. Like all the other steamers, she made not the slightest attempt to call English warships to her assistance, and, even though the chase would only last one hour, she must have known that several ships were in the vicinity and these would have known we were a German cruiser from the message.

We noted in her radio logs that she had been warned of us by the "BRISTOL." The cruiser had advised her to steam about 30 miles eastward of the usual steamer tracks. It was her bad luck to follow this advice and run right into our arms, because we had gone that far to the eastward to escape the English cruiser.

The English Captain was very astonished to be captured in spite of his caution. But he was still more astonished when our prize officer told him that we knew his course and had traced him out there. Then, he said, we had probably caught the steamer that left Buenos Aires with him and was traveling the same course. The prize officer increased the captain's sorrow by saying that we were unfortunately delayed in capturing another steamer, whereupon the old man harmlessly remarked that we had better wait until morning; there were three of them leaving Buenos Aires at the same time, and the third one, which was slower than his ship, would surely pass along here.

7 OCTOBER. We did not have to wait long for the expected steamer. About 7 a. m. she came in sight. We steamed ahead slowly to meet her. She anticipated her fate and hoisted the English flag when still a great distance away. At 8 o'clock we stopped the steamer "Lynrowan." The calculation came out correctly. The Captain did not seem to be surprised when the prize officer, this time more truthfully, assured him that we had been waiting for him since yesterday. Soon thereafter he was greeting his colleague on the "Krefeld." They probably were very angry because the third one, or rather the first one, had had more luck and escaped us!

The Captain had his sick wife and a young nurse on board. They were the first feminine guests on the "Krefeld" and were received with a great outburst of enthusiasm.

The "Lynrowan" had a cargo of 500 tons of corn, sugar and tallow in hogsheads and 12 automobiles received at Buenos Aires and bound for Liverpool.

The gunnery officer, Lt. (J. C.) von dem Borne, had begged the Captain to give him this prize as a target for gunnery practice. After the "Krefeld," with her Englishmen, had disappeared over the horizon we made a run at extreme range, using target practice ammunition and then made several runs at close range using reduced charges.

The steamer "Lynrowan" sank about 3 p. m. The cargo hatches burst open when the ship was down deep under the water and all the buoyant contents of the cargo holds, above all several hundred hogsheads of tallow, shot to the surface. The Captain tried to destroy this extensive field of wreckage by making several runs back and forth across it. But the hogsheads persisted in coming back in one bunch. The sharks gathered at once and fought over the lumps of tallow floating out of the splintered casks. The sharks experienced a rare thing, for these regions, in their hunt for game—numerous fat rats were running around on the casks, trying to save themselves from the wreck.

It is not entirely safe to steam over a spot where a ship has recently been sunk. All sorts of wooden articles such as yards, poles and cargo booms, break loose down in the depths and shoot up to the surface with great force. The force that tears them away down below is sufficient to break the heavy shrouds, etc., that held them in place. Even boats often break loose from their lashings and appear on the surface. In order to prevent their playing the role of traitors and later on giving away the sinking of the ship it is advisable to punch holes in them before blowing up the ship. I consider it possible

Make This Test In Your Own Home

The Acousticon will surely make you hear because it has succeeded with over 300,000 delighted patrons of ours who were so troubled.

You do not know this, however, and we are confident enough to want everyone to know before he spends a cent.

Everyone knows that deafness is progressive—and unless the ears are stirred to activity they grow steadily worse; thousands write us the Acousticon enables them to hear perfectly and has permanently improved their hearing.

Therefore we ask that you write us, saying: "I am hard of hearing and will try the Acousticon"—that's all. We will send you, delivery charges paid, the

ACOUSTICON FOR TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL.
No Deposit—No Expense.

All we ask is that you give it a fair trial in your own home and among familiar surroundings. Then there can be no doubt of whether it improves your hearing.

If it does not do so, we want it back without a cent of expense to you for the trial, because we know it is good business policy to have none but satisfied and enthusiastic customers—That's the only kind we now have. Write for your FREE TRIAL today.
